THE GERMANS RENEW ATTACKS AROUND VERDUN

One Hundred Thousand Austrian Troops Are Retreating from Czernowitz

The Russians are Pressing The Pursuit With the Utmost Vigor---A Large Part of The Austrian Forces, in all Probability, Will be Cut off and Surrounded---Bigger Events Expected Very Soon.

ENEMY LOSSES HEAVY

PETROGRAD, June 20.—Nearly one hundred thousand Austrian troops with six hundred guns retreating from the region of Czernowitz, have been entangled in Bukowina by the lightning drive of the Russian left wing.

The Russians are still pressing the pursuit with the utmost vigor. A large part of the Austrian forces in all probability will be cut off and surrounded. The others face the alternative of retreating through the Carpathian passes, abandoning their guns or crossing into Roumania. Gen. Pflanzer, commanding the Austrians around Czernowitz, is retreating southward in the direction of the Zereth Ricer with his beaten forces.

How many Austrians escaped westward in the direction of Kuty planning later to join Bothemyer's army is not yet known. The latest reports indicated that from half to two-thirds of the Austrians facing the Russians when the offensive began, were killed, wounded or made prisoners early in the fighting. The others were so badly disorganized that the Russians pushed forward with the greatest rapidity. The military experts here, though not attempting to minimize the importance of the present Russian operations, advise the public to restrain its enthusiasm for bigger events which are expected very soon.

Carranza Gives Troops Seven Days To Withdraw, Says Border Report

EL PASO, Texas, June 20.—General Carranza, First Chief of the de facto government, has sent an ultimatum to President Wilson that if the American punitive expedition does not withdraw from Mexican soil within seven days a state of war will be declared to exist. This information was received here by State Department officials and American mining corporations. The ultimatum is now en route to Washington by a special messenger, who left Mexico City several days ago, according to the information received in El Paso.

If The British Fleet Should Get Into The Baltic

Petrograd has a rumour that during the Jutland battle a squadron of Britain's latest dreadnoughts and battle cruisers slipped through into the Baltic, and is now at a Russian port. Such a move has been recognized as among the interesting possibilities all along. Whether it is a probability only the naval strategists can say. But if it is true it may have important consequences on the military situation.

As long as Germany held a naval superiority in the Baltic, the German High Seas fleet was free to move in that seas as desired, and to keep Russia's fleet at a distance on the one hand, and any British squadron trying to force the entrance at a distance on the other. But if, as now rumoured, British warships mounting guns without an equal in the German Navy command the naval situation in the Baltic, the German fleet will henceforth be confined to North Sea operations.

The reason is that the entrance to the Kiel Canal has not "wet triangle" such as there is at the North Sea entrance, and therefore, instead of the German fleet being able to emerge and take up battle formation, it would have to come out one by one and be dealt with by an opposing fleet in detail. The German fleet would simply invite annihilation to attempt to come out of the canal under such conditions. Naval writers have declared that it would be entirely possible for the British fleet to enter the Baltic, providing the Kiel Canal were blocked, or the German fleet engaged elsewhere, since the mines in the channel could easily be removed. The main argument against such a course has been the danger of dividing the British fleet, and thereby inviting a combined attack by the German fleet on the remaining North Sea portion of it.

The advantages, however, are immense. Mr. James B. Macdonald, who recently published an article on the subject in one of the American magazines, declared that Russia would gain more from the Allied fleets gaining the upper hand in the Baltic than if they had succeeded in forcing the Dardanelles. Owing to the Germany navy being bottled up in the Kiel Canal from the Baltic end, the whole of Northern Germany would be exposed to bombardment and to the threat of a Russian invasion by sea, and this, he estimates, would necessitate the concentration of at least a million men for its defence.

He adds: "Convoys of munitions could pass through the Baltic to Petrograd and return with grain. The German left wing on their eastern front would be compelled to abandon Courland and fall back within their own border until they found a safe coastal base—probably as far as Konigsberg — with a corresponding straightening out of their whole line. Rather than permit their enemies to gain such an advantage, the German navy will fight to a finish." This was written, of course, before the Jutland battle. It is a question now whether the German navy is prepared to fight to a finish anywhere. There may be a good deal more behind Admiral Jellicoe's satisfaction with the results of the naval battle than we yet know of. —Montreal Herald.

The Germans Returned To Attack at Verdun

Enemy Onslaughts Were Checked by Screen Fire From French Guns — Russian Offensive is Only Beginning Says Gen. Brusiloff.

AIR COMBATS

PARIS, June 20.—The Germans returned to the attack at Verdun last night with three attacks against the French positions on Hill 321, east of the Meuse. The War Office announced to-day that the enemy onslaughts were checked by screen fire from the French machine guns. On the west bank of the Meuse the Germans bombarded French positions around Chattancourt and westward violently.

ONLY BEGINNING.

PETROGRAD, June 20.—Gen. Brusiloff says the Russian offensive is only beginning. Austrian losses in Galicia are 175,000, and the prisoners total 175,000.

Finds Friend's Body On Railway Tracks

GUELPH, June 20.—At 5 o'clock Saturday morning the lifeless body of George Harris was found beside the C.P.R. tracks near the city limits, back of the malleable iron plant by W. M. Langford, with whom Harris boarded.

He had apparently been struck by the freight train that leaves here for Hamilton shortly after 3 o'clock in the morning. Both legs were broken, and he was hurt about the head. He had been employed as a steamfitter at the Dominion Linens, Limited. An inquest wil be held.

Ques.: "What does your pay-roll amount to?"

Ans.: "Oh, say $10,000 a month."

Ques.: "Quite a wad. Of course you insure it?"

Ans.: "Insure it? What's the idea Frank?"

Ques.: "Well—you see, you're paying out $120,000 a year. Now you insure your building, equipment, stock, etc., why not insure your pay-roll, against loss—to you."

Ans.: "Ask me something easy. What's the point and what's the cost?"

Ques.: "The point is that your pay-roll represents your purchase of the greatest of all raw materials—WORKING TIME. Its subject to loss every day—four times a day—or every time your employees come in and go out of your plant."

Ans.: "Yes, but I employ a time-keeper."

Ques.: "Of course you do But he's human. Who checks your time-keeper? And who checks the man who checks him? You need a cold-blooded machine for that job—so there will be no favorites or no mistakes."

Ans.: "There isn't any such machine."

Ques.: "Isn't there? Probably your keenest competitor to-day is using it and is just that much ahead of you. And it will cost you perhaps $8 a month to use it. I mean the International Time Recorder. It's the cheapest and best pay-roll insurance you can buy. Gives you printed, unchangeable, records, made under lock and key, that becomes your weekly pay-sheets. OATHS OF YESTERYEAR.

Gone Forever Are the Days When Swearing Was An Art.

Most of our own commonplace exclamations might be traced back to an earlier day when the vigor of their youth was still within them, says Burgess Johnson in the Century Magazine.

Imagine two old Romans standing upon the deck of a ship gazing upon the eruption of Vesuvius. They watch in awe-struck silence until one of them gasps, "I swear by Father Jove that never before have I beheld such wonders!" And the other echoes, "Oh Gemini, Heavenly Twins, gaze down into my heart, for I have no words to paint the glory of the spectacle!"

Centuries later the inheritors of some of their classic speech gaze upon Vesuvius, and one says, "Jove! what a sight!" and the other echoes, "Jiminy! aint't it grand!"

Gone are the echoing oaths of a day when swearing was an art. Those swashbuckling phrases went with swashbuckling deeds. "By the bone of Saint Michael! I will split thee to thy cringing gizzard!" There was a mouth filling and classic threat for you. In these days, when automatic revolvers have replaced fancing swords, there isn't time to say it.

A sound discretion is not so much indicated by never making a mistake as by never repeating it.—Colton.

ALLIES' ADVERTISING OF THEIR PLAN INDICATES STRENGTH OF ENTENTE

Statements Are to be Followed it is Expected by the Carrying Out of Their Intentions--Would Indicate That the Allies are Mathematically Certain of Victory.

Why is it announced by British cabinet ministers that the allies are shortly to begin a general offensive against the Germans in the western theatre of the war, when the allied military authorities are wont to preserve are utmost secrecy os to their intentions? This question has been asked more than once by close and intelligent observers of the war. Only the other day such an announcement was made as the foregoing.

The answer to this question can only be based on hypathesis. It cannot be believed that the allied military authorities would permit such assertions to be made by responsible persons if these assertions would be of much value to the enemy. One reason for permitting such announcements readily presents itself to the mind. Supposing that the enemy were powerless to take proper measures to defeat this offensive, it would assist the allies in advertising its nearness to impress German public opinion with their might.

Would Affect Germany.

A direct statement of intentions and the carrying out of such intentions as announced would serve greatly to increase the despair of the German people that would follow a defeat. Up to the present the Germans have been puffed up with their military greatness. In order to keep the German public in a proper frame of mind to enable them to prosecute the war with the utmost vigor, their high command has consistently hid their reverses, and their failure to obtain real successes, and has now been reduced to the absurdity of publicly advertising through Von Bethmann-Hollwegg that the Germans have already won the war, and that peace is desirable to stop useless bloodshed. No less a personage than President Wilson of the United States was impressed with this doctrine, and he recently made a speech in which he expressed his belief that this was was a deadlock.

May Be Perfectly Sure.

Now the statement of the intentions of the western allies to be followed, it is presumed, by the carrying out of their intentions presupposed the fact that they are mathematically certain of victory. What would give them that certainty? Exact calculations of the remaining strength of the enemy and of their own strength would give them that certainty.

The power of the enemy mainly depends upon two things: (1) men, and (2) munitions.

Germans Grow Fewer.

As to men the calculation of every scientific student of the war in Europe at the end of last year, and the beginning of this year was that the permanent losses of the Germans were 4,000,000 men up to January 1, last. The variation from these figures was a quarter of a million more or less. But the statisticians attached to the allied general staffs have even more exact calculations than these, based on German casualty lists, prisoners taken, dead buried, captured documents, etc. The outside experts also figured that with 4,000,000 losses Germany had only 700,000 medically fit left for her reserve. That was before the battle of Verdun began.

Verdun Losses Cripple Foe.

France has just officially announced that in the battle of Verdun the Germans brought up in all 39 divisions or 780,000 men, and that the bulk of these divisions was destroyed. So depleted were the German reserves, that after sending troops to aid Turkey, the Germans had to call on Austria for men, and to bring at least one division from the Balkans. These developments would of course imply that the reserves of Germany had been practically destroyed, and that henceforth she would have to fight with diminishing number if she has not already begun to do so.

To Apply Knowledge.

Apply this knowledge to the situation in the west and see what you find.

In regard to this western affair it is best judged as a continuous battle with more or less violent local battles as at Verdun. These intense combats may be regarded as battles within the general battle, or violent struggles for the seizure of strategic points. For example, to quote a classic: At Waterloo, the struggle resolved itself, among others, into a fight to capture the outposts of La Haye Sainte and Hougoumont, as well as to seize the main haghway to Brussels which ran through Welington's centre. After this struggle had gone forward until a certain time, Napoleon threw into it his last reserves, the Old Guards, and they were hurled back by Maitland's Guards. Wellington's quick eye at once discerned that the crisis of the battle was past, and without waiting for Blucher and his Prussians to come up, and while they were still three miles away, he ordered the British army to make a general advance. Napoleon himself said that this advance won the victory. The Prussians came up in time to give most effective pursuit.

Analogy Seen.

When this analogy is applied to the present case, it will be seen that this gigantic battle of Northern France has been raging with more or less intensity for a period of 18 months. Germany, according to theory, has used up practically all of her reserves, and the time is coming for the allies to prove that their calculations have been exact by the ordering of a general advance. As Germany cannot bring the dead to life, nor use cripples in battle, on this theory, she cannot avoid defeat, for this battle will run its normal course like all big battles, and it will be decided at the psychological moment by the side throwing in the last reserves.

As to muntions, although the central powers posses large means of producing, their shell output is limited by certain factors, such as the production of nitro-glycerine. The supply of nitro-glycerine depends upon the German supply of fats, and that supply is limited. Therefore, it can be said with definiteness by allied experts that the German production of shell cannot exceed 500,000 a day. Having that knowledge, the allies know what shell production is required to beat it in an offensive.

The two foregoing are probably the chief factors which lead the allies openly to state their intentions of advancing in the west in the near future; that is, the battle is nearing its crisis owing to the exhaustion of the reserves of the enemy, and the limitations to his munitions production, large as it seems to the outsider.

The Russians are going on with the development of their campaign to drive the enemy from their territory and to conquer him in conjunction wth the British, French, and Italians in the west. Upon Austria-Hungary the heaviest immediate blows are destined to fall from the east, while the dealing with Germany to be appears left to Britain and France. Their task will either be to hold the enemy in the west while his ally is being gradually crushed in the east, or to launch a big offensive at an opportune juncture to drive the Germans out of French and Belgian territory, and to hurl them reeling back towards the Rhine.

In London and Paris rumours are rife of the coming offensive by the allies in the near future, but whether there is anything certain about the imminence of this offensive depends upon the conduct of Germany. It is now seen that the German high command, as remarked in these columns a week ago, has committed a serious strategic blunder. The plans of the allies were not for an early spring offensive in the west, and the Germans did not expect them to launch one. They believed that the allies would be still committed to a defensive policy for some time to come.

Defensive Advisable.

The defensive policy is advisable for the belligerent whose power is on the increase and has not reached its maximum. The offensive policy is imposed on the belligerent who is better prepared than his opponent, and who is faced with the prospect of his opponent's power increasing, thereby adding to his difficulties and dangers. If the power of his opponent within a certain period of time will become greater than his own power, the better for him, therefore, is it to strike quickly and secure a decision. Defensive warfare is either to hold a line of trenches, without advancing, as the allies did in the west last year, and so far this year, or to retreat and avoid a general engagement, as the Russians did last year. By retreating in a masterly manner the Russians saved the organization of their army and in a few months they were able to put a first-class fighting force into the field.

The only thing doubtful about Russia up to two weeks ago was whether she had already secured the munitions and the guns to conduct a great offensive as she has undertaken.

Empley Medium Guns.

But the enormous artillery fire which she was able to launch against the fortified front of the Austrians, constructed with all the science of the German engineer, was sufficient in a few hours to sweep everything away. The guns she employed in this bombardment were probably of medium calibre, quick-firers of 6-inch calibre or thereabout. Heavier howitzers up to 20 inches will be required to demolish the big German and Austrian fortresses.

In this artillery game the Allies seem also to have outmanoeuvred and outwitted the Germans and Austrians who have been over-fond of guns of 12- to 16-inch calibre. By the excited munitions campaign, and the announcements that big 20-inch howitzers were being experimented with to demolish German field fortifications, the Germans were confirmed in their predilection for big guns. The German is always working with an eye to effect, and big guns are valuable for frightfulness. But the difficulty with big guns is the provisions of a sufficient head of shell for them. Shells weighing a ton or more are much more difficult and slower to manufacture than shells weighing 100 pounds, such as the 6-inch guns throw. The 4.7-inch pieces throw a 4-pound shell.

In the case of an immense battering ram, such as the Germans arrange for an offensive, they may bring to bear 3,000 guns on a comparatively limited space, but the heavy shells required make them limited in effectiveness, so that after the first 3,000,000 is shot away, the enemy is deprived of the strong support of those heavy weapons and he has to wait for a new head of shells. Thus at Verdun his supply of heavy shell probably ran short after the first four days of his offensive.

GERMANS CAME TO WEST.

The reason the Germans came to the west for their offensive at Verdun was probably because the Allies attacked them last September, and also because they believed that the West was the only place where they could obtain a decision. After their experience in the early invasion of France, when they were driven back from the Marne, the German high command reasoned somewhat in this manner. "Our strategy was not at fault; our soldiers had splendid fighting qualities, indeed of the best, but the reason that we could not obtain a decision is that modern armies are too large to be destroyed by battle. This view is confirmed by our experiences in Russia last spring, summer and autumn. The Russian armies were too large. They could not be destroyed. So in order to impose peace the best plan is to occupy the capital of the enemy and to break the national spirit of resistance by frightfulness.

SOUGHT VICTORY IN WEST.

To carry out this plan, it was necessary for them to seek a decision on the western front, because Paris was the capital of the allies nearest the battle front. A successful blow struck, say, at Verdun, might, if followed up with vigor, result in the driving of the French armies beyond Paris. Then Germany could proceed to break the spirit of France by increased frightfulness. After France has been reduced she could turn on Russia and force her to make peace. Then would come the turn of the British Empire. Such was the reasoning of the Germans, and such a military policy led to the attack upon Verdun with the result that every person knows.

RUSSIANS GET CHANCE.

The drawing of so many men westward gave the Russians who were preparing for their offensive with the utmost secrecy, opportunity to decimate the Austrian line, and they have taken Austrians prisoner at the rate of about 14,000 a day on an average. They have captured the line of the Stripa and the Styr, and they have begun an outflanking movement in the north and the south of the long battle line between the southern limits of the Pripet marshes and the frontier of Roumania.

Their policy is to attempt to cut off the Austrian army established in Bukowina, and to drive a wedge in between the point of junction of the Austrian and German armies in Volhynia. The means taken to this end are the pushing forward rapidly on Kovel junction, and the carrying out of a circling movement on Lemberg.

BOTH GO TOGETHER.

But the fate of eastern Poland and Galicia is bound in one. Both are parts of the plain which shelves northward from the Carpathians to the Baltic. By advancing on Kovel and on Warsaw the Russians have good hopes of cutting off a considerable German army in Poland, or at least of driving it to the line of the Vistula. The army of Von Hindenburg in Courland appears to be independent of the operations in the south. So the public will eagerly follow the coming campaign.

RUSSIAN POWER PROVED.

Of the achievements of our ally in the east, the chief fact that looms up before the student of the war is that the Russians developed sufficient strength to attack a strongly fortified front of 250 to 275 miles, and manned by over half a million men, and to fight a battle and put the Austrian armies and their German supports in full flight in less than a week, for the bulk of the fighting and the finishing off touches appear to have been administered to the enemy Saturday last.

NOW IS THE TIME IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

In reply to an injury by The Fourth Estate, a prominent Canadian newspaper publisher said: "While it is yet a little more than a guess, the crop values of Canada in 1916 will equal those of 1915, viz., $750,000,000.

To a representative of The Fourth Estate, who spent last week in Canada this seems to be a very conservative estimate. Based on the opinions of leading business men, advertisers and publishers, a more likely figure seems to be at least $1,000,000,000.

And that the crops represent only one item of Canada's prosperity, a brief visit to that country will suffice to convince the most pessimistic persons.

Canada is not the dead place that many have pictured it to be as a result of its close relation to the European war.

Instead, to-day there is no field in the world that advertisers will find more fertile for cultivation than Canada. Residents of the Dominion have plenty of money and are in a mood to buy the best goods offered to them.

Anybody Know?

Who can compute the debt of civilization to the obscure men and women who, in their efforts to make the world a little brighter, a little better place to live in, have been too busy to make money or to achieve fame.—Hannibal (Mo.) Courier-Post.

HAD WEAK HEART
HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box. 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Ontario Government to Provide Hospital at Cobourg.

The Ontario Government plans to establish an hospital at Cobourg for the treatment of mental and shock cases among returned soldiers. This was the decision arrived at as the result of a conference between the Dominion Hospitals Commission and members of the Ontario Government. The Provincial Secretary's Department expects that by the first week in July the Cobourg hospital will be ready to accommodate fifty-five patients, the ultimate accommodation being for 5000 patients.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Close Call

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

During the administration of President Huerta of Mexico I was employed by the United States government to do certain service for the state department. I went by land, crossing the Rio Grande at Laredo and entering Coahuila. I soon fell in with a prominent leader of the rebel forces, who, after I had satisfied him that my mission was not detrimental to his interests, expressed a willingness that I should go to my destination, the City of Mexico.

"I would gladly earn money if I can do so without compromising my employers at Washington."

"What I have in mind would not interfere with that at all. I desire to get a message through to a certain person in the City of Mexico. As a messenger of the United States you would not be suspected. Your government has not taken sides in this matter, and there is nothing to prevent your being the bearer of a letter from me to a friend."

"But supposing I am caught with such a letter on my person?" I asked.

"In that case you would be shot."

"And what would I receive for taking this risk?"

He named a sum that tempted me. It seemed to me that, being in the employ of the United States government, there would be little or no risk in my bearing the general's message. I needed the sum he offered for a certain purpose and concluded to stake being shot against it.

He wrote his message on a bit of thin paper about three inches square. I was to take it to a man high in favor with President Huerta. His name and address were given me, but were not written on the message, though it was signed by a fictitious name. I decided to carry it in the upper vest pocket on the left side, my object being to have it where I could easily get it to destroy it in case I was cornered. The general paid me the money for the service I was about to render, for I was to receive it whether I succeeded in delivering the message or not.

Going southward on the general's pass I struck the Federal lines not far from the City of Mexico. I informed the commanding officer of my mission and was received by him with the courtesy due one in the United States service. Indeed, being stationed at a point where he saw no one except his officers and men he seemed pleased to see me, and since I reached his quarters in the evening he insisted on entertaining me overnight.

He proved to be an inveterate gambler, and nothing would do but that I must play cards with him. I dared not antagonize him by refusing and after the evening meal sat down with him in his tent to play. He soon won all the cash I had provided for my journey, and I proposed to quit. He seemed inclined to play on, and I feared to refuse him. I had the money the general had given me, a roll of bills, in my pocket and was obliged to produce it.

My opponent looked at this large quantity of Mexican money with interest. He said nothing about it, but from that moment he began to talk about the difficulty of my getting on in the morning and expressed the opinion that I would be delayed. His prophecy came true, for he gave orders that no conveyance was to be furnished me.

The next morning I asked my entertainer to cash a draft on the American consul at the capital. He promised to do so, but made no move to produce the funds. His actions were so suspicious that I began to think I had better seize upon any opportunity to destroy the general's message. But I was given no opportunity. My host never left me for a moment unless there was some one else in the room. All the while he was telling me that he was endeavoring to secure conveyance for me, that he expected a team very soon, and when it came he would furnish me with money for the journey.

About 10 o'clock in the morning I saw a sergeant posting a guard about the house. My heart stood still. I was suspected, would be searched, and the message would be found on me. That meant death. The officer was looking over some military papers at a table, with an unlighted cigarette between his lips. Taking a cigar from my pocket, and with a show of coolness I did not feel, I deliberately cut off the end with my penknife and asked him if he had a match. He produced one, struck it and was about to light his cigarette when, remembering politeness, he extended the match to me.

"After you," I said.

He touched it to the end of his cigarette and handed it to me. I put the flame to the end of my cigar, but purposely failed to close my lips tight in order to prevent suction. When the match had burned near my fingers I took the paper from my vest pocket, put one end to the flame and lit my cigar with it, taking sufficient time for it to be entirely consumed.

I saw the officer look up at me quickly, but he said nothing. Dropping the ash of the paper on the floor, I put my foot on it, rubbing it with the sole of my shoe so that it could not betray me.

I think he saw by my expression that I experienced a great relief and had made myself safe, for he permitted me to depart without further delay.

Pale Cheeked Women Told About Restoring A Rosy Complexion

A few years ago the girl with pale, drawn cheeks scarcely knew what to do in order to restore her fading appearance. At that time there was no blood-food medium made that really would put color and strength into systems that were more or less worn out.

To-day it's different. The blood can be quickly nourished, can be made rich, red, and healthy. All you have to do is take two Ferrozone Tablets with a sip or two of water after meals. The effect is almost magical.

Mothers, look at your children. Are they ruddy and strong—do they eat and sleep well, or are they pale, weak, and anaemic?

FERROZONE will rebuild them. Take your own case—is your blood strong and rich? Have you that old-time strength and vigor, or are you somewhat under the weather?

FERROZONE will supply the strengthening elements you require. It is a blood-forming, nourishing tonic that makes every ailing person well.

FERROZONE is a marvellous remedy, it contains in concentrated form certain rare qualities that especially fit it in cases of anaemic, poor color, thin blood, tiredness, and loss of weight.

Every day you put off using FERROZONE you lose ground. Get it today, sold in 50 cent boxes by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

GAMES MAKE SOLDIERS

Professors Now Agree That More Gymnastics Are Not Enough

Football and other manly sports involving the element of combat and emotional excitement should be encouraged as preparation for war, Dr. Jesse F. Williams, of Columbia University, declared in a speech before the Physical Education Association. Dr. Williams said immemorial racial human forms of physical education, such as running, jumping, leaping and combat are indispensable in preparedness. He continued: "From the standpoint of biology and ethnology, man, as Dr. Crile has said, has a 'kinetic' equipment for war, developed by the innumerable centuries during which he had to fight for his own life and the life of his mate and children. Now as civilization has more and more deprived man of the need to fight he has devoted more time and attention to the games which are substitutes for war in that they involve a vigorous struggle and in their sublimation offer an opportunity for the formation of habits and ideals of a kind which may effectively fight for personal and social ideals.

"It is important also to remember that these games approaching war, involving a large element of personal danger appeal most strongly to normal human instincts. There are those who see in football, even as those who see in war, only horrors and debasements. Such individuals are unable to see any values in the sacrifice of material interests for the sake of high ideals, of personal and individual elements for the good of the group. Now games and athletic contests will give the essential virtues which may be achieved by war. Dr. Cannon of the Department of Physiology of Harvard University has shown from the standpoint of internal secretions and the emotions why games and athletics serve the body in the preservation of the warlike virtues. This scientific work on the physiological side shows how insufficient gymnastic drill is, because of its lack of the necessary emotional re-enforcement."

FRENCH-CANADIAN FACES OSTRACISM

Should Honor Young Jean Baptiste Who Braves Criticism of Own People to Enlist

Whatever opinions one may entertain concerning those members of the French-Canadian population who actively discourage the participation of their fellows in Canada's war, and the apathy, the restricted interests and the local prejudices of a large proportion of the French-speaking population, which give the preachers of disaffection their hold and their opportunity, it is important, says the Canadian Tatler, that Canadians should award full measure of credit and honor to those French-Canadians (and there are many thousands of them) who heard the call of humanity and are fighting or preparing to fight themselves or sending their best and dearest to do so.

In a very real sense the French-Canadian volunteer for this war is entitled to a larger measure of credit than the English-Canadian or the British-born. It requires a distinctly stronger effort of the imagination for the French-Canadian—trained to focus his attention almost exclusively on the affairs of the northern half of North America, and to regard with suspicion any close relation with any European nation, even with his ancestral France—to perceive the bearing of this struggle upon his own interests and his own ideals. The people of the United States have not as yet perceived it at all; and the French-Canadians are almost if not quite as "American" in their outlook as the Minnesotans and the Ohioans.

Called a Traitor

Still more important than this is the social pressure, hostile to participation in this war, which must be faced by every French-Canadian who offers himself or encourages and defends the enlistment of his fellows. Abstention from the war has been elevated into the status of a national duty by a number of the most vociferous leaders of French-Canadian opinion; and the man who goes to the front will have to face the rebukes of many of his friends, the charge (sincerely made, no doubt, in most cases, absurd though it is in fact) that he is deserting the cause of his suffering brethren in Ontario, that he is fighting for "English tyranny," and that Orangemen and bigots will march over his dead body to the suppression of his tongue, his institutions, his religion and all that he holds dear.

Takes High Courage

The vision of a French-Canadian must be far-ranged, his faith clear, his sense of duty stern, to enable him to overcome these obstacles and range himself alongside of those whose duty is more obvious, whose social environment is all in favor of their participation. All honor, therefore, to those men whose ancient French names adorn the rolls of so many of our battalions, and whose achievements in the field of battle will be told at the firesides of Quebec and Manitoba and Ontario when the very names of those who now bellow forth the shibboleths of a narrow Nationalism are forgotten or accursed.

FOOD OF SOLDIERS

The Favorite Dishes of the Various Allied Soldiers

One of the greatest problems which confront the military leaders of the different countries is to supply the soldiers with adequate, satisfying food. Napoleon spoke truly when he said that armies fight on their bellies. The British commissariat has had many problems to solve. Men well fed at home have to be well fed at the front. The English soldier must have his jam and marmalade as well as beef.

The Russian soldier presents an easier problem. All he asks is plenty of "stchee," a sort of gruel or thick soup made of pork, oatmeal, potatoes and cabbage, boiled together with salt and other seasoning. The French soldier also consumes vast quantities of what he calls "soup," although in reality it is a thick and nourishing stew, made of meat, potatoes, and various other vegetables.

Italian soldiers demand their regular supply of macaroni and spaghetti, and eat little meat. Their diet consists largely of farinaceous foods, fruits and wine, the latter being issued as part of their regular rations. The German soldiers get their meat rations largely in the form of sausage. Give a Teuton plenty of sausage with beer to wash it down and he is perfectly content.

The British fighters from India demand a menu entirely different from that of the Tommies, and the Turcos of the French army are also peculiar in their tastes. The food most favored by the colored Algerian soldiery is "cous-cous," or boiled semolina made of the large hard grains retained in the bolting machine after the fine flour has passed through it. The semolina is served either plain, or with the addition of vegetables, sometimes with a little mutton or goat flesh added. On this regimen a Turco will march farther and carry a heavier load with less fatigue than any other soldier of any nation.

QUICK THINKING WON RUSS. GIRL A MEDAL

Violent Young Officer and Whole Detachment Took Sleeping Potion in Wine and Then Were Bound

Among a party of Letts who succeeded in escaping from a village in Courland, occupied by the Germans, is a girl of seventeen who has been rewarded for a great deed of bravery with the St. George's Cross. A small German detachment marched on to the farm owned by this girl's father. Sentries were left outside to keep watch on a hill quite close, while the rest entered the house and prepared to have a good time. The young German lieutenant turned to the girl, with the order to get wine at any cost, as their supply had run short. She was told that unless she fulfilled the order the house would be set on fire and she herself subjected to violence.

On Came Drowsiness

There were two barrels of heavy old liqueur, made of spirit and berries, in the cellar, and a bright idea struck the girl. Before giving them the cordial she dropped into it some powder, made of bluebells, which brings on heavy drowsiness. The first barrel was soon emptied, and the demand came for more. The second barrel contained a double portion of the powder, and the Germans soon began to roll on to the floor, one after another.

Seeing her enemies helpless round the barrel, she filled a bowl of liqueur, took it out to the sentries, who stood freezing in the cold, and gave it to them to drink, incidentally mentioning that she was fulfilling the officer's orders. The bowl was soon emptied. She then returned to the house and carefully disarmed the soldiers, who, sunk in heavy slumber, lay about in different attitudes, and hid their weapons deep in the cellar. Meantime her father was fastening with ropes the limbs of the insensible Germans. Having accomplished her task with the prisoners, the girl proceeded to find her way out to the Russian positions. Following forest paths and making her way through swamps, she finally reached a Siberian outpost.

Twenty-one Bagged

"I have disarmed and tied up twenty German soldiers and one officer; hasten, and take them prisoners," were the excited words which the girl addressed to the head officer of the Siberian Rifles. The soldiers were amazed at the audacity of the young Lett, and could hardly believe her story. However, she persuaded them to follow her, and when they reached the farm they found the Germans still fast locked in their drunken sleep. Several pails of ice-cold water flung in the faces of the sleepers soon roused them to the grim realities of their situations.

The brave girl was brought to the presence of the Russian commanding general, who shook hands with her, thanked her for her heroic deed, and promised to make a report on it to the higher military authorities. This was done, and as a reward for her services she received the much-coveted decoration which signifies valor in the Russian army.

Testimonial to Belgium

A proposal has been made by wealthy men of several European nations to build in Belgium at the close of the war a garden city as a testimonial of the world to the valor of that nation, and as some contribution toward replacing the places destroyed during the conflict.

Mayonnaise Ready For Heavy Salads

Dressing That is Always Appropriate For Meat and Fish Dishes

SOME SUGGESTIONS AND RULES TO GOVERN HOUSEKEEPER IN PREPARING FOR SUPPER.

For every meat salad and many fish salads, in fact for every heavy salad, mayonnaise dressing is very appropriate. Few people know that there is more than one kind of mayonnaise, however; and even with the sort most frequently made one must cope with the difficulty of curdling. This is usually very simply overcome. In the first place, the eggs must be fresh, and in the second place, the oil must be at about the temperature of the room in which it is served. Thirdly, the oil must not be added too rapidly at the start. Never use congealed oil; even too cold an oil is apt to produce curdling. Again, one must guard against an excess of oil in proportion to the number of yolks of eggs. The right proportion is two and a half ounces of oil to each egg. One may use three ounces of oil if the dressing is served immediately.

Very often mayonnaise that has separated may be brought to the right consistency by adding it in spoonfuls to a beaten egg yolk, having the yolk both fresh and freshly beaten, and beating the mixture after each additional spoonful.

For the ordinary mayonnaise dressing in sufficient quantity to serve 12 persons, allow three egg yolks, one teaspoonful of salt, a third of a teaspoon of paprika, three tablespoons of lemon juice, one and a half cups of oil, and one tablespoonful of boiling water. Beat the egg yolks until thick, add the salt and pepper and beat the lemon juice in with the egg beater. Add the oil gradually, beating hard immediately. The boiling water is also added gradually to prevent separation.

In any mayonnaise never add onion juice when the dressing is to be used for fruit salad; if vinegar is replaced by lemon juice a whiter dressing is obtained.

For Russian mayonnaise use a seasoning of mustard and tarragon vinegar. To one pint of the dressing, add a quarter cup of peppers chopped small, one pound of chopped capers, one half cup of chili sauce, and half a tablespoon of finely chopped chives.

To turn the Russian dressing into a French mayonnaise, add to one pint of a dressing that has been heavily seasoned with paprika, mustard and tarragon vinegar, half a cup of chopped green and red peppers and a quarter of a cup of olives chopped with some pickles, a little minced parsley, one tablespoonful of chives chopped fine, and a teaspoon of horse radish.

For those who prefer a delicate mayonnoise, one may be made by adding to a pint of the finished dressing, just before using the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, or a half cup of heavy cream, beaten stiff, and a quarter teaspoon of salt.

For jellying mayonnaise, allow four teaspoons of gelatine, softened in a tiny amount of cold water and dissolved in four tablespoons of boiling water, to every two cups of the mayonnaise.

Dr. Macleod's Eloquence. — The death of Dr. Donald Macleod recalls the eloquence inherent in that family. Dr. Norman Macleod told a story of meeting in Iona an old man who had known and heard his grandfather, the minister of Morven. The old man declared: 'I have heard your father, and I have heard you but I have heard your grandfather preaching from a rock and throwing out more eloquence than you both together."

TO TRIFLE WITH CATARRH IS TO RISK CONSUMPTION

Usually it comes with a cold. Being slight it is neglected—but the seed is sown for a dangerous harvest, perhaps consumption. To cure at once, inhale Catarrhozone. It destroys the germs of catarrh, clears away mucous, cleanses the passage of the nose and throats. The hacking cough and sneezing cold soon disappear, and health is yours again. Nothing known for colds, catarrh and throat trouble, that is so curative as Catarrhozone. It cures by a new method that never yet failed. The one dollar outfit includes the inhaler and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

Save on Soap

It's a waste of good money to buy 5 cent cakes of soap, when a 15 cent bar of N.P. contains more soap—and far better soap—than 4 or 5 of the 5¢ cakes.

TURKS MASSACRE HAPLESS PEOPLE

BUCHAREST, June 13.—Since the entry of the Russian troops into Trebizond it has become impossible to lift the veil of mystery that has hitherto shrouded the fate of the Armenian population in that once prosperous port. The Russians on their arrival found all the Armenian houses plundered and for the most part in ruins. Doors, windows, shutters and all woodwork had been carried away. There was no opposition to the plundering on the part of the Turkish authorities.

The deportation of the Armenians, which began in June, was carried out there as elsewhere in accordance with instructions from Constantinople The leading families of the city were the first to suffer. Some three hundred of these received the order to prepare for emigration and purchased a number of wagons for the transport of their property, but four days after their departure all the wagons were bought back to the town. The emigrants had been massacred and their property confiscated.

Other groups, each of several hundred families, followed. This process went on for some time, but eventually new methods were adopted. The police entered the houses of the remaining Armenians, forcibly expelled them, drove them through the streets, and locked up the houses. The whole Armenian population of Trebizond, numbering some ten thousand souls, was thus exterminated. It is hoped, however, that some hundreds of persons may yet be found hidden in the neighbourhood.

At Erzerum, where the Armenian population was considerably greater, being estimated at 35,000, practically the same programme was carried out. The proceedings, which began in the middle of May, were inaugurated by the arrest and imprisonment of 400 young Armenians.

Many families, after being expelled from their houses, were kept waiting for several days in the streets before being taken to their fate. At the entrance of the town the procession of exiles encountered tax gatherers, who insisted on the payment of arrears of taxation, although the unfortunate people had left all their property behind them. Only a few artisans, who were required to remain in the town. By the beginning of August the whole Armenian population had disappeared from Erzerum. Only the Bishop remained. On August 5 two police officers appeared at his house and communicated the order of departure. The Bishop had taken precautions to obtain some horses for the transport of his effects but these had been stolen. He tried to purchase others, but at the last moment he was informed that he was not allowed to take anything with him. He was then removed to an unknown destination.

German officer stationed in the town and the German Consul, it is said manifested open approval of these proceedings. Among the spoils which fell to the Turks were several Armenian girls.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

POOL TO LAST FIFTY YEARS

SOME OF THE DETAILS OF THE GERMAN DYE MAKERS' COMBINATION.

The combination of German dyemakers for the purpose of facilitating the fight for the reconquest of the markets of the world after the war, the formation of which was announced in a brief cable dispatch from Berlin on May 4, is to last for at least fifty years, according to details of the plan published in the German press and reprinted in London newspapers.

Before this arrangement was made there were two main groups in the German aniline dye industry — the Baden Analine and Soda Company, the Bayer Compay, and the Berlin Manufacturing Company constituting one group, and the works at Hoechst, Cassella and Co. and Kalle and Co. forming the other group. These six concerns have now been joined by the Weilerter Mer Company, and the seven concerns, which have a capital of more than $55,000,000, have formed a new 'community of interests.'' It is asserted that the companies will retain their independence but that in future all products will be manufactured by at least two of them simultaneously.

The combination is admittedly intended to meet foreign, especially British and American, competition. Apparently inspired communications to the press say that the German aniline dye companies not only have very large foreign interests at stake, but regard the prospects after the war as very uncertain, "especially in view of the foreign competition that is threatened, of the difficulties in resuming foreign relations and of the possible difficulties in obtaining raw materials." Reference is made especially to the British efforts to obtain independence by means of Government support and of tariff and patent laws.

Meanwhile all the German companies report large increases in their profits, and have increased their dividends, while putting larger sums than usual into their reserves.

At about the same time that the news of the dye combination was given out came a report of the formation of a "War Committee" of German shipowners. The new organization is intended to embrace all German shipping interests. It is to discuss the resumption of sea trade after the conclusion of peace, and all plans for German economic development in which shipping interests are directly or indirectly concerned. The "War Committee" consists of twelve members elected by the large shipping companies. The President is Dr. Greve of the North German Lloyd, and Albert Ballin of the Hamburg-American line, is one of the members.

Heart's Action Was Weak And Circulation Poor

The heart is a wonderful worker, plodding away year in and year out, forever pumping the blood through the body. So long as the blood is rich and nourishing it renews its own waste and keeps up a vigorous circulation of the blood through the arteries and veins of the human system.

But when the blood gets thin the nerves are starved, motive power is lacking, the heart's action weakens and the circulation is slow. The hands and feet feel cold, there are cramps and pains in the legs and through the body, digestion fails, you become nervous and irritable and do not rest or sleep well.

This letter will give you some idea how admirably Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is suited to overcome derangements of this nature. It is, above all, a creator of new, rich blood, and with the blood in good condition the nerves are soon restored and bodily organs resume their natural functions.

Mrs. E. A. Hutchings, "Prairie View," Elva, Man., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my husband had tried almost every remedy recommended as a tonic. He suffering with cold feet, poor circulation of the blood, and was always tired. He had pains in his feet and legs, and could get no rest or sleep at night. After the first box of the Nerve Food we could see an improvement, and now after using it for six months, he is an entirely different man. He eats and sleeps well and has no pains in his feet and legs. It has built up his health wonderfully, and we can recommend it as a splendid nerve tonic."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This will give rise to no little surprise, for the infection of sport clothes is spreading. That means better health and better looks and happiness always follow that leader.

A dress that is up to the minute in fashion detail. At a glance we notice the striking combination effect; the blouse is made of plain material and well "set-off" with collar and cuffs and the pocket "trim" in the striped goods. A tie makes the garment more "sporty." The four gored skirt is in all striped material and has the necessary ripple to its fall to win approbation. Use your own judgment about accepting the peplum that is offered. The pattern may be had in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. To make like the illustration in size 36 will require 3 yards of 36 inch striped goods and 2¼ yards of 44 inch plain goods.

You may obtain the pattern by sending cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age if a child

Les Voyageurs

The following verses were written by Mr. T. G Stratton, who was during the past winter a resident of Peterborough, and whose Harry Lauder imitations made him a well-known figure while here:

Jus' when de spring she's comin'
An' leetle bird is gay,
An' winter storm, an' ice an' snow
Have no excuse for stay.
Jus' when de river open
An' all de world she's green,
Dat's when I'll meet dat "drummer" man
Since long tam I've not seen.

She's pass on train from Arnprior town
An' come on ole Renfrew
For sell Pedlow some leetle ting
Lak string for tie on shoe.
"Bon jour, Monsieur," she'll say to me.
"Bon jour, comment-ca-va?"
"Tres bien," I'll say, "Mon cher ami,
I'm glad for shake your paw."

"An' what you tink 'bout make dat trip
In my ole green canoe?
She's mebbe not so ver' beeg ship,
But I tink me she will do.
De ole Bonnechere she's very high,
An' Ottawa also,
New's Rapids make you cock de eye
An' look which way you go.

But never min'—dat green canoe,
She never was afraid
For make "le voyage" on de lake
Or ride through beeg cascade.
Since fifteen summers all de tam
She's travel up an' down—
Sometam mebbe she's upset
But never man was drown."

When I speak so, 'bout my canoe,
An' plan for voyage grand,
Dat drummer man she's all excite,
She's tire of stay on land.
"Sapre, mon vieux," she'll say like dat
"Such trip I like it, me—
Jusu' take me on dat ole canoe
Wit' paddle, one, two, t'ree."

We make de start near "Sugar-Loaf,"
Black Eddy she's pass by,
An' old Clear Point and Gibbon's Bridge
Like movin'-picture fly.
We go so fast; de win' she blow,
Bimeby she blow some more,
De rapids strong push us along
So fast can't see de shore.

One tam we stop—some leetle deer,
She's frolic on de grass,
Wit' cow-bell tie around she's neck;
Some ground-hog too we pass.
An' after dat we hear some noise,
Like beeg horn when she's toot.
"By Gar," I'll shout, "we soon jump out—
We're comin' on de Chute."

We make de portage—don't take long.
Den lie upon de ground
An' eat like we was hongry bear
In bushes noisin' round.
Some farmer leave hees fishin' pole,
We tink she's make fine mast,
For hoist de sail—we cut him quick—
Can't get away too fas'

Such high water below dat Chute
I never see before—
Like Tak Chaleplain in mighty storm.
She's lickin' round de shore.
From rock to rock we leeft canoe,
Den jump into our place
So quick lak wink—no tam for tink,
Before we start dat race.

Down rapid gran': I'll hol' my han'
On paddle tight like vise—
Don' want upset—wat water's wet
And cold, by Gar, like ice
Bon voyageurs we'll ride toujours
Up high on top de wave,
An' don' get wet—just leetle bit—
But happy to be save.

From "Davy Jones" (dat's hongry man
What live on hole below,
Wit' mud-turtle and beeg "Poissons"
When hurricane she's blow).

On Bonnechere Point we hoise our sail—
De paddle she's come stop—
Don' work no more.—she's rudder now,
An' if dat win' don' drop
She'll keep us steer for lighthouse clear
On island near Sand Point,
Where we can stop, and jump, an' hop
For cramp dat's on de point.

When win' she's down we'll come on town
Called "Sand Point" on de lake;
Dat ole canoe a trip right through
To Renfrew she's goin' take.
On freight train; but les voyageurs
Some supper firs' must eat
At famous hotel—Monsieur Young's,
Dat supper she's a treat.

Some pork an' bean also,
Dat don' take long for go
Down two "red lane"; but soon de train
She's whistle on de bend—
"Helas"—I'll say "Dat perfect day
She's comin' on de end."

We'll sing some song, 'bout Perfect Day
An' sould of ftien' we've made—
Dat's make de tear come on de eye
An' low it bow de head.
But mebbe on dat Las' Voyage
When we 'ave "Cross de Bar,"
Mon bon ami, dat soul I'll see
Somewhere bevond de star.

Beauty Topics

By following this suggestion any woman can, in the privacy of her own home, remove every trace of hair or fuzz from her face. Withpowdered delatone and water mix enough paste to cover the not wanted hairs, apply and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and wash the skin. This method is unfailing, harmless and quick in results. But care should be employed to get the genuine delatone.

SAYINGS OF BRUSSILOFF

The following are some phrases and military maxims culled from the letters, interviews, and private conversations of A. A. Brussiloff, now commanding the Russian armies in Galicia:

"Observe the bayonet—its gutter and its shoulder contour! It is a sublime weapon, snatched by our ancestors from the lightning of the clouds whose light it resembles. Unfortunately it has lost something of its divine power of projection.

"One of the greatest inspirations to an army is hatred. The Germans understand this and try to teach it to their's. We do not have to be taught for there are our burned houses and Kovno, in Vilna and Volhynia."

"What a pity it is that religion usually thrives best in a weak body. A truly religious soldier is unconquerable—he has no fear of death either subjectively or objectively."

"All German strategy is based on the eventuality of winning quickly: their tactics, on the eventuality of procrastination. They know how to push, but they do not know how to envelop. Consequently they have never captured an army."

"Use damp wood at night and dry wood by day for your fires. Smoke is not seen at night, and flames are hard to discern in the sunlight.

"The French Revolution taught people how to think. The Russian industrial revolution has taught the Russians how to work. The first made a great noise. Beside the second a death's head is a chattering magpie."

"There is only one thing more magnificent than the great retreat of our armies a year ago. That is the British blockade. It has also been more valuable to us."

"Neither Germany nor Austria can afford to wait patiently and confidently for the best moment to strike. They must anticipate an impending blow or not strike at all. At the beginning they expended their patience and confidence in one great effort. Patience and confidence then passed to the Allies."

"The want of munitions paralyzed us and forced us to yield much ground. We yielded cheerfully, knowing that time was needed to make guns, rifles, and soldiers. Now all this is in the past—a memory but a terrible memory."

"The Winter has been our protection; the Summer will be our deliverance."

"The observation is well confirmed that the morale of the soldier tends to become lower when he notices that his company, which used to number 250 or 300 men, is reduced to a few dozen. In a word, as the war continues so the strength of the Allies is increasing and that of the German Powers diminishing. It is a fact that there can be no contradicting."

"No new device, no invention will to any important extent modify their (the Germans) destiny. Behind the Allies are the natural resources of the whole world. Behind the armies of the Central Powers are exhaustion and instability."

"The prisoners I am taking now seem to be the ghosts of those I took in the Carpathians."

"We want our allies to know that we are prepared—nothing more."

"I have seen some masses of magnificent troops held behind a retreating line. You journalists do not understand this; nor would your readers. That is why you have not been allowed to see them.

"Every race in this war has a country to fight for except the Austro-Hungarians. They have none. The Jews, however, have several.

"And the men. Gun food, cannon fodder—what you please. But seeds, too—seeds of victory which shall grow into the sturdy plants of peace eternal."

"And our line. It does not matter at which where the fighting line extends—have we not two continents behind us?—because the outcome of the war will be settled, not by the destruction of the enemy's armies and resources."

"Hatred for the enemy multiplies one's forces tenfold. Hatred is one of the pledges of victory. In the Slav heart there is too little hatred of the enemy, and it must be trained and cultivated. If the scoundrels use explosive bullets smash them back with the same weapons."

"Consideration of a enemy? I have no needs; I am old. I have everything I want, and there is nothing more for me to wish for. My one desire is for Russia all that lies in my power

RUSSIANS ARE ATTACKING IN NORTH

420 CASUALTIES AMONG CANADIAN OFFICERS

Russians Attacking North of the Pripet Marches, Berlin Admits

Berlin Report Says Czar's Troops Are Attacking Strongly But Claims That All Assaults Were Repulsed--Casualties Among Officers in Canadian Artillery Indicates That This Branch Has Been Heavily Hit in the Recent Fighting.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

BERLIN, June 20.—The repulse of strong Russian attacks southeast of Logishin, north of the Pripet marshes, was claimed by the War Office this afternoon. The Slavs suffered heavy losses. Other Russian attacks along the River Styr and near Kolki were unsuccessful.

Much Booty Taken in Czernowitz Capture

Special to the Examiner.

PETROGRAD, June 20.—Four large seige howitzers and scores of smaller guns are already reported among the booty captured by the Russian forces taking Czernowitz. In addition large stores of ammunition and supplies were taken. It seems that large stores for the Germans as well as the Austrians were concentrated near Czernowitz, and these too have fallen into Russian hands, together with railways controlling lines of communications to German railheads. At least one hundred thousand Germans will be short of munitions and food as the result of the Russian coup. The Russian armies are still working around to gather in the fleeing Czernowitz garrison of nearly eighty thousand Austrians.

Artillery Officers in To-day's Casualties

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., June 20.—Additional officers' casualty list this morning indicates that the Canadian artillery has been hit rather severely in the recent fighting. Total officers' casualties since June 2nd now total 420 Canadians. Among the artillery mentioned this morning are: Killed, Lieut. A. P. Murray; wounded, Lieuts. J. B. Hipwell, Capt. W. A. MacNaughton, Lieut. W. Anderson. The majority of to-day's casualties are given as residing in Western Canada.

Collapse of Teutons Is Near at Hand

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 19.—The recent Russian successes have afforded great relief to the French people, for it has taken their attention away from the slaughter at Verdun. The French are encouraged, because the activity of the Russians has shown that the allies are ready, and that the heroic resistance by the French has given the other allied armies time to make ready for an offensive.

The French, being ready first, greatly served the allied cause by holding the Germans in check until the British and the Russians got ready. The British claims that they were ready during the Verdun battle were probably true, but the chances of success from a premature offensive have grown smaller. The French have filled the breach and have kept the main German reserves busy at the western front preparing for an allied attack. It is considered likely that the Russians will continue their drive until the German armies on the western front have been weakened by the necessity of sending fresh troops to stop the Russians. When that has been done the Germans will be faced by a united attack on all fronts, which, it is believed, they will not have the strength to meet. Then the central powers may collapse. Already the Italians are taking advantage of the withdrawal of Austrian reserves toward the Galician front. At last the allied plan of operations is in full swing.

United States Is Still Sending Notes

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The American Government to-day threatened General Carranza with "the gravest consequences" if he attacks American troops now in Mexico. This threat was contained in a note replying to his last withdrawal demand. Full of short-arm diplomatic jabs, the note positively declines to take the American forces out of Mexico. It excoriates Carranza for his failure to co-operate, and resented his brusqueness and his intimations of bad faith.

Bluntly the note told Carranza that this Government "cannot recede from its settled determination to maintain its national rights," and "to prevent further raids across the boundary."

The high lights of the note were—Resentment of Carranza's discourteous tone and temper in his last note, charges that bandits have gone unhampered and unpunished in attacking Americans, a recitation of scores of instances of banditry, charges that the Carranza regime has been indifferent to atrocities, and even encouraged and aided some of them, and charges that Carranza failed to assist in apprehending Villa and others.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—President Wilson to-day urged members of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee to specify at least one, and if possible two, Dreadnoughts in the Navy Bill.

ELOPERS SETTLE TROUBLES AFTER LONG COURT JANGLE

NEW YORK, June 20.—A secret settlement of the domestic difficulties of Mrs. Agnes L. Graves and Robert Graves, Jr., wealthy son of the head of the Robert Graves Company, wall paper manufacturers, has just come to light in the Supreme Court through the signing of a discontinuance of the wife's divorce action by Justice Donnelly.

Two referees have been appointed in the proceeding, in which Mrs. Graves accused her husband of misconduct with a woman at the Ansonia and at other addresses in this city.

J. Campbell Thompson, first appointed referee, soon dropped the case, Justice Delehanty vacating his appointment and naming Herbert C. Smythe. Mr. Smythe had heard only a part of the testimony, it is said, when a settlement was reached.

Mr. and Mrs. Graves began their romance by eloping to Hartford, Conn., November 28, 1908. The bride was Miss Agnes L. Valentine of Grafton, Mass. Mr. Graves was at the time a student at Williams College, from which he was graduated in 1910. Friends of the young couple did not know anything of their marital unhappiness until they discovered that Mrs. Graves had left her husband February 1 of this year.

SERGT. HAY IS ILL

The tragic news was received by Mr. Tarleton Cuffe, 32 Benson street, this morning, that his son, Pte. Trevor L. Cuffe, who left Peterborough as a member of B Squadron, 8th C. M.R., is officially reported killed in action on June 2 or 3. Pte. Cuffe, who was a clerk on the staff of the local post office when he enlisted with the Mounted Rifles, was one of the best known members of B Squadron. He was born in Peterborough county and had lived in Peterborough for the greater part of his life. For a number of years he was a choir boy in St. John's choir. Pte. Cuffe was also a member of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons before the war, going to camp as a member of the Peterborough squadron.

When hostilities broke out the young soldier tried to enlist with the first contingent both here and in Lindsay, but was unsuccessful. When the call for mounted men came he enlisted in B squadron, 8th C.M.R. and went overseas with the 8th.

Pte. Cuffe is survived by his parents living on Benson street, and six sisters.

The sympathy of the community will be extended to the bereaved relatives.

Gunner Clarke Wounded.

Mr. Wm. Clarke, 633 Rogers street, received official news from Ottawa this morning that his son, Gunner W. J. Clarke, Canadian Artillery, is officially reported wounded and admitted to No. 13 General Hospital, Boulogne, suffering from gunshot wounds. Gunner Clarke enlisted here with the 24th Field Battery's quota to the first contingent and has been at the front with the 4th Battery ever since the first Canadian division reached the firing line. His brother, Bruce Clarke, is also at the front as a member of the 25th Battalion, going overseas with the 39th.

Sergt. Hay Ill.

The many friends of Sergt. R. A. W. Hay, a veteran Peterborough member of the 24th Field Battery, who went overseas with the 4th Battery, 1st Canadian Artillery Brigade, will regret to hear that Sergt. Hay is officially reported dangerously ill. Sergt. Hay, who had accompanied the battery to camp for many years, was one of the first to enlist when the call for men came. When the 1st contingent reached England, Sergt. Hay was assigned to the Canadian Pay Office in London, and has been on duty there ever since. The official list does not give any particulars.

93rd BATTALION BAND ARRIVES HOME FROM BARRIEFIELD

Overseas Musicians Received By Large Crowd Yesterday ---Will Unite With 57th in Massed Band Concert on Friday Night---Gossip From Barriefield Camp and To-day's General Military News.

The band of the 93rd Battalion arrived home on the 5.35 G. T. R. train last night and will be here for the balance of the week on leave returning to Barriefield camp on Saturday morning. There was a big crowd at the station to meet the musicians and as the band swung along Charlotte street and then up George street people turned from all directions, eager to see and hear Peterborough's overseas band once more. Even the policemen were moved. "That sounds great," said one stalwart member of the force and his eyes lit up as the blare of the brass, the shrilling of the reeds and the boom of the drum was heard.

With Bandmaster Hughes and Sergt Major Miller at its head the band marched to the recruiting rooms outside of which they played a lively selection which was warmly applauded. Then after hearty cheers from the crowd the band was dismissed and lost no time in scattering homeward.

Citizens will have several opportunities this week of hearing the band. They are scheduled to play on Thursday afternoon at the I.O.D.E. garden party at Judge Huycke's and on Friday night will unite with the band of the 57th Regiment in a massed band concert at Victoria Park. With sixty-five or seventy musicians assembled Friday night's concert should be a most impressive one.

All but four members of the band returned yesterday. Bandsmen Badley, Lieut. Loader, H. Loader and Clarke chopping off en route to visit friends.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP NEWS.

Sunday, June 18th.

Special to The Examiner:

Divine service was held at 9 o'clock this morning by Major G. C. Davidson, the 1st Brigade composing of 93rd, 109th and 130th Battalions, taking part.

The boys were out with their lacrosse sticks Saturday getting in shape for coming events.

Football, baseball and quoits, in addition to lacrosse, are all part of the games being played in camp.

C. & D Co'ys expect to start on musketry to-morrow. The results will be sent later.

Col. Hemming and Col. Brown personally complimented Bandmaster Hughes on the splendid programme rendered at Headquarters to-day, the trombone solo, "Asleep in the Deep" by Bandsman H. Gilbert, being specially mentioned. Peterborough people will have an opportunity of hearing the band Friday night.

Q. M. Sergt. Cottrel, P. M. Sergt. Abraham and Pte. M. E. Hartley of the Paymaster's Staff, will be home on leave Wednesday.

The 93rd band gave a sacred concert in the marquee to-night, playing the old time favourite hymns, the boys heartily joining in the singing.

Lieut. J. Keachum arrived in camp to-day and was welcomed by the officers. He made a record run in the 93rd motor truck, making the journey from Peterborough to Barriefield Camp in just six hours.

Lieut. F. S. Dupuy and Lieut. V. Eastwood have returned from taking a course in musketry in Ottawa, and received a cordial welcome on their return to camp.

Lieutenant R. Stevenson, Lieutenant R. A. Crisp and Lieutenant J. A. McNabb have been awarded certificates from the Machine Gun School of Instruction, Kingston, for the Lewis automatic and colt gun.

Lt.-Col. Johnston has been appointed Brigadier for the Brigade, and Battalion Sergt.-Major Miller has been appointed Brigade Sergt.-Major.

The Kingston Whig Says:

It is expected that some 500 people will take advantage of the excursion to Barriefield camp from Peterboro which is being run to give the residents of that place an opportunity of visiting their relatives in the 93rd and other Battalions at the camp. The special train will be run over the Canadian Pacific Railway and will arrive in the city next Saturday morning. The programme of sports and music by the battalions should prove of great interest for the visitors, and it is hoped that the week will be dry so that they will take away with them a good opinion of the camp.

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following interesting letter from Driver Morris Montgomery, a Peterborough boy with the Divisional Ammunition Column. He has three brothers at the front with him. Driver Montgomery's letter is dated June 5, just after the big scrap at Hooge and is written from "Somewhere at the Front."

I now take the pleasure of writing you a few lines, hoping this letter reaches you safe, as it leaves us four boys. I was up in the trenches with my brother Ray last Saturday night to get out a trench mortar gun, and it was pretty hot while we were there, although we got out the gun alright. It was hell for a while. I thought it was going to finish right there. Our boys did some great work and no mistake, and when our guns opened up they made a terrible mess of the Huns, wounded and killed lying all over. We certainly lost some good

HELP THE MEN AT THE FRONT

The Peterborough men at the front want more cigarettes and tobacco. Will YOU help send some? Give your donation in to any Bank and it will be sent without any more trouble on your part. We want every Peterborough man at the front to have plenty of tobacco and cigarettes. Hand in your donation to-day.

Meeting Tuesday night, June 20th at 8 p.m. Bank of Montreal Chambers. Come along and take an interest in this work. Overseas Club.

Only the Beginning Says Brussiloff

Russian Successes Have Just Started Says Famous General—Co-ordination of All the Armies Has Resulted in Sweeping Gains.

PTE. J. A. FOSTER, a Peterborough boy with the Mounted Rifles, who had many narrow escapes in the Zillibeke fighting.

CAPTURES EXPLAINED

LONDON, Tuesday, June 20. — Stanley Washburn, correspondent of the London Times, telegraphs an interview with the Russian General Brussiloff, under yesterday's date, quoting the Russian general as follows:

"Our sweeping successes are not the product of a chance or of Austrian weakness, but they represent the application of all the lessons we learned in our warfare against the Germans. The principal element of success is the absolute co-ordination of all armies.

"On the entire front the attack began in the same hour, and it was impossible for the enemy to shift his troops from one quarter to another, as our attacks were pressed equally at all points.

"The most important fighting has Here we made our greatest advances, which are striking seriously at the strategy of the whole enemy front.

"If we are able to take Kovel, a railway centre extraordinarily useful for inter-communications of the Germans and Austrians will be in our hands. That this menace is fully realized by the enemy is obvious from the fact that the Germans are supporting this sector with all available troops that can be rushed up, some are coming from the west, some from points on the eastern front north of us."

HUGE CAPTURES EXPLAINED.

Asked to explain the hugeness of the captures as announced in the official reports, General Brussiloff said:

"The nature of the modern trenches which makes them with their deep tunnels a mass of communications so difficult to destroy, renders them a menace to their own defenders once a position is taken from the the rear or flank, for it is impossible to escape quickly. Besides, we have for the first time had sufficient ammunition to use for a curtain of fire preventing the enemy from retiring and rendering surrender imperative.

With regard to the situation as a whole, General Brussiloff said:

It is too difficult to estimate as yet what the political effect of our advance will be, but it will be certainly far-reaching in Austria-Hungary, and this year it is improbable, if not impossible for the Germans to send huge support to the Austrians.

"The fall of Czernowitz must have a profound effect upon Roumania and in the Balkan States. These first works have been extremely successful, but they are, I believe, only the beginning of our Summer campaign. The Germans may in a small way be successful before they are finally defeated, but we shall, I hope, be pressing the war against them increasingly.

"The general situation has been further improved by the British fleet's action."

PTE. J. A. FOSTER BURIED TWICE BY SHELL EXPLOSIONS

Peterboro' Member of Mounted Rifles Who Came Safely Through the Zillibeke Fighting Tells of the Terrible Bombardment

HAD MANY CLOSE CALLS

PTE. J. A. FOSTER.

Writing on June the 6th to his wife Mr. J. A. Foster, London street, city, Pte. John A. Foster who left Peterborough with B. squadron, 8th C.M.R. gives some thrilling details of the battle of Tillibeke on June 2nd and 3rd in which the Mounted Rifles were so heavily engaged.

The letter has been considerably censored. Some parts having been obliterated all together by the scissors.

Pte. Foster says in part—"Just a few lines to let you know that I am still in the land of the living. I hear that the English papers have an account of (deleted by the censor) of the 4th there were a few of us who got out. How we did it no one knows. You will see the casualty lists in the papers which will give you an idea of what we went through. Old Princess Pats who went through the first and second battle of Ypres say that the bombardments were simply child's play to what we out through and how any of us got out alive is a miracle but one thing we can say is that Frits suffered more than we did for the ground in places was covered with dead Fritzies three or four deep. The old 4th was the last to (deleted) out of quite a few battalions. We are now quite a few miles from the firing line for a rest.

It would be useless to try to explain how things were so I won't try. My ears ache if I touch them and there is a constant ringing in them from shell explosions. I as lucky enough to get buried twice and driven into a dugout once and knocked end over end dozens of times by the concussion and after trenches and everything were laid flat, four more fellows and myself crawled out into an open field in full view of Frits and got into a ditch. We crawled on our hands and knees through mud and water and then lay in the water on our sides for ten hours until dark. Then our shells drove us out. My poor old watch got full of water and stopped at 1.30 p.m. It is so rusty now that it will not run any more so I shall keep it as a souvenir of that day.

THE GARDEN PARTY OF OTONABEE CHAPTER

By kind permission of Major Lech, the band of the 93rd Battalion will be in attendance both afternoon and evening at the Garden Fete which is to be held at the residence of His Honour Judge Huycke, on Thursday afternoon and evening, June 22nd.

Mr. J. M. Greene has also kindly offered the use of an Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph for the occasion.

No admission to the grounds.

The Bonner-Worth Annual Excursion

The employees of the Bonner-Worth Co. Ltd. held their annual trip on Saturday last, the 17th inst. The party, including friends, totalled about 400 and a special train was chartered for the first part of the trip to Toronto.

There the Corona was boarded and a beautiful sail across Lake Ontario was experienced. The water being rather choppy added to the beauty of the trip, several members of the party being apparently "off" to everything but contemplation of the lake.

Niagara was reached in good time and all enjoyed the sight of one of the wonders of the world. Quite a number stayed in the vicinity of the falls until Monday, the others arriving home on Saturday, having spent a very enjoyable, if somewhat strenuous, day.

FIFTY YEARS.

On July 1st, 1917—next year—Canada will have completed her fiftieth year of Confederation. We have reason to think that Confederation has shown itself to be worth while. Canada has done well in playing the role of nationhood. She has many achievements to her credit, but she has closed, and is closing, her first half century with a grand finale of accomplishment, which in actual and moral effect overtops all past achievements. And not only in the actual and practical sense; not only in her splendid contribution to this great war; not only in her name-making accomplishments; not only in the demonstration she is making of her ability to do things—to do great things in a great way—but she has done a still greater thing. Canada has found herself; she has sensed in a newer and larger way, her responsibilities and got new light given upon her weaknesses. This war has revealed not only our good features; it has shown our shortcomings as well, in a score of ways—in our political morals, in our administrative methods, in our outlook upon, and our regard of, our responsibilities. We have learned many lessons of self reliance and dependence upon our own efforts in the past half century, with perhaps too little realization of our shortcomings, and the greatest of the latter is that as a people we have too much practised and condoned the futility, the folly and the wickedness of crooked political and commercial ways. We have, however, learned a stronger popular contempt of, and sense of condemnation of, crooked political methods. In these regards we have come to a point of departure for future national progress, that we have passed by in all the fifty years of our new national life; and we can reasonably envisage a new future, a greater future, that will be all the greater since it will be more fully founded upon the human application of the "righteousness that exalteth a nation."

EDUCATIONAL UNREST.

This war and its new demands upon our resources and capabilities is letting in light upon obscure points and places, and making the world think. War is a practical thing and demands practical methods. But it is no more practical than all the problems of peace. If we need to overcome the theoretical dabbling that has contributed to make our participation in war tardy and ineffectual we need to take home the lessons in the every-day, practical affairs of life.

There is educational unrest all over the world, except perhaps in Canada. To begin nearest home. In the United States, thinking men are advocating a radical shaking-up of accepted and practiced, but unpractical, educational ideals. The greatest force of the indictment consists in questioning the practical character of prevailing educational systems. The same idea is finding widespread and authoritative expression in the Old Country. There is there a demand for effective official inquiry into "the entire question of the organization of our educational system and its adaptation to the various needs of the nation."

Not only the United States and the British nation need an adjustment of their educational machinery to the conditions revealed and created by the war, but we need the same shaking-up in Canada. When the war ends we shall be confronted with new problems which will demand not only clear thinking upon the part of our political leaders, but effective, popular cooperation in giving effect to the means that must be devised and adopted to the desired and demanded ends. Statesmen may devise wise means, but their proposals will depend, for their successful carrying out, upon a population trained and equipped educationally—mentally and physically—in order to give the best effect to the wisest provisions for meeting and effectuating the national, the scientific, the industrial proposals propounded.

Are our educational system and practice adequate to giving training that will secure this popular cooperation? Is it sufficiently practical? If it is not, have our government authorities a sense of the deficiency and a recognition of its importance. A few years ago, as far back as 1910 the Laurier government appointed a Royal Commission on Technical Education and Industrial Training. This Commission spent two years in making exhaustive investigation of every phase of the work entrusted to it. After two years' work the Commission presented, and published, a comprehensive report, in which was emphasized the great need of promoting industrial and scientific research, and furthering industrial training and technical education in all the provinces, was urged and recommendations made which, if carried out, would mean a gain to every industry and calling, and to every worker in Canada. The Government which found all this splendid material ready to hand for legislative and administrative action, have taken no steps to give effect to the demand for improving the conditions of industrial life in Canada, as was easily possible by prompt and necessary action. Nothing short of radical reform in educative procedure can meet the situation. The people have, however, been so long accustomed to the acceptance of theoretical education that the failure of the governing powers is not regarded as a cue for bringing pressure of popular opinion to bear upon governments to procure attention to the problem which must be solved if Canada is to take her proper place in the industrial and commercial renascence that will come after the war; if Canada is to as worthily, as she has done in the war, take her part in the battle for the new markets that will open, and seize the alluring opportunities for industrial and commercial expansion that will be found waiting when the war ends.

We need to think very seriously upon the question of the effectiveness of our general educational system in this province. Is it practical enough? Does it effectively enough equip the boys and girls whose school education must end at 14 or 15, for the real duties of life that must follow? Is enough attention given to practical subjects, to the thorough as possible mastery of the subjects that the boy can, and must, use most in working life? Is there not too much overloading with a smattering of non-essential subjects, which, even if taught and learned thoroughly, would be of minor value in helping the boy and girl to success in their life in the working world? No one disparages the value of educational culture implied in the study of literature, etc.; but this would come of itself, if our popular education provided for thorough grounding in essentials, and the proper spirit of self education were developed. With all improvement in scientific and practical education and intellectual culture must go, hand in hand, the highest education and culture—the implanting of high moral ideals; impressing the lesson that little counts in life equipment that is not founded upon honourable and honest principles, and a recognition of the rights of others, who, with us, compose our world.

RECRUITING BY RULE.

General Logie's appeal to Toronto for more recruits, on the ground that he knows the need for more men, is the voice of one crying in the wilderness of hap-hazard recruiting methods—"Prepare ye the way of recruiting and make its ways easy." It is an appeal not only to Toronto, which has done its duty well and needs scolding less than most places, but it is an appeal to us here in Peterborough and all over the Dominion. But, above all, it is the appeal direct to the government of Canada, an appeal to the government to begin taking official interest in recruiting. The Government has committed Canada to providing 500,000 men for the overseas forces; in effect, however, it has delegated the work of keeping the nation's promise to private individuals, patriotic men and bodies to whom the duty does not properly belong. So far the Government, which has, to its credit, been doing a great deal, has won little credit on the head of the practical interest it has taken in recruiting. It is not too much to say that, from the government point of responsibility, recruiting has been greatly mismanaged in Canada. It is not partisanship that prompts and justifies such a charge. Organs that give a party support, and a pretty strong one, too, are becoming outspoken. One government newspaper, the personal organ of the Minister of Militia—at least the one he selects to blazon to the world the military mistakes of Lord Kitchener—the Ottawa Journal—has the following to say of the ineffectiveness of recruiting activities:

> At the rate of our May enlistment, not to speak of a probable greater falling off in June—we will not have 500,000 men recruited until May, 1917; and as it takes at least eight months to translate a civilian into a soldier fit to enter the trenches, some of these thousands of them, would not be effective until some time in 1918. This is manifestly not the way to keep up our work. It was not what we implied when we promised 500,000 men.

We should like to have more definite assurance of the reported intention of the Government to adopt new methods to stimulate recruiting. It is hoped they will be effective, but they cannot at the worst, be more discouraging than the past official indifference to the interests of recruiting. Any change of attitude that promises substitution of method—recruiting by rule—will be preferable to hap-hazard ways of reaching, and fetching, the eligible among our population.

MUST SUE FOR PEACE.

Germany is the author of this war; she occupies the territory of the nations that she has outraged; she can claim and does claim to have the victorious position, and the only terms at which she has hinted are terms which cannot be considered. The time will come, and we believe that it may come sooner than expected, when her approaches will be more definite and will be frankly on the basis of a suitor for peace and not of a belligerent offering terms of peace. Till that time comes, bring ing with it to the Allies the power to dictate such terms as will secure Europe against the recurrence of this enormous calamity, we must not entangle ourselves in futile negotiations. We cannot discuss terms with Germany while she occupies allied territory and claims to be the victor in the war.—London Daily News.

THE INWARDNESS OF THE ETHICS OF LAND SPECULATION

Land speculation has been condemned in a resolution adopted by the Toronto Methodist Conference, which sets forth the evils that flow from it in the following terms:

"Whereas we believe "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof, that land was intended for the production of those commodities that are necessary for the sustenance and welfare of all the human race, and never for speculation; that speculation in farm lands contributes directly and indirectly to the demoralization of rural life, that land speculation in cities contributes to the unhealthy congestion of the population, high rents and the high cost of living, deprives industry of its proper reward, and produces many other evils which press sorely on the working classes; that vast values created by the community should not go into the pockets of individuals, thus stimulating the gambling propensity in human nature, discouraging honest work and encouraging the desire of men to acquire wealth without earning it, which is essential dishonesty. There resolved: That this Conference expresses its strongest disapproval of these evils and injustices, and we believe it is the duty of the State to provide laws that will—as far as possible—prevent men from acquiring wealth without earning it, and by which these 'Divine gifts' may be used for the benefit of all. While this Conference is of the opinion that the land question has become a serious ethical and religious question, we believe that it is not the function of the Church to outline a system of land reform, but it is the duty of a Christian people to set itself resolutely to find methods, through legislation or otherwise, to alleviate, and, if possible, entirely abolish these evils and injustices associated with our land system."

It is apparent that the holding of idle land is not only non-productive, but actually destructive in preventing or delaying beneficial use. It is also apparent that capital cannot be invested in vacant land. Capital may be given in exchange for vacant land, but before the capital can produce interest it must be used productively. If interest or profit is derived from the use of the capital, and also from the idleness of the land, two interests are drawn from only one productive service. If interest is regarded as the reward of abstinence in saving the results of past labour to make present more productive, no such service can be traced or discovered in the idle holding of land. Abstinence is necessary to bring capital but not to bring land into existence. A suburban gardener, with no thought of or capacity for speculation, may resist seductive approaches of subdivisers until someone offers him a seemingly fabulous price for a building site. He continues to work the remainder of his land till another wealthy homeseeker comes along with a still higher price. By this process the garden is transformed into a leading suburban residential idea, and the erstwhile gardener moves into the city, has a palatial house built for himself, and enjoys a retinue of servants, with motor cars and other accessories. In this there is no speculation, but there is peculation. The former gardener is living parasitically. He gives no return for the large volume of other people's labour which he is consuming. He renders no service. All he did to obtain his draft on the labour of his fellows was to move out of the way. People built a house for him because he let them build houses for themselves.

And adjacent garden is sold to a subdivider. He builds artistic gates and scatters advertisements abroad. Many buy in the hope of easy wealth. Building sites change hands several times at increasing prices before reaching the builders. In this case there is speculation, while in the former there is none, but the peculation is the same in both cases. The users must build houses for others to get room to build for themselves. Clearly the evil is in the system and conditions, not in the speculator.

If one man gets wealth without producing, others must produce without getting. Land value is not wealth bubbling up out of the ground, but is a payment a franchise for levying on the products of other people's industry. While the possibility of wealth without productive effort is tolerated, the chance of taking advantage of it will be a subject of speculation. At present we have not only the possibility, but the certainty. Someone must get it. The prudent gardener could not escape wealth, try how he would. This condition is not only tolerated, but maintained and vigorously defended. While this continues, condemnation of the speculator is futile. —The Globe.

Ald. Dobbin Tried To Restore The City Officials' Salaries

At last night's Council meeting Ald. Dobbin renewed his former attempts to restore the salaries of city officials who were receiving $750 or over before the pruning of the estimates. These salaries had been reduced ten per ceift. Ald. Dobbin advanced the argument that the police, the waterworks and sewer employees and the firemen had received increases and he moved, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the former resolution be rescinded, that the salaries be continued as before and that the sums clipped from the pay envelopes during the intervening months be paid to these officials. The motion was defeated,, being supported only by Aldermen Edgar, Dobbin and Duncan.

Ald. Dobbin made the statement that the city would have an $18,000 overdraft anyway.

Ald. McIntyre—We will if we take your advice.

Ald. Stratton deprecated the suggestion that the city would have an overdraft and it didn't matter how much more it was piled up. The Council had set out with the very best of intentions and should have enough backbone to have said the salaries will be so much and if employees did not want to accept them they should have been told that an honest effort would have been made to engage others. Had the Council provided for Ald. Dobbin's suggestion, Ald. Stratton said he would have been glad to support it, but the people would not endure an advance under the present conditions.

Ald. Edgar began a reference to the firemen and how they had obtained an advance.

Ald. Stratton flared up a reply that he had made no reference to the firemen.

Ald. Duncan took exception to Ald Stratton's backbone reference. He has as much backbone as the Finance chairman, but the felt that a mistake had been made in applying the pruning knife indiscriminately to the various officials.

Mayor Duffus—It is against the law to have a deficit. The mover of the resolution should have some practical idea to present providing for the money involved.

Ald. Stratton—We havent had a deficit in 20 years.

Ald. Dobbin asserted that no provision had been made for advances to the police, firemen and other workmen which would create a deficit.

Mayor Duffus denied this statement. The increase to the firemen could be covered by the appropriation to the Fire, Water and Light committee. There would be no deficit as far as the police increases were concerned as this appropriation was large enough to include the extra $300, and there would not be a deficit from the construction of sewers and similar work.

Ald Dobbin—Can't you carry this out in a similar way?

Mayor Duffus— You proposed the advance and should have a suggestion that would enable us to support you.

Ald. Duncan—I thought we might give them a bonus at the end of the year if we had a surplus.

Mayor Duffus——That's alright.

Ald. Duncan— I think we can get along without a deficit.

Mayor Duffus—It is up to us to see that we have a surplus.

Ald. Dobbin—We didn't forsee the need for $1,000 to the 83rd.

Mayor Duffus—It was your own suggestion that the increased poll tax would provide for this contribution.

Ald. Dobbin — We might discover something of the same kind for this.

Ald. Stratton—Get it first.

Ald. Saunders said he was averse to having a deficit. The vote was then taken and Ald. Dobbin's motion was lost.

Sanitary Measure Nearing Defeat By Indifferent and Careless Tenants and Owners

Last summer the Council sent Mr. C. A. G. Spence, then Sanitary Inspector, and Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the 1915 Property Committee on a tour of some of the cities in the western section of the Province to investigate public health measures which were in successful operation. At the beginning of the present year Mr. Spence prepared a by-law providing for a supervised system of cleaning outhouses that was in the interests of sanitation and the general cleanliness and health of the community; especially in districts not served by sewers. When this had finally been passed by the Council, and put into actual effect, the Council accepted Mr. Spence's resignation when a more remunerative position was opened to him.

However the by-law was in force, but its originator was not behind it. Its regulations were not fulfilled, and the conditions have been steadily aggravating until the position was reached last night when the Council considered the Property Committee's recommendation to repeal the by-law. In the short period of its operation the new system had cost the city $368 and the contractor had been able to perform work that brought in about $120.

To sheet, the dry earth closet system that had proven successful in other cities of the Province has so far been a failure in Peterborough and it is a compartively easy matter to determine the reasons for this outcome.

The by-law required the householders concerned to make certain changes, where necessary, to their closets in order to facilitate the contractor's work.

Dry earth was to be regularly deposited in the boxes, and it was required that the outhouses would be readily accessible.

These requirements called for the co-operation of the householder, and in the great majority of cases they have not been complied with. Hence it is not difficult to ascribe the reasons for the reported failure of the proposed system which was devised as a benefit to the particular householder, and a means to securing a cleaner and better city where more modern conveniences did not obtain.

By the use of dry earth it was understood that collections would be made in the day-time, and that each house would be given a monthly service at a cost of fifteen cents to the owner or tenant.

Thus there was not a single objection or drawback to the system, with the possible exception of the collection of the money. This was to be the duty of the city since the contracting collector was paid on a salary basis.

Why It Failed.

It is safe to say that the principle cause of the system's failure rested in the fact that many of the householders concerned were not fully aware of the demands upon them. That some have complied with the regulations indicates that they were informed and were sufficiently intelligent and appreciative of the service to co-operate to the fullest extent with the city. But these were a decided minority. The others should have been reminded of the minor exactions of the by-law, and for its successful operation steps should have been undertaken to enforce their compliance. As it is, the city has been losing money, and the careless, indifferent class have not only defeated the objects of the system, but have all but deprived the remainder of the service they appreciated.

The by-law explicitly provides for every condition that may arise, except the problem of collecting the money. But the main difficulty lies in the fact that a large number of citizens, in all parts of the town, ignoring this innovation, have thereby nullified its potential results.

The Council discussed this question last night, and some of the members were of the opinion that the by-law might be maintained by increasing the fee to the householder from fifteen to twenty-five cents. But this is, for the most part, assessing the citizens who are willing and easier to assist the city's enterprise. The fifteen cent fee can be successfully maintained by securing a larger number of daily collections, and this is only possible when the general conditions are facilitating and favourable to the collector. It is unnecessary to go into the details, but it is mentionable that in some instances the collector had to hack his way through the wire entanglements of chicken coops that blocked the entrance to yards.

The Chief Difficulty.

If the by-law is not a compulsory one, then it might as well be rescinded. If it does not provide a means by which the indifferent citizens, and the careless, can be compelled to comply with the regulations, it is manifestly doomed to failure. But none of its demands are burdensome or unreasonable, hence it seems regrettable that a civic measure intended for the general good of the city, and for the convenience of the individual, without necessitating any hardship, should be defeated without a fair trial.

In justice to the present chairman of the Property Committee it should be stated that he has not received sufficient constructive assistance from the Council. There has been a patent lack of determination to put the by-law into successful operation

Recruiting Meeting On Thursday Night

Mayor Duffus called the attention of the Council last night to the visit to Peterborough on Thursday night of Col. Williams who will discuss recruiting the the representatives of the municipalities of the county and city and with the local manufacturers and others who may attend this meeting. It will be held in the Council Chamber and a large attendance is expected. To Ald. Edgar's question Mayor Duffus stated that he understood that everything could be done to secure Peterborough as the headquarters for a new battalion had been done; and definite word was expected shortly from Sir Sam Hughes.

NO AMALGAMATION SAYS BERLIN COUNCIL

BERLIN, Ont., June 20.—The City Council, by a vote of 12 to 2, defeated the resolution submitted by Aldermen Reid and Schnarr, that a vote of the electors of Berlin be taken at the earliest possible date on the question of the amalgamation of Berlin and Waterloo, with Waterloo as the name.

The amalgamation proceedings having been finally disposed of, the Council immediately proceeded to take the necessary steps to select the new name for the city. It was decided to dispense with the formality of allowing the "committee of 99" to choose the six names to be submitted to the electors, by discharging the committee and thanking them for their services. The Council agreed to meet on Wednesday night to choose the names to be submitted to a vote to be taken on Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 24th, 26th, 27th and 28th, at the City Hall, with the City Clerk as Returning Officer. Every elector will be allowed to vote for one name.

Breaks Mothers Brooms Learning To Hit Homers

When Duffy Lewis broke the handles of his mother's brooms at the age of seven he was putting in practice for the heavy stickwork that won the 1915 world's series for the Boston Red Sox. "He was a born ball player" said his mother, Mrs. Geo. Lewis, Sr.

"George broke every broom and rake handle in the place when he was too small to use a baseball bat."

Before he went to school, Duffy Lewis played baseball with the neighbour boys in the lots near his home in Vera street, Alameda, Cal. When he was seven years of age he was mascot for the Alameda team and he had the opportunity to form an idea of professional baseball system.

The difference betwen the back lot variety of the national sport and that which is playing in the big park is great, and Duffy was only running the Mattick School team of which he was captain, according to big league rules.

A Short Shrift

An the first of February, 1915, an application was received from John Joseph Kehoe, of Brule Lake, Ont., for $1,000.00.

On the second of the same month the Policy was duly issued, and on the 10th the Policyholder was killed by a train. The following is extracted from a letter of his widowed mother:

"Your cheque for $1,000 is the only consoling influence left a widowed mother since the death of one who was the only support to his mother and six younger brothers and sisters."

Do not procrastinate. To-day you may be insurable; to-morrow you may not be. For particulars apply

Presentation at Annual Picnic

Mrs. Gaskins Receives Life Membership Certificate and Gold Cross

The Women's Auxiliary of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, held their annual picnic on Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Browning, Water Street. A large number of the members was present. A very pleasant afternoon was spent socially. At the close Mrs. Gaskins, their former President, was presented by the Auxiliary with a Life Membership Certificate and Gold Cross, accompanied by the following address:

Dear Mrs. Gaskins,—We are gathered here to-day not only to enjoy our annual picnic, but also that we may join in the expression of our esteem and sincere appreciation of your long and faithful service as a member and President of our Society. We have for many years both recognised and valued your devotion to the principles of the Auxiliary and to the duties of your office. You have felt obliged to resign your place of leadership among us but we hope that with God's blessing and improved health you may long be with us as a fellow-worker in the great missionary cause and the Church, and we beg you to accept and wear this token of life membership in the Women's Auxiliary.

Signed on behalf of the members of St. Luke's.

ANNIE BUTCHER, President
A. WHITEHOUSE, Secretary.

AUTOMOBILE HITS POLE; MAN KILLED

Joseph J. Messer's Skull Crushed in Accident in Newark—Son Escapes Unhurt.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Mortally injured when his automobile ran into a telegraph pole in Eleventh avenue, Newark, Joseph J. Messer, fifty-five years old, of No. 463 Central avenue, that city, died soon afterward in the City Hospital. The automobile had turned sharply to avoid a collision with another automobile which was occupied by several children and driven by John Volker, of No. 10 Skillman place.

Mr. Messer and his son George, both in the cabinet-making business, were together in their automobile. While young Messer was thrown out and uninjured, his father was hurled against the telegraph pole with such force that his skull was crushed.

GIRL BEATS A MAN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

NEW YORK, June 20.—When an automobile stopped twenty feet from where it had knocked down a man in Surf avenue, Coney Island, a young woman leaped over the rear of the tonneau, ran back and started the crowds on the sidewalks by striking the fallen man several times on his head with what appeared to be the butt of a carriage whip.

Several persons shouted at her and were about to interfere when the woman returned to the automobile. Its door had been held open for her, and as she stepped into the tonneau she cried to the driver to "Give it gas!" The automobile sped away in spite of efforts by the crowd to halt it, and the man was left unconscious in the avenue.

He is John J. Sullivan, thirty-five years old, of No. 314 Washington Ave., Brooklyn, and was sent to the Coney Island Hospital. Fracture of the skull, a result of the beating, and minor bruises caused by the automobile were disclosed in the examination by the surgeons. His condition was said to be serious.

No two persons in all those who saw the incident reported the same automobile license number to the police. For that reason there was much confusion, and no arrest was made early this morning. In the automobile were several men and young women, and when it hit Sullivan they were singing and shouting.

Odds and Ends of Council Business

Weller street, between Belmont and Walton, will be levelled as a result of Ald. Duncan calling the attention of the Board of Works to it at last night's Council meeting.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that a proper outlet be provided for the water that collects north of Sherbrooke street on Stewart street.

Ald. Weir called attention to the necessity of reducing the projection of a culvert across Hunter street east.

By-laws were passed authorizing the borrowing of $15,000 for the South Central school repairs; the granting of $750 to the Horticultural Society for the care of Central and Victoria Parks; completing the agreement with the Dustless Sweepers Ltd. for cleaning the paved streets; amending the Health By-law to allow chicken coops to be nearer than 25 feet to a dwelling when permission has been obtained from the Board of Health; the building of sewers on parts of Dublin, Romaine, Smith, Smith and Parnell streets at a cost of $9,244.10, of which the city pays $6,000.31.

W. C. Austin applied for sewer connection to house No. 64 Hunter street west. There was no sewer on the street, and he could not comply with the demands of the Board of Health

Gilbert Back in Paris For Duty

PARIS, June 20.—After having passed a day at Lyons the French aviator Gilbert, whose escape from Switzerland caused such interest recently, has arrived in Paris.

Despite the fact that precautions had been taken to keep back the crowd, large numbers of people were present on the platform when he alighted from the train at the Gare de Lyon, and he was greeted with a tremendous ovation, being practically carried by his friends in their boisterous enthusiasm to the automobile waiting outside.

After paying some visits to his friends in Paris the aviator went to the rue Saint-Dominique to place himself at the disposal of his military chiefs. On his arrival at the Ministry of War he was warmly congratulated.

Crops Suitable For Late Sowing

In some parts of Ontario the continued wet weather that has characterized this season up to the present has prevented the sowing of some of the usual crops at the usual time, and has had a tendency to discourage the farmer. Such, however, should not be the feeling, since the possibilities of producing crops on land not yet sown are practically as good as ever, providing the weather improves a bit and the right crops be sown in the right way and properly looked after.

Co-operation of Allies Assured

PARIS, June 20. — The economic conference of the Entente Allies before adjournment yesterday adopted unanimously resolutions which it was decided to make public next Wednesday in the allied countries. Baron de Broqueville, Belgian Premier, in the closing address declared the purpose of the conference had been entirely realised. The intimate collaboration for which a basis had been formulated marked the opening of a new era.

It was a profound error, Baron de Broqueville declared, to admit that the conference had been working for war, while in truth it was a preservative and beneficial union against war. Liberty, honesty and justice would be safeguarded, he asserted, and the conference ignored any other motive. The decision taken was a new gauge of continuity, said the Baron whose words were formally approved by all the delegates.

MRS. J. BAMBURY, MARIPOSA, FATALLY INJURED ON SUNDAY

On Sunday an accident which was attended with fatal results occurred at the residence of Mrs. John B. Bambury, Mariposa, two miles west of Mariposa Station, when Mrs Bambury fell and fractured her thigh bone, dying from injuries during the night.

After the accident had occurred Dr. Rich of Lindsay was at once summoned When he arrived at the residence he found Mrs Bambury, who is over 80 years of age, in an unconscious condition. Everything possible was done to ease her suffering, but she passed away without gaining consciousness.

The late Mrs. Bambury was well known throughout the township, and the news of her sad death was received with regret by all. Deceased was a sister of Mrs. W. Hickingbotham of Lindsay, Mrs Cyrus Wallace and Mrs Thorn, Port Perry, and Mrs. Reynolds, of St Mary's, Mrs Harriston, of Oakwood and Mrs Cliquet-waite, of Manilla, are daughters.

No Pensions For Those Disabled By Misconduct

OTTAWA, June 20.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes stated that in the working out of the pension system it has been found that several hundred men have been invalided home because of illness or disease incurred through their own carelessness or misconduct. Hereafter, said the Minister, pensions will not be granted when it is clearly shown that the disabilities were incurred through intemperance or other causes for which the men themselves were responsible.

St. Peter's T.A.S. Elects Officers

Preparations Are Being Made For the July 1st Picnic By the Three Societies Jointly

The regular meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. took place Sunday afternoon, June 18th at their rooms on Simcoe street, when the following officers were nominated and elected:

President—P. J. Scollard.
1st Vice-Pres.—Thos. Turcotte.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Ambrose Kane.
Financial Secretary—T. H. Hammel.
Rec.-Secretary—J. J. Kylie.
Treasurer—T. J. Brooks.
Marshal—W. Grisdale.
Asst.-Marshall—Jno. Ryan.
Guard—Thos. O'Hara.
Trustee Board—J. A. Sharp, M. S. Donoghue, Jos. Begley, J. J. Hickey, George Ahearn.

On retiring from office of president Mr. J. Grisdale touched briefly on the good work of the society done during the past few years and after a few fitting remarks thanked the members for the assistance rendered him during his term of office.

A special meeting of the three societies has been called for Wednesday evening, June 21 to complete plans for the annual T.A.S. picnic on July 1st. For the past two weeks workmen have been busily engaged erecting a huge canvas covered structure to cover the dining tables and large enough to accommodate the crowd in case of rain. This year the society has also built three wharves for the accommodation of canoes and yachts. A full list of sports and various amusements will be published later.

Mr. Killaby To Confer With Ald. Duncan

A reply from Mr. A. L. Killaby, Superintendent of the Trent Canal, to the Council's request that a breakwater be placed at the locks for the protection of canoeists. He stated that provision of this nature would be something of a precedent in the Trent Canal system, but wished to discuss the question with a representative of the Council. Ald. Duncan was appointed to confer with Mr. Killaby who has forwarded the city's letter to the Department of Railways and Canals.

Say Gen. Gallieni Was Shot By High Officer Who Was a Traitor

Summoned to Meet Galliéni, He Fired at Him During Private Interview, Is Story Told.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The death of General Joseph Gallieni, former minister of war of France, was due to the result of a murderous attack by a French army officer of high rank under charges of treason, and not to natural causes, according to stories told here by passengers arriving on the French liner Lafayette Gustave Heslouin, an attache of the French War Office here for the second time on a government mission would neither affirm nor deny the tale.

General Gallieni was shot and fatally wounded in his Paris office, the arrivals from Paris state. He was closeted with the officer, according to their story, when attendants on guard at the door heard a shot and rushed in to find the "saviour of Paris" lying on the floor unconscious with his caller standing over him, a smoking revolver in his hand. The general, after an illness of three weks, during after an illness of three weeks, during tion for blood transfusion, died at Versailles on May 27.

General Gallieni's assailant was arrested, the Layfayette's passengers said, and his fate is unknown. He had been summoned to the office of his chief, it is reported, to answer the charge of having negotiated with the Germans for the surrender of a fortress.

Valet Limps in Court to Picture Eno's Feebleness

Edmond Bigaut, former valet of Amos F. Eno, testified before Surrogate Cohalan and a jury for the next of kin who are trying to break the will. Mr. Eno left an estate of more than $12,000,000, giving Columbia University the residue, estimated at $5,000,000.

Bigaut pictured his former employer as a man broken in physical and mental health in the year 1915 when he executed the contested will. To show Eno's feebleness the witness took a cane and limped across the courtroom. He said the decedent was partly deaf and blind and diseased.

The valet, who was brought from the French trenches to testify, dwelt upon his master's penuriousness in 1914 and 1915. He went abroad and gave such small 'tips' to the servants that they asked Bigaut what was the matter with his employer.

He stopped at cheap hotels, complained about the price of his railroad tickets, and said he couldn't afford to have his baggage removed. Although he had an income of $1,000 a day, he said he was "too poor" to pay his doctor's bill of $120.

Francis G. Wallinger, who was valet to Amos R. Eno, father of the testator, told about the peculiarities of his former employer. This testimony was introduced to show that the testator was predisposed to senile dementia.

Wallinger testified that Amos R. Eno would get in the bathtub and refuse to get out. He would sit in the water and go to sleep. The only way he could be stirred was to pull the plug and let the water run out.

The elder Eno used to shout "murder" at night and throw crockery around. One time he gave $250,000 to the witness. The valet gave it back the next day. When he went to church he would sing after the choir had ceased.

The trial will be continued Monday.

Robert W. Service, Canadian Poet, Red-Crossing For France.—Regarding his new job, Mr. Service writes: "Am engaged with the French Army, driving motor ambulance. We take the wounded right from the trenches, often under fire. We sleep in our boots, eat army rations, and receive one cent per day."

BRITAIN PRODUCING OPTICAL GLASSES FOR WHICH FORMULA WAS ONCE IN GERMAN HANDS.

LONDON, June 20.—Highly interesting facts regarding the British munitions supply and the way in which German secrets have been discovered since the beginning of the war are disclosed by Dr. Addison, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Munitions.

Munitions, Dr. Addison says, are being made not only in the towns throughout the country, but in a large number of villages.

"In one area alone shell bodies or the components of shells are being made not only by engineering works, but in confectionery works; by a music roll manufacturer; by an infant's food maker; by a candle maker; by a flour miller; by a tobacco merchant; by an advertising agent, in several breweries; by some job masters; by a glazier; by siphon manufacturers, and so on.

"Shells—and good shells—have been turned out by machines and methods which would horrify the apostles of orthodoxy.

A calculation made three weeks ago revealed the fact that there were then being turned out weekly by firms who a year ago had not been engaged on munition work sixteen times as many heavy shells as were being turned out a year ago by all the large armament firms and Woolwich Arsenal put together.

"The work of the Ministry of Munitions have been a revelation of the ways in which we had allowed the Germans to acquire control of important materials. I attributed that to neglect of scientific help, slackness and oversatisfaction due to prosperity.

"We experienced great difficulty at one time over the provision of special kinds of optical and other glass, which the Germans, mainly by the provision of research and scientific assistance, had largely monopolised. It was not long, however, before some of the scientists who devoted themselves to the subject found the missing formula at quite trivial expense, and the Ministry has made arrangements which are not only re-establishing this industry in the country, but will I hope, make it secure for some considerable time to come.

"The production of optical glass in England had largely increased a year ago, but it is now more than fourteen times what it was before the war.

"The little bead of glass to which the filament is used in various kinds of lamps was a difficulty. It was only a bead of glass, but it happened that the formula of that particular bead was in German hands. I am glad to say, however, tht it we soon found.

"Again we know how the safety of hundred of workers depend on the resisting power of lamp glasses. The formula for this material was in German hands, but it was found here after six weeks' research at one of our institutes. If the war ended to-morrow these splendid modern equipments would guarantee the continuance of a greatly extended industry in the United Kingdom.

FREAKISH WEATHER KEEPS NEW YORK FOLK GUESSING

Bright Sunshine Is Followed by Threatening Clouds, but Little Rain Falls Here—Hail Causes Damage in Northern New York

NEW YORK, June 20.—From the viewpoint of old-time observers the weather yesterday was the most freakish seen in and about New York for many years. While there was no downpour of rain, there was more or less precipitation in spots, and threatening skies alternated with sunshine through out the day.

The skies were murky during the morning, and the temperature rose gradually to the great inconvenience of pedestrians. Just before noon in the northern part of the city threatening clouds began to gather in the east, and within a few minutes lightning flashed. In anticipation of storm men, women and children scurried to their homes or took refuge in entryways or in the subway stations. They had scarcely found shelter when the clouds vanished and the sun shone brilliantly.

In the lower part of the city at the same moment the sky was practically cloudless, but at three o'clock dark clouds forced thousands to cover, all convinced that rain must follow. In this they were disappointed, however, for the skies cleared within a few minutes.

HAIL AND WIND CAUSES DAMAGE IN SARATOGA COUNTY

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., June 20.—A hail and wind storm that has not been equalled for severity in many years swept over Saratoga county this afternoon and caused damage of thousands of dollars to crops. Fruit and leaves were stripped from trees and many orchards were reduced more than seventy-five per cent.. Highways were blocked by falling trees.

CHINA NOW REAPING FRUITS OF NEGLECT

Country Which on Centuries Has Despised Preparedness Is Now Prey of Japan.

China has for ages made "unpreparedness" the keynote of her national life, says the New Orleans Times-Picayune. The soldier stood —and perhaps stands—at the very foot of the social scale. Whatever else the masses have to endure, they have not had had to sweat beneath conscription and the other loads which "preparedness" is thought to imply. But where does China stand after an emphatic enjoyment of "unpreparedness" and its supposed blessings? The answer lies on the face of each day's news. Torn by revolution at home, she has also to face the menace of conquest by a people thoroughly prepared. For, while the Chinese wrangle and fight over domestic problems, Japan presses demands, each more drastic than the last, meanwhile rattling a keen sword.

There is something absurd in the very idea of four hundred millions thus cowing beneath the threats of a comparatively small race. But mere numbers do not count; "the readiness is all." The Japanese armies are ready to take the field at a moment's notice perfectly trained and equipped; the Chinese army, tried by twentieth century standards, is a mob. Not only so, but Japan has an up to date fleet, magnificently officered and manned, whereas the most modern of the Chinese ships are almost useless for lack of the proper personnel. The result of a clash is consequently a foregone conclusion.

Deserts of Asia Are Re-Explored

Sir Aurel Stein, who has just returned to England on the conclusion of a two and half years' journey through Central Asia, undertaken by order of the government of India, says the London Express, made some fascinating discoveries in Eastern Turkestan, westernmost China, the Pamirs, Russian Turkestan and along the Perso-Afghan border.

After crossing into Chinese Turkestan, Sir Aurel Stein made his way as rapidly as possible toward the desert round the dried up Lop Nor, visiting on his way a sand buried old site in the Takiamakan desert.

Among his discoveries at this desert site was a large ancient orchard still showing with uncanny clearness the elaborate arrangement of fruit trees and vines carried over trellis, all dead. The settlement had been abandoned close on to seventeen hundred years, and the river which carried water to it now loses itself in the sand.

Perhaps his most important discovery was the tracing of the ancient route of the Chinese, and of the numerous ruins along that part of it which lay through a dried up delta. It was by this route that the Chinese in the second century after Christ, conveyed all their silk to Central Asia and the far off Mediterranean. The numerous pieces of exquisite Chinese silks and brocades found in the cemeteries will open up a new chapter in the history of the textile art.

In that part of the desert which was waterless in ancient times for a distance of some 150 miles he was able with accuracy to track the route of the ancient caravans by finds of coins and other small objects accidentally dropped. In one place the direction in which a convoy had moved was clearly marked by hundreds of copper coins, strewing the salt encrusted earth, which had remained untouched for at least sixteen hundred years.

During another portion of his travels Sir Aurel Stein explored for a distance of 250 miles a further section of the armed fortified border line by which the Chinese had endeavored to protect their westernmost marches in Kansu against Ancient Hun raids. From the ruins of watch towers found in continuous succession along the wall he recovered intact numerous written records on wood dating from the first century before and after Christ.

His travels involved more than eleven thousand miles of marching over mountains and desert.

HAMILTON GAULT HAS LEG AMPUTATED

Be Careful in Using Soap on Your Hair

Don't use soaps and prepared shampoos that contain too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

When a horse comes in wet with rain or snow scrape him all over quickly.

Widener's $500,000 Yatcht in War Service

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—Once the palatial craft of the late P. A. B. Widener, multi-millionaire, the steam yacht Josephine sailed from here today with a cargo of coal and Red Cross supplies for Archangel, Russia. The yacht was recently bought by the Russian Government for approximately $500,000.

HAVE YOU YOUR

SUMMER SILK HOSIERY

HERE are a great number of them in a fine silk-ankle quality at 29c. This is a very uncommon Wednesday bargain, but our hosiery buyer spoke for this big shipment months ago and they have just come to hand. 3000 pair of them. Some of them are slightly imperfect but you would have a hard time finding it and it does not spoil the wear at all. They have lisle top with 4 inch Garter hem and spliced lisle heal and toe with silk ankle and foot. There are no seams. The most durable, stylish make of hosiery possible to get.

Let us suggest that you stock up for all summer, because when these are gone there is no hope of duplicating such a great bargain. Black only

KELLY TRIAL UNDER WAY

Former Chief Architect is the First Crown Witness

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, Man., June 20.—Victor Howard went on the stand to-day as the first crown witness in the Kelly trial. The former chief architect for the province told his story clearly, mainly along the lines related before the Mathers commission. Kelly has no lawyer yet and will cross-examine Horwood himself. He is not in the prisoners' box, but sits at a table near an array of Crown lawyers.

Horwood first went over the details of the initial stages of plans and tenders for parliament buildings. He stated that at one time Kelly had accused Hon. C. R. Caldwell, Acting Minister of Public Works, of having "double crossed" him.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE J. D. ARMSTRONG

Took Place to Little Lake Cemetery Yesterday

The funeral took place yesterday of the late J. D. Armstrong to the Little Lake Cemetery and was largely attended by friends of the deceased. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. White of St. Luhes Church and Rev. Mr. Grobb of All Saint's. The pallbearers were: Messrs. George Stenton, J. Firth, Albert Finnie, W. Tremain, E. L. Payne and F. N. McWilliams.

The deceased was a prominent member of the Knights of Pythias and will be greatly missed in this and other organizations where he had made many friends by his likeable qualities.

His two brothers, Mr. Bolton Armstrong of Cincinnati and W. Armstrong of Regina were home for the funeral as well as his daughter Miss Vera who is Superintendent of the new hospital at Manitou Island.

The War Department Withdraws Request

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Fearing that it would be construed as an act of war, the War Department has decided to withdraw its request to Congress for the passage of a resolution authorizing the President to use the National Guard in Mexico, until later.

QUADRUPLET GIRLS ALIVE.

The only living quadruplet girls in the world are the daughters of Mrs. F. M. Keys, of Hollis, Okla. They were born June 4, 1915. The current number, of the Journal of the Oklahoma State Medical Association furnishes the following data about the quadruplets:

At birth the infants weighed 3½, 4, 4¼ and 4¼ pounds, respectively. Seven months after birth the lightest weighed 14½ pounds and the heaviest 16 pounds. The mother is described as a strong woman, weighing about 180 pounds. She is 36 years old.

WARDEN C. J. DARLING'S APPEAL TO RATEPAYERS

In Address to County Council He Asks Them to Cheerfully Respond to Demands Made Upon Them For Comforts For Soldiers and the Red Cross.

A PATRIOTIC ADDRESS

At the opening of the June session of the County Council at the Court House this afternoon the Warden of the County, Mr. C. J. Darling, addressed the members of the Council as follows:

Gentlemen,— As is customary at this our regular June session, I beg to address you briefly, as follows:

As a result of the great war now raging, all are deeply interested in the same, and no doubt every member is anxious to see the termination as soon as possible, consistent with the terms of the Entente Allies. We feel keenly the loss of our brave boys who have given their lives for the furtherance of national liberty and the crushing of Prussian militarism that has been and is now a menace to democracy.

We perhaps cannot look forward to an average harvest due to weather conditions this year, yet through a kind Providence we do not anticipate any abnormal suffering therefrom.

We can hope for better conditions in the coming years, whereas in those European countries now devastated as a result of German intrusion, such hopes cannot be held out therefor. I would in this way ask all ratepayers of the County to respond cheerfully to any demand that may be made upon them to add to the comforts of our soldiers at the front and their dependents left behind; also to keep the Red Cross in such a state of efficiency that the best possible attention can be given to the wounded.

You are all aware that the British army available were at least one-half on the casualty list during the first few weeks of the war, and now at has an army infilling the recruits from her colonies, up in the million and at the same time has conveyed millions of soldiers from one point to another to carry out the defence of Allies, put every known German craft off the seas and carried into effect a blockade that will mean a great factor in bringing to a successful issue, the present war.

The Allies for the first eighteen months of the war had simply flesh and blood up against huge guns, but now, due to the organization carried into effect as a conjunction of the Allied governments not only trained soldiers, but munitions and guns are available to meet the foe on more favourable terms.

I am sure this Council with Canada as a Colony of the British Empire, together with the Allied powers, will place on record their feelings of regret at the loss of so great a warrior as Earl Kitchener.

Your Council have, as all know economized as far as possible due to the prevailing conditions at present and the different chairmen and others in whom authority has been vested, will report to you either at this or the fall session the progress of the different departments.

I am indeed grateful to all for the honour you have conferred upon me, and recognize the unstinted assistance and advice that has been given me up to the present and look forward to the same harmony and progressiveness for the balance of the year.

C. J. DARLING, Warden.

MILITARY NEWS

men, but nothing compared with the Huns. Our artillery are always on the job and when most of our guns open up you can imagine the noise. Of course old Fritz sent over some hot ones but we more than returned them. I came out early Sunday morning and we had rather a difficult proposition coming out as Fritzy was shelling and we had a gun to carry. Anyway we were none the worse off for our experience, and we reached a small village, and of course a shell had to drop there. When we left there I noticed quite a few bursting around there, but it was a terror the way our guns were replying. Frits has to go some to beat our artillery. We are doing quite a bit of work up at the trenches lately as we go up twice a week. Things have been pretty hot up here this last two weeks and we have been pretty busy I tell you. We have not had a rest for a week as we have been kept going. The Huns will never break through here. They have tried but failed every time, and lost thousands of men, while our casualties would be light compared with their's.

Well this is all the news this time. The weather has been dandy up till now, and it has turned to rain. I wish the weather would stay good till the war is over.

Well I must close. I hope the boys of your city are coming forward to do their bit. I am sure I am glad I am doing mine and the rest of my brothers. Hoping this letter reaches you safe, as it leaves us boys.

Yours sincerely,
Pte. M. R. Montgomery.

The following Peterborough boys left yesterday morning with the first draft for the 74th Battery: Frank E. Patterson, H. W. Gray, W. A. Stevenson, J. A. Murdock, R. R. Elliott, G. W. Powell, S. A. Shook, J. E. Howden, A. L. Rickabey.

Lance-Corp J. Hans of the 93rd Battalion, who has been home on leave from Barriefield Camp, will return to Kingston to-morrow.

Ptes. A. Walker and McIntosh, who have been employed on the local recruiting staff, and Pte. McNaughton, who has been acting as Military Police, here have been ordered to report to Barriefield camp at once.

The announcement yesterday that the 93rd Battalion was to go overseas soon was received with excited delight. Every member of the 93rd seems anxious to leave Barriefield as soon as possible.

SUNDAY'S ORDERS.

Following are the battalion orders by Lieut. Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F. Number 145 Headquarters Barriefield Camp. June 18th, 1916.

PARADE TO-DAY—

8.30 a.m.: The Battalion will parade on Battalion Parade Grounds for Roll Call, etc., and march east of Administration Building for Church Parade at 9.00 a.m.

The Roman Catholics will fall out after Roll Call and march in rear of Battalion and form up in front of Administration Building. This parade will be in charge of Lieut. Eastwood.

W. W. ARMSTRONG, Lieut. Assistant Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

Despite rumours to be contrary, Mr. E. B. Rogers, 147 Hunter street, East has received no further definite word respecting the fate of his son, Lieut. Harry Rogers, who has been missing since the recent fighting on the western front in which the Canadians played a prominent part.

MURDEROUS ATTACK ON GIRL AND MOTHER

TORONTO, June 20.—Attacked by a jealous lover, Olga Stasiuwe, aged 22, and her mother, Mrs. M. Stasiuwe, and Harry Jessel, all of 340 Adelaide street, west, were beaten almost into insensibility with a short crowbar, and were taken to the General Hospital early yesterday morning. As a result of the assault the police are now looking for Pietro Dimetroff, alias Pater Dmytrin, who was formerly engaged to the girl, but to whom the mother objected, causing the engagement to be broken off. They are also endeavoring to find an unknown companion of Dimetroff.

According to the story the police have been able to patch together, two men entered the house at 340 Adelaide street, which is the property of Jessel, and after trying the door of Jessel's room and also those of the other boarders, went to the room which the women occupied. One of the men, it is declared, then attacked the woman with the crowbar, inflicting serious injuries.

Aroused by the noise, Jessel, by throwing himself against the panels of the door, managed to break his way out of his room, but before he could get to the assistance of the women he was struck in the face and was badly cut. The men then made their escape, but Jessel shortly after recovered sufficiently to notify the police.

John Karnots, who with another man was seen hanging around the house in the morning and who ran as the police approached him, was arrested, and is being held as a material witness. In the Police Court yesterday morning, he was charged with complicity in the assault, and remanded for one week.

SLACKER TELLS HOW HE BECAME A MAN

First day—Caught 10 o'clock train to Bouremouth. All "smokers" full up with khaki. Had to get with lot of women and kids. Rotten journey. Couldn't smoke. Kids shouting and screaming and treading on feet most of the time. Daren't say anything fear of having some nasty remark chucked at me about khaki. All the women appeared to have husbands and brothers fighting. Talked about nothing else. Frightfully boring. Got out at Southampton for a drink. Wanted it. Some chap in khaki taken my seat when I got back. Couldn't very well ask him to give it up, although my bag was on rack overhead. Women glared at me as if they thought I was going to. So got the bag down and managed to find seat in next compartment. More khaki. Wish to goodness wasn't so tall. Luckily look a bit pale after eleven months in city. Sighed heavily and gasped a bit when I sat down. Seemed to work. Khaki began to look sympathetic instead of sarcastic. Jolly glad to get to Bouremouth, though. Found decent diggings. First thing, landlady shows me photographs of sons and husband, nephews and uncles, in khaki.

THE "FREEZING EYE"

Think it as well to say am down for my health. Go out for a stroll after tea. Plenty of nice girls about. But, good Lord, what a frosty lot. All looked across the road, or in the shop windows as I came along. Plenty of girls with khaki, though. Lot of savage-looking old men about, too. Rude old devils. Made up for the girls not looking by glaring. Rotten being glared at by old men. Tired glaring back. Wish to goodness I looked a bit older. Mooned about round the pier, on the off-chance of picking up a decent girl. Nothing doing. Plenty of them joy riding with khaki though. Went into hotel for a drink. Khaki playing billiards. Went round to the cinema. A bit dark there. Audience nearly all girls—with khaki. Didn't know whether to clap the khaki pictures or not. When I did, girl in front looked round and sneered, and said to the khaki chap with her, "Easy to cheer, isn't it?" When I didn't clap, another girl looked round and scowled. Had to stand up and take hat off at God Save the King. Wish to heaven wasn't so tall, and was bald. Back to digs for supper. Not much of a holiday up to now. No girl. Rotten solitary drink. And being glared at right and left.

BLUFF THAT FAILED.

Second day—Happy thought when shaving. Would put on limp. Limped down to Old Christchurch road. Stopped to look in hosier's shop window. Heard one girl say to another: "Look, that poor fellow has been wounded at the front, I expect." Meaning me. Felt rotten. "Not he!" the other one answered. "He's not even tanned; and look at his hands. He's no soldier". Dropped the limping business. Saw Bottomley was going to appeal for recruits at the Winter Garden. Wondered whether I should go and hear him. Just remembered I wanted a soft shirt. Went into hosier's. 'Shirt, sir?" said the fool behind counter. "Khaki, of course, sir?" Didn't like to say no, so bought a beastly khaki-coloured soft shirt. Nothing to do. Decided to go and hear Bottomley after all. Did. Never looked at it in that light before. Went back to diggings—thinking.

Third day: Fed up with Bournemouth. Caught the 10 o'clock to town and enlisted in the Royal Fusiliers. Going to have a real holiday now!—John Bull.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

FROM THE ENEMY

CANADA IS NOT SAFE

is more than a motion picture. It is the most astounding achievement in the history of motion pictures.

If you have a drop of red blood in your veins, you will experience in witnessing this production a thrill such as you have never known before.

You will see the enemy approaching, the powerlessness of New York, the weakness of its forts and defences. You will see the havoc wrought by the enemy's howitzers, sub-marines, airships; by its shells, shrapnels and bombs.

You will see the most beautiful sky line in the world in flames, the metropolis of the western hemisphere devastated.

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

It was written by J. Stuart Blackton and vitagraphed under his personal supervision.

Scores of prominent Americans in the army and navy and administrative circles have contributed to its preparation.

MR. CHARLES RICHMAN, the distinguished actor, heads a cast of eminent Vitagraph stars—a cast containing twenty-five thousand National Guardsmen, five thousand horses, eight thousand supernumeraries.

The Astounding Pictorial Demonstration will prove it to you. Hudson Maxim says so, American Generals say so, leading men of the Press, the Pulpit and Parliament, have this awful truth so mercilessly exposed in "The Battle Cry of Peace," the sense of Film realism

GRAND OPERA HOUSE, JUNE 26, 27 AND 28

Canadian Military Endorsement

MILITIA AND DEFENCE

Toronto, March 21st, 1916

TO THE PEOPLE OF CANADA:

After seeing the motion picture "The Battle Cry Of Peace" we are unqualifiedly of the opinion that it is the most effective recruiting medium that has ever been used in this country.

The very realistic portrayal of what would happen were this continent invaded by a powerful enemy and the terrible scenes depicted in the thrillingly realistic way, in which they are shown in this great film, should make every man who is not now in khaki rush to the colours.

It is absolutely convincing proof that the best way to defend our homes from the invader is to prevent him from ever landing on our shores, and the only way to do this is by crushing him in Europe so that he cannot come here.

The scenes shown are reproductions of outrages that have occurred all over Belgium, France, and other European countries that have been over-run by the ruthless Hun.

This picture should be seen by every man who is not in khaki, and if the women, too, could witness the harrowing sights that are so vividly depicted in this wonderful picture, it is difficult to believe that they would any longer hold back their men from doing their duty.

Germans Let Down Baskets Full of Grenades on Vaux Defenders

Paris, June 20.—The last message received from Major Reynal, commander of Fort Vaux, before the fortress fell into the hands of the Germans a week ago, was made public here today. The message read: "We are reaching the limit. Officers and soldiers have all done their duty. Vive la France."

Since the beginning of the real attack on the fort in March the Germans fired no less than 8,000 projectiles daily and in the last days before its fall this number was greatly increased, according to details of the fighting given out officially to-day.

COMMUNICATION STOPPED.

An "eyewitness" is quoted as saying: "What the infantry was powerless to realise was accomplished by artillery. For a long time there was only one outlet at the fort which could be utilised.

There was a subterranean passage to the northwest access to which later became impossible. Then followed the cutting of communications.

"The men suffered greatly from lack of water but held out occupying and utilising the ruins in the interior. In windows and between the ruins of the shattered walls machine guns were installed and barricades erected at all corners. All about the outer works the bodies of Germans were thick.

BASKETS OF GRENADES

"The combat continned under extraordinary conditions. The Germans conceived the idea of filling baskets with grenades. These were let down by cords from windows of buildings dominating the French positions, and then exploded on the top of defenders. The garrison fought on, but human force was reaching the limit of endurance. On the morning of the 9th Stretcher Bearer Venier led a number of wounded who did not want to be captured through an airhole where they escaped. Others crawled toward the French line through the piles of corpses and heaps of debris.

"Later aviators observed some great clouds of smoke and an explosion. On the 7th the Germans announced the capture of the fort. In reality they captured only worn out men among uninhabitable ruins."

OBITUARY

MRS. MARKS.

Mrs T. K. Stabler received the news of the death of her aunt, Mrs. Marks which took place at the home of her daughter, Mrs Randell, Sea View, Pandora, England. She passed peacefully away at the age of 99 years an 6 months she was a sister of the late Mrs. George Westlake.

Machine is Used To Plant Trees

Sets Out Between 10,000 and 15,000 Forest Seedlings a Day and Does it Well

A machine which plants from ten to fifteen thousand forest tree seedlings a day is now being used at the Letchworth Park Forest and Arboretum, in Wyoming county, N. Y., according to officials of the Forest Service, who are acting as advisers in the work. Previously the planting has been done by hand at the rate of 1,200 to 1,500 trees a day to the man. The machine was designed to set out cabbage and tomato plants, but works equally well with trees. It is about the size of an ordinary mowing machine and is operated by three men and two horses. One man drives the tear, while the other two handle the seedlings.

The machine makes a furrow in which the trees are set at any desired distance, and an automatic device adjusts where they should be dropped. Two metal tired wheels push and roll the dirt firmly down around the roots. This is a very desirable feature, it is said, because the trees are apt to die if this is not well done. Two attachments make it possible to place water and fertilizer at the roots of each seedling. Another attachment marks the line on which the next row of trees is to be planted.

No cost figures are available yet, but officials say that the cost will be much less than when the planting is done by hand. It is stated that the machine can be used on any land which has been cleared and is not too rough to plow and harrow.

County Council Get Almost Par For 5 Per Cent. Debentures

All the members of the County Council responded to the June session roll call at the Court House this afternoon. They had gathered from all parts of the country, and several of those from the remoter sections were apparently fatigued by their long journey, since they were inclined to nod during the usual routine business, such as the reading of the minutes, grand jury report, and similar monotonous presentations. However, there is a week's work ahead, with the question of county roads looming up as one of the most important that will be discussed this session.

A by-law authorizing the borrowing of $6,000 for bridge construction was read a third time and passed.

The tender of R. C. Matthews & Co., Toronto, offering $5961 and accrued interest for the County's $6,000 debentures at 5 per cent., was accepted on motion of Mr. Squire, seconded by Mr. Ketchen.

Some of the other tenders were Wood and Gundy, $5608; Canada Bond Co., $5,868.74; A. E. Ames $5,896; Brent Thompson $5,846.

A. J. McWilliams of Bridgenorth applied for the position of caretaker of Chemong ridge. Referred to Committee on Appointments.

County Crown Attorney Hatton informed the Council that the County was responsible for the provision of the rent, lighting, heating and caretaking of his office as Crown Attorney. These aggregated $350.00.

Coun. Clerk Elliott reported that the late Crown Attorney R. E. Wood had occupied an office adjoining the Law Library. For the enlargement of the library the attorney's office was added to it some years ago.

There is now no room at the Court House for such an office. One of the councillors remarked that there was lots of room, but it was scarcely the quality Mr. Hatton was seeking.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S GIFT

Capt. J. H Burnham presented the county with a large group picture of the 93rd Battalion. A resolution of appreciation was passed on motion of Mr. McKee, seconded by Mr. Squire.

Mr. F. L. Ro write that group pictures would be advanced 50 cents on account of the cost of materials. Only seven of the 1915 Council had purchased groups and the work was done at a loss.

LADY FATALLY BURNED IN RESCUING CHILD

OWEN SOUND, June 21.—H. E. D. Lupton, a well-known Owen Sounder, was called to Ottawa Sunday on a sad mission. On Saturday he received a wire informing him that his fiancee, to whom he was to have been married on Thursday of this week, was dying as a result of burns and it was in order to see her before she died that Mr. Lupton left.

Miss Edith Cooke, the young lady received her burns in attempting to rescue a small boy from a burning building. She accomplished her task successfully, but in doing so was burned so badly that blood poisoning set in and there is no hope of her life being saved.

She is a member of the Fellowship of the Royal College of Organist, England, and had just returned from England in order to marry Mr. Lupton. Mrs. H. Rummsey of 9th street east, Owen Sound, is a cousin.

RAISING THE PRICE FINE PIECE OF WORK IN MARINE HISTORY

Stake of $90,000 if Wrecked Steamer is Landed in Port Aright.

SARNIA, June 21.—The raising of the steamer Price and the towing of the wreck three miles closer to the mouth of the St. Clair River was a great surprise to the people of this city, it being the general impression that it would require a long time to get the boat in shape for raising and then weeks before she would be brought to the top.

The wreckers, according to inside information first visited the wreck and made an examination of the hull, at which time they found that the boat had been hit by another freighter, having a large section of her port side torn out by the contact. They then proceeded to have a diver drill a hole into the forward section of the bottom and into this was fastened a strong rubber hose. The powerful air compressing pumps of the tug Favourite were then put to work with the result that the water was gradually forced from the forward part of the hull and the air lifted her to the surface until about 200 feet of her hull was out of the water and the bottom section of the bow was up about 20 feet.

The wrecker Favourite and the powerful tug Michigan were then made fast and after considerable work started the wreck towards the shallow water at the lower end of the lake. For about three miles the boat was thus tugged along, the after section resting on the bottom part of the time. The boat finally touched hard on the bottom after the three-mile trip and the wreckers, unable to lift her any higher out of the water with the compressed air, owing to the hole in her side, were forced to leave her there while they wanted for pontoons and wrecking equipment to be brought to the scene of the wreck from the company's headquarters at Cleveland.

This equipment is expected to arrive here at any time now and as soon as it does the pontoons will be placed alongside the after-section of the boat and will thus lift it high enough to get it closer into the river.

Big Job Still Ahead.

Whether the wreckers will attempt to turn the boat right side up at some point in the lake or will bring it into the river and do the job here is not known. It is thought that the job will be a difficult one no matter which place is chosen.

The Great Lakes Wrecking Company which has the contract to bring the boat into port gets $90,000 if successful, and nothing if the job is not completed. The boat must be brought to port and righted.

HENRY FORD'S SON TO WED.

The engagement of Miss Eleanor Clay, daughter of Mrs. William Clay, of 63 Boston Boulevard east, Detroit, to Essel B. Ford, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, is announced in Detroit. Essel B. Ford is 23 years of age. He has been closely associated with his father's enterprise—in fact, the tractor plant at Dearborn bears the name of Henry Ford and son. The younger Mr. Ford has learned the automobile business department, he has worked in the shops and offices like any other employee. When Henry Ford went abroad on his peace expedition, he gave Esel Ford power of attorney to act for him. Miss Clay is a niece of the late Joseph L. Hudson, founder of the J. L. Hudson Co., who was a brother of Mrs. Clay.

Russian Advance On Lemberg Is Proceeding From Two Directions

Centre is Held Up, But Further Progress on Wings is Expected to Compel Evacuation by the Austro-Hungarians of the Lines West of Tarnopol---Connection Between the Teutonic Armies is Broken and All Bukowina is Open to Occupation of the Tsar's Forces as Defenders Take Refuge in the Carpathian Fastnesses.

CONFIDENT OF TRIUMPH

PETROGRAD, June 21.—Russians have occupied several additional towns in Galicia. Many prisoners and guns were taken.

With an average Austrian retirement of twenty-five miles over the entire Volhynian and Galician front, except in the immediate region of Tarnopol; with the Russian seizure of Czernowitz and the flight of the southern Austrian army toward the Carpathians, and with the Russians closing in upon Lemberg from two directions, the operations on the southwestern front have reached the crucial point where, it is believed here, the Austrian armies either must make a final stand or by their further retreat automatically compel a general retirement of the German army positions which they have held against the Russians for nearly a year.

Such a stand, in the unanimous opinion of military officials here, will be an impossibility, as the separated Austrian armies are unable to communicate with each other, and, all available troops and reserves having been called up, a quick rehabilitation of the crippled armies of the Austrians is manifestly unlikely.

The prevailing confidence in the speedy consummation of a Russian triumph over Austria is reflected in all the comments of the newspapers. The Petrograd Gazette says:—"The thought we have all lived with since the beginning of the war—a final victory over Austria—is now at hand. Soon the last notes of the swan song of the Dual Monarchy will be heard."

The Austrians are concentrating their forces in an attempt to ward off a Russian advance on Lemberg, but according to the latest despatches, the Russian troops, pressing along the Dubno-Lemberg railway, with Radziloff well in their rear, are close upon the Galician frontier town of Brody, which is nearly half way to Lemberg.

The other Russian advance on Lemberg being directed from a point north of Bucsacz toward Halicz, from which latter, to win the road to Lemberg is easy, and almost unfortified. The effect of the advance of these two lines is to place the Austrian centre, near the Tarnopol extended position, in great danger, and an Austrian collapse here is considered inevitable by the military observers.

COMMUNICATION IS CUT OFF.

The occupation of Czernowitz by the Russians has completely severed connections between the northern and southern armies. It also has enabled the Russians to establish direct connections from the frontier to Sniatyn by the shortest and most convenient route, which will greatly facilitate the Russian progress toward Kolomea, and, by obviating further the necessity of a turning movement, allow the Russian southern forces to advance solidly from the Czernowitz region westward.

According to Colonel Shumsky, the military critic of the Bourse Gazette, the taking of Czernowitz means the Russian occupation of the whole of Bukowina, since there are no defensive lines on the way to the Carpathians. The writer says it is apparent from all recent reports that the first shock of the Russian attack has subsided and that the period of lightning assaults, terminating in the wholesale capture of prisoners and the penetration of the Austrian lines will now be succeeded by a steady and stubborn struggle, in which the shaken Austrian forces, aided by considerable German reinforcements, have sufficiently recovered themselves to be capable of sharp counter attacks, which are becoming more and more frequent. Upon the success of the resistance, Colonel Shumsky adds, depends not only the fate of Lemberg but the situation of the German armies, which, with Lemberg in Russian hands, necessarily would be forced to retire along the whole of the northern front.

Saskatchewan Crop Report

Reports received from the Saskatchewan department of agriculture from their staff of telegraphic correspondents indicate that the recent rain has been general throughout the province, and while it delayed seeding to some extent, conditions are generally satisfactory.

Wheat and oat seeding are practically completed and barley and flax to the extent of at least 50 per cent. Some re-seeding was necessary on account of the high winds, and one report shows slight damage by cutworms. Wheat is making good growth, and is on the average from two to three inches in height; oats are also making good growth.

Live stock is shown to be in good condition, with an average increase, although in some districts some loss was sustained owing to the long and severe winter. Pastures and grasses are well up to the average condition.

Boselli Says Italy Will Fight to End

Rome, June 21.—Declarations of the intention of Italy to fight until the allies have attained a decisive victory were expressed by the new Premier, Paolo Boselli, in his first interview with newspaper correspondents.

The Common wealth House of Representatives has agreed to grant £250,000 towards the Australian soldiers' repatriation fund— to be devoted to the needs of retired soldiers and their dependents.

And this merely indicates the general saving in every item of upkeep in which the Ford possess a big advantage over any other make of car.

An assembly of Ford spare parts—enough to build the touring car complete—cost only $40 more than the standard list price of the car, while on the average car priced around $1000 and less a complete set of spare parts costs $941 more than the car—over twenty times the Ford excess cost.

And yet tests conducted by one of the most authoritative Government laboratories in the world have shown that the quality of Ford constructive material is actually superior to that in most of the best cars made.

GERMANS HAVE LOST BIG MEAT FACTORY

LONDON, June 20.—Dutch and Swiss reports describe food riots which took place in Aix-la-Chapelle and Munich on Saturday. There were stiff fights with the police, who quelled the rioters after several charges. It is stated that the crowd demonstrating in Munich clamored for peace, denouncing the war.

The Kierle Zeitung says a big army meat curing factory at Halberstadt burned down. Two million pounds of canned beef and an enormous quantity of uncanned meat were destroyed, the paper says. The fire is said to have been of incendiary origin.

Germans Silent Under a Defeat In the Argonne

(From Mr. H. Warner Allen, the representative of the British Press with the French army.)

Forest of the Argonne.

It was one of those little operations which have been daily taking place for the last twenty months all along the French front. It was a question of straightening out the line, of driving out the Germans from a point of vantage which was annoying the front trenches and the whole affair took place in ground which had been torn to pieces not only by shells but also by mine explosions. We arrived toward the end of the operations. The ground had been prepared by a preliminary bombardment, which the artillery officers proudly declared was a model of its kind. The infantry officers said the whole thing was infantile in its simplicity; the artillery had killed or paralyzed the Boches and wrecked their defences; then the infantry had come out and carried the position. The official communique gave the whole affair just one line.

SENT 250 HIGH EXPLOSIVES

As a preliminary to the operation the men had been withdrawn from the advanced trenches at the point where the assault was to be made, for the opposing line was only nine or ten yards apart and the best artillery in the world cannot be accurate within so small a limit. The danger of French shells bursting in French trenches was too great to be risked. The evacuation accomplished, two hundred and fifty six-inch shells were neatly thrown on to the coveted point of the German lines. These shells it was reckoned would be more than sufficient to demolish all the German shelters and machine guns, and to stupefy any of the enemy's men who might have been lucky enough to escape the bombardment. Meanwhile the 75's opened a feu de barrage to the left and right of the doomed position, so that no help could come from either side, and the enemy might be discouraged from an attack on the evacuated trenches.

The guns did their work beautifully and when the storm of six-inch shells had finished, the storming party dashed out with bayonet and grenade. There was scarcely any resistance. The grenade or the bayonet accounted for every German left alive and in a few minutes the French had thrown aside their weapons of offence and were working as only men who knew that their lives depend on their industry can work, to strengthen their position.

GERMAN GUNS SILENT.

Up in the observation post we watched the Frenchmen working feverishly at their sandbags in an agony of expectation. Surely the German artillery was going to open upon them and wipe them out before they had time to raise a rampart of defence? But except for the crack of a rifle and an occasional grenade the silence was broken only by the roar of guns far away. Each moment the bank of sandbags grew higher and we knew that as the bank rose the trench behind was deepening. At last it became clear that for the moment at any rate the enemy had decided to sit down under his defeat, and was in no mood to sting back. It may have been that at the moment all his ammunition was needed for the wild attempt that was being made against Verdun, a few miles farther east, and of which we could hear the distant bombardment.

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WILL YOUNG WOMEN PROPOSE AFTER WAR

The war will make it necessary for very many girls to propose marriage to the man they love, says London Answers.

Does this startle you? It is true, however, sadly, tragically true — because most of the men to whom girls will offer their love will be those who have been maimed, broken in the war.

It is easy seen that many of these returned heroes — blind, limbless, crippled, broken in health — will be cowards when it comes to making the girls they love to marry them. Although they will have dared death, and stood unflinching in the stress of battle, they will be asking themselves how it can be possible for them, with their maimed bodies or disfigured faces to ask a beautiful woman to marry them. They will lack the courage to do so, many of them, and women must step forward and substitute their own.

MAY I BE YOURS

Girls should and must propose in such cases. And why should not girls propose—and be proud of the fact that they have taken into their own hands the direct choosing of their life-partners

"Surely the most foolish of all the many foolish conventions that ruin human joy is the decree that woman must wait passively to be wooed," writes Mrs. Maud Churton Braby, the well known authoress. "Now, why should they? Why can't they be natural and show their feelings?"

Another famous authoress—Mrs Alec Tweedie—writes:

"It seems to me the most preposterous thing that women should not propose. Of course they should! They ride the hobby horse of dreams to the winning post. Love to some people is an incident, to others an accident, to most women of life.

It is women who change their entire lives by matrimony. It is women who take on colossal responsibilities by matrimony. Every detail falls to the lot of the woman, and therefore woman should surely be allowed to choose the man for whom she feels herself able to work and give."

WOMAN'S RIGHT.

"Let women have the right to propose, and the sooner the better. It would do away with much of the unhappiness that exists in the world today. Many are the cases in which a woman knows that a man is in love with her, but the man hesitates to propose for various reasons—perhaps, because he is too nervous, perhaps because he does not know whether his suit would be acceptable, and is afraid of a rebuff, perhaps because he has a fear that his position might not be attractive to the girl.

"I myself know of two cases where a man and woman have been in love, and the man has failed to propose for one or other of those reasons, or because the woman had not given him what he thought to be sufficient encouragement. In both cases the men and women are now married to others; but probably if the truth were known they still love each other."

Of course the cynic will say: "Have not the women always proposed?" Certainly many men would not have spoken the words that gained them wives if it had not been for the gentle encouragement given to them by the girls. But that is not proposing.

Leap year or no leap year, there are signs abroad that woman, in her new found freedom of thought and action, will add to her other conquests the right to say to the man she loves:—"Will you marry me?"

There are very few people indeed, be they ever so rigidly conventional, or benightedly old-fashioned who dare say that this is not proving to be for the good of man, of woman, of childhood, and therefore of the nation.

With he new-won independence, which enables her to earn her living in trades and professions hitherto closed to her, woman is no longer "up against" the question of getting married in order to obtain a home, food, clothes and shelter—in short as a "trade." So she can now afford to look around and choose as husband only the man she is positive she loves and wants.

In these circumstances therefore why should it still not be "the thing" or "nice" or her to go to that man and say, ashamed: "I love you! Will you be my husband?"

What do you think about it?

GLADDENED BY HIGH PRICES.

Thrifty Swiss Farmers Pleased With Eggs at 3 Cents Apiece.

Under the title "We Have Never Had Better Times" the Emmenthaler Nachrichten prints the following description of the prosperity which the high prices of foodstuffs due to the war has brought to the farmers of Switzerland:

"It is evident that in connection with the general advance in prices the rates for fodder have reached an unheard-of height. But this does not cause the farmers to talk about hard times. On the contrary, the Swiss agriculturists have hardly ever had a better chance to make money. Everything can be sold at high prices.

"Potatoes are bought at the stations by the middlemen at 20 cents a bushel, and in the market at Berne an egg is worth 3 cents at present. Beer cattle and other livestock find a ready sale at enormous prices in the markets or even at home. For a long time the price a pound live weight for hogs has been maintained at 2 cents. Milk is also dear. Any one who takes up truck farming also makes big profits. The market women smile with satisfaction at the good business being done. Grain also brings an excellent price. Raising hogs pays. At the last sale on the Aarberger market three weeks old pigs brought from $15 to $18 a pair. Surely a pretty sum for takes up truck farming also makes two neat little animals.

"The farmers openly declare 'Those of us who don't get ahead now are themselves to blame. We never have had better times.'"

WIDOWS

According to the census of 1910 there were 3,167,232 widows in the United States; 2,026,684 were between fifteen and sixty-four years of age; 702,000 were below age forty-five. Can you picture the struggle of the thousands thrown upon their own resources and fighting for an existance for themselves and their children? How many of the 2,465,396 above the age of forty-five are dependent upon relatives and the public for support? Among all these hundreds of thousands there is not one single inmate of a poor house, home for the aged, or friendless who was provided with a monthly income under a life insurance policy. What a splendid opportunity right now for husbands to protect widows of this land.

Any husband can do so by purchasing a Guaranteed Income policy from THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA. The Company guarantees payment to wife at your death of any sum you choose followed by a like amount on the same day of every month as long as she shall live.

Get the particulars of this valuable policy as it should be in every home.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Cryptogram

By F. A. MITCHEL

It is said that "all's fair in love and war." Whether or not the adage is true, this story is an illustration of it. Imogene Blair, a comely lassie of eighteen and the idol of her parents, must needs be debating whether she should accept Frank Shackelford as a husband. The only reason why she hesitated was because Frank was worthless except for one purpose—that was to lead cotillions. When Imogene saw him marshaling the dancers, his breast covered with favors and looking for all the world like a much decorated generalissimo, she admired him immensely, and when he stood in the middle of the ballroom and gave his orders by clapping his hands she thought him a god.

Imogene, notwithstanding her parents' serious objections, accepted Mr. Shackelford, and there was before her the honor of being the wife of a prominent society man and cotillion leader. Her father, a hard headed man, who had made a fortune by practical attention to business, was much disgruntled by his daughter's choice. His chief clerk, John Stebbins, had been attentive to Imogene, and Mr. Blair had hoped she would marry him. John was Mr. Blair's financial man and as steady as a church. But it was not to be expected that a man who did not even dance could compete with a terpsichorean captain-general with his breast pinstaked over with decorations.

John knew that he was the favorite of the parents of the girl he loved, but disdained to avail himself of this advantage. One day Mrs. Blair came to him after her daughter's engagement and showed him a piece of paper on which was written "O. L. G. R. D. L. 17." and asked him his opinion as to what it all meant. John suspected what it was, but he was considerable of a wag, a great favorite with the lady who showed it to him, and, withal, quite apt at invention. After studying it awhile he said:

"I think it's a love message. The first two letters, O. L., probably stand for O, Laura. I. is the ninth letter in the alphabet. So we have O, Laura, I. The meaning of the next letter, R., we must fill in after we have finished. U. is the twenty-first letter of the alphabet, or you. The whole may read, 'O, Laura, I —— you.' Quite likely the letter R. is the initial letter for the word love in some other language than English."

"Just what I thought," said Mrs. Blair, and without stopping to give the young man a chance to confess that he was chaffing her she whisked out of the room.

Now, when Shackelford had visited Imogene one evening he had taken a bunch of letters from his pocket in order to read one of them to her and a bit of paper had slipped from among them and fallen on the floor, slanting as it fell, so that it lay under the sofa on which the couple were sitting. A maid had picked it up the next morning and handed it to the young lady.

The most easily excited emotion in the breast of a young lover is jealousy. Imogene felt sure that her fiance had dropped the paper on which were the letters and figures given above, and these she feared was a cipher message to a rival. She showed them to her mother, who found it convenient to agree with her. Mrs. Blair promised to decipher the cryptogram and called in John Stebbins to help her. Whether or no she believed his flimsy interpretation to be correct, she certainly preferred to consider it so. Taking the paper back to her daughter she gave the meaning John had put upon it.

Imogene was much affected. She told her mother that she would charge her fiance with being in clandestine correspondence with another girl and if he did not make a satisfactory explanation she would break her engagement. Mrs. Blair told her that Shackelford would doubtless trump up an explanation and begged Imogene to act without consulting him. After a long struggle, in which the mother strove to convince the daughter that Shackelford wanted her only for the wealth she would inherit, Imogene was prevailed upon and wrote him a note breaking with him without without giving any reason.

So thin was the evidence on which this conspiracy was based that Mrs. Blair took advantage of the season, February, to whisk her daughter off to Florida and kept her there till the hot weather drove them home. On their return they found Shackelford engaged to a girl whose first name happened to be Laura, with a fortune in her own right.

This was conclusive proof to Imogene that the paper she had discovered was a cipher love letter. Partly to show the recreant Shackelford that she did not love him and partly from the dawn of common sense within her she accepted John Stebbins.

Some time after their marriage John twitted his wife as to her affair with Shackelford. She produced the cryptogram. John looked at it curiously, forgetting that he had ever seen it before.

"What is it?" asked his wife.

"The combination of a safe lock."

"What!"

"Oh, my goodness gracious!"

But Imogene lived to be thankful that she had turned down a dancer for a practical business man and did not mind the way in which the scale had been turned in favor of the latter.

Just So.

Success of a New Remedy For Backache, Kidneys, Rheumatism

Dear Mr. Editor—I suffered for years with backache. Last March I tried "Anuric" and have used this new kidney medicine recently discovered by Dr. Pierce, and it was wonderful the way it eased the pain and gave me relief in such a short time. I have tried several medicines, but "Anuric" is the only one that gave satisfaction. I feel it my duty to recommend "Anuric Tablets" to any one who suffers as I did.

(Signed) Mrs. Margaret E. Snider.

Note: Folks Intown and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N.Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most perfect kidney and bladder your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk ostrechor. If you are a sufferer, go to for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medicine Discovery," a general tonic made from roots with pure glycerine which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

MRS. MAY'S LETTER to WOMEN

More Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a bad case of female ills. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and I took about six bottles. It fixed me up all right. The common symptoms of such a condition—pain when walking, irritation, bearing-down pains and backache, nervousness and disordered digestion—soon passed away. I look much better now than I did before, and I recommend the Compound every time for female troubles, as it did for me all it is claimed to do. You have my permission to publish this letter." Mrs. J. MAY, 3542 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

If you have any of the symptoms mentioned in Mrs. May's letter, remember what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and try it yourself. It is a good old-fashioned medicine, made from roots and herbs, and it has helped countless numbers of women.

If you need special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

A BLIND MAN'S SONG WHICH WON MANY RECRUITS

Men of Haliburton County,
Do you hear the bugle's call?
Do you know that men are gathering
Both from hamlet and from hall?
'Tis the mighty voice of duty,
Bids you all objections pin
To the coat-tail of the coward—
And prepare to take Berlin.

'Tis the voice of Mother Britain
To her sons across the sea;
'Tis the call of trampled Serbia
Who has lost her liberty;
'Tis the call of broken Belgium,
In her sorrow and her pain;
To the men of Haliburton—
Is the call to be in vain?

Hear the mutilated children,
As they toss on beds of pain,
Weeping for the slaughtered parents
They shall never see again;
'Tis the call of wives and mothers
By Teutonic culture slain,
To the men of Haliburton—
Is the call to be in vain?

Veterans of the great rebellion,
Those who broke the half-breed's will,
Heroes of Batoche's battle,
And the fight at Cut Knife Hill,
Hear them shout for Britain's glory,
Britain's honor, Britain's fame;
Oh! ye men of Haliburton—
Is the call to be in vain?

'Tis the spirit of our fathers,
From the ages that have gone;
Men who fought at Balaklava,
Lundy's Lane or Inkerman;
Hear them calling from the distance,
From their pedestals of fame,
To the men of Haliburton—
Is the call to be in vain?

Fred Croft in the trenches fighting
For the Union Jack, our pride;
For the honor of his country
Bruce McKnight has nobly died.
Hear them calling from the trenches,
And the graves of honored slain;
To the men of Haliburton,
Is the call to be in vain?

Don the khaki, men of Minden;
Stanhope, too, must join the fray;
Stalwart men from Haliburton
Are recruiting every day;
Snowden must be represented;
Monmouth and Glenmorgan, too;
Shoulder arms, and face the foeman,
As our fathers used to do.

High above the din of battle,
Let the old flag proudly fly;
Let the deep voice of the nation
Swell the mighty battle cry.
Drive the Bulgar from the stronghold
And the German from the plain.
Men of Haliburton County—
Is the call to be in vain?

By Joseph H. Burns,
(A Blind Man.)

This poem was composed for a public reception given by the town of Minden, Ont., to Sir Sam Hughes. Mr. Burns, a blind man, was cheered.

TRAINED BRITONS FOR THE NAVY

When the war broke out in 1914 Great Britain had 100,000 trained officers and men in her merchant marine, who were drafted into the navy to man the reserve fleet and the immense fleet of patrol boats for duty around the coast, and to chase the submarines. This was a big drain on the merchant vessels and left many without officers or men but it fitted the navy out ready for action.

Big lines like the White Star and Cunard, lost practically all their junior officers and strangers who were not in the Naval Reserve, were engaged to take their places. For thirty-five years before the war the British government paid the Lieutenants and Engineers in the Naval Reserve a retainer of $125 a year after they had passed their examinations for the rank and served a year at sea in a warship. During that period they received the naval pay and rations according to their rank.

They enter the service as cadets and rise by examinations to the rank of Sub-Lieutenant and then Lieutenant, which is the highest grade for efficiency in the Naval Reserve.

Officers and Engineers in the reserve have to do four weeks' drill a year and pass an efficiency test up until they are 45 years old when they are placed on the retired list. During this war the commanders have been allowed to remain in the merchant service while all below that rank have been drafted into the service. Neither officers nor Engineers have to serve four weeks if they can pass the efficiency test in a shorter period. They receive naval pay and rations while working up for the examinations the same as during the year's sea training.

The honorary ranks of Commander and Captain are governed by seniority of service. Sailors and firemen were encouraged to enter the naval service by a retainer of $55 a year, including uniform, on condition that the men did four weeks drill per annum on board a guardship in one of the home ports or on a warship if they were on a foreign station. The men could do a week at a time or any period so long as they performed twenty-eight days' duty out of the 365. During that time they were put on navy pay and received either rations or an allowance in cash as an equivalent.

On the outbreak of war the men are bound to report to a senior naval officer on station if away from home or to the British Consul in port, who would instruct them what to do.

Australians in France, Ready to Finish Off Huns

There is no longer need for secrecy about the coming of the Australian troops to France, says Philip Gibbs in The London Daily Telegraph, and I am glad of that, because for some time now I have been wanting to let people know one of the best things that has happened to us for some time on this front—the arrival of these splendid fighting men who have survived the heroic tragedy of the Dardanelles, and have come, hard and sun-baked, from the Egyptian desert.

It was fine—the first sight of them in France unexpectedly. I came upon them one day in an old town behind the lines, where British soldiers are always passing through to the roads which lead up to the trenches. It was market day, and the Grande Place (not very grand) was filled with booths and old ladies in black, and young girls with chequered aprons over their black frocks, and pigs and clucking fowls and the cheerful clatter of a busy crowd. Suddenly the people scattered, and there was a great rumble and rattle of wheels as a long line of transport waggons came through the square. "By Jove—Australians!"

There was no mistaking them. Their slouch hats told one at a glance, but without them I should have known. They have a distinctive type of their own which marks them out from all other soldiers of ours along these roads of war. They were hatchet-faced fellows who came riding through the little old market town; British unmistakably, yet not English, nor Irish, nor Scottish, nor Canadian. They looked hard, with a hardness of a boyhood and a breeding away from cities or, at least, away from the softer training of our way of life. They had merry eyes (especially for the girls round the stalls), but resolute, clean-cut mouths and they rode their horses with an easy grace in the saddle as though born to riding, and drove their waggons with a recklessness among the little booths that was justified by half an inch between an iron axle and an old woman's table of coloured ribbons. These clean-shaven, sun-tanned, dust-covered boys who had come out of the hell-fire of the Dardanelles and the great drought of Egyptian sands, looked wonderfully fresh in France. Youth, keen as steel, with a flash in the eyes, with an utter carelessness of any peril ahead, came riding down the street

Since then I have seen thousands of them behind the lines where they have been waiting to "go." They have been billeted in areas through which many British divisions have passed after a brief spell of rest, and about these old farmhouses and barns and village inns which will be haunted always by the memory of this British occupation, the Australians have made themselves at home with the French inhabitants. They are glad to be here. Everything is new and good to them (though so old and stale to many of us) and after their adventures in the East they find it splendid to be in a civilized country with water in the sky and in the fields, with green trees about them, and flowers in the grass, and white people who are friendly. When they came up in that train from a southern port in France they were all at the windows drinking in the look of the French landscape, and one of their officers tells me that again and again he heard the same words spoken by these lads of his: "It's a good country to fight for . . . . It's like being home again."

At first they felt very chilly in France for the weather had been bad for them during these first weeks, when the wind has blown cold and rain clouds had broken into sharp squalls. Talking to the men, I have seen them shiver a little, and heard their teeth chatter, but they say they like a moist climate, with a bite in the wind, after all the blaze and glare of the Egyptian sun. One of their pleasures in being here is the opportunity of buying—sweets "They can't have too much of them," said one of the officers, and the idea that these hard fellows, whose Homeric fighting qualities have made a great song in our hearts, should be enthusiastic over lollipops seems to me a delightful touch of character. For tough as they are and keen as they are, many of these Australian soldiers are but grown up children, with a splendid simplicity of youth, and the great gift of laughing.

I saw them laughing when for the first time they tried on the gas masks, which none of us ever leaves behind when he goes near the fighting line. This horror of war on the western front is new to them. Poison gas was not one of the weapons used by the Turks and the gas masks seem a great joke to the groups of Australians trying on the headgear in the fields, and changing themselves into obscene spectres. . . . But one man watching them gave a shudder and said, "It's a pity such splendid boys should have to risk this foul way of death." They did not hear his words, and we heard their laughter.

In one of their headquarters I took tea with a general, who was with them in the Dardanelles, and with other officers who had shared that bad adventure. Outside the windows of the farmhouse the birds of France were singing and a soft rain beat against the panes, and somewhere a church bell was ringing for Benediction. But the general's mind went back all through ten-time to the days on the Peninsula, and his stories were full of the sufferings and troubles of that campaign, when it was hard to get food, and hard to get water, and when no moment of the day and no patch of ground was safe from shell-fire.

"Almighty Heaven, and why the blue blazes have men been brought here at all, at all?" asked an Irish quartermaster, newly arrived in Gallipoli, when he heard that there was no wood or coal for fires, and that water had to be fetched from Shrapnel Gully, where he had just dodged death and that rations had to be carried up under bombardment in the open. "After all that," said the General, "it is good to be in France. At least the men will have some decent comfort when they are out of the firing line."

I stood in a court yard with a young officer, whose grey eyes had a fine clear light, which showed the spirit of the man, and as we talked he pointed out some of the boys who passed in and out of an old barn. One of them had done fine work on the Peninsula, contemptuous of all risks. Another had gone out under heavy fire to bring in a wounded friend. . . . "Oh, they are great lads!" said the captain of the Company. "But now they want to get at the Germans and finish the job quickly. Give them a fair chance, and they will go far."

I think they will, if there is anything like a chance. They have already been in the trenches, surprised to find how near they are to the enemy's lines and not dismayed by the look of the barbed wire out there. Whatever may happen along the western front it is good to have these Australians with us. They strengthen the line and give one a sense of greater power, and take their places by right and merit side by side with our own divisions who have held these lines with noble courage and patience through many months of endless shell-fire. The enemy will be sorry that the Australians have come.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lanesboro, N. S. "Five years ago three cakes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

TO CLEAN A GAS RANGE.

Take all the parts, including the iron tops, the burners, etc. They will lift out easily. Place them in a tub or wash boiler and cover with very hot water. Dissolve half a cup of lye in the water and let them stand for an hour or so or overnight would be better, if you can manage it. Great care should be taken that the hands do not come in contact with the lye water. The head should be turned away from the two when the lye is turned into the water, as it is very disagreeable to get the fumes.

If this is done once a month, or even once in two months, if there is not much cooking, the range will always be perfectly free from grease of any kind.

If your oven turns rusty or smells musty, rub the interior with French chalk every few weeks. This will give it the appearance of an enamelled oven. It is worth trying.

ENGLAND HONESTLY IS ECONOMIZING

A duchess has given up three cars, closed her town house and keeps only one servant.

A marchioness has quit giving dinner parties and travels third-class on the railway.

A viscountess has not bought a new evening dress this year. Eats cold luncheons.

A baron—I am now smoking two-penny cigars.

A member of parliament—I have quit spending my salary.

A barber—I walk to work instead of going by tram.

A stenographer—I go to one less movie a week.

A lawyer's clerk has quit losing two shillings a week playing dominoes.

A Gaiety girl refuses an invitation to dinner because the man who asked her could not afford it.

Army of Helpers Aids Verdun Fight

GREAT PANORAMA OF ENTIRE FRONT, PHOTOGRAPHED BY AIRMEN, KEPT AT THE HEADQUARTERS.

Headquarters, Tenth Army Corps, at the Front, France, May 30.—General Antoine, commander of the Tenth Army Corps, was bending over a military map at his headquarters when M. Painleve, a member of the Cabinet, was announced. General de Castelnau, commanding the western front, had invited the Minister to visit the several corps headquarters near Verdun, and had authorized a representative of the Associated Press to accompany the Minister. In the circuit of several hundred kilometers three corps headquarters were visited—the Tenth Corps, under General Antoine the Fifth under General Hellouin, and the Third under General Humbert.

The commander of the corps and the Cabinet officer exchanged cordial greetings. General Antoine is a man of commanding presence, tall and athletic, a little below middle age, with bronzed face and iron gray hair and mustache. His headquarters were plain to the point of bareness. A rough pine table was in the middle, with a detailed map stretched out, which General Antoine had been studying. Other maps and photographs of sectors, trenches, and various divisions of the works were on the wall, and these with a few pine chairs, made up the furnishings.

M. Painleve was much interested in the chart showing the layout of the fighting and reserve forces, and General Antoine, standing beside the chart pointed out the main points—Verdun, off to the right, then the army corps massed to the west, and then General Antoine's corps doing the work of preparation and forwarding, as well as guarding a considerable sector of the front.

"The photographs show the field better," said the general, leading the way to a large room adjoining.

A score of officers were at work here sorting photographs, developing them, and fitting them together into huge panoramic views, showing every road, and trench and tree. These photographs were taken from the clouds by aviators, and now and then airmen came in with negatives just taken of their section. The whole war zone was laid out in small squares, the aviators minutely photographing each square, and then the squares were fitted together like a jig saw puzzle, making a picture of the whole one. When the edge of a square was too close to a German battery for the aviator to reach in safety, the photograph was taken by a camera lashed to a high pole an held above a trench.

These last trench pictures presented a gruesome scene of the havoc and the desolation where the batteries were doing the worst work—the ground swept of trees and foliage and littered with debris, while twisted trunks extended their distorted arms.

General Antoine, with a group of staff officers, led the way through the mazes of the camp. The place fairly throbbed as the visitors passed along. Wagons, wagons, wagons, stretched away for miles ahead and behind. A great cloud of dust hung over the cavalcade, and the green fields were covered as with frost from the fall of dust. Four horse teams strained along, keeping the ranks close together. Every conceivable sort of war stores was in this moving train—boxes and barrels and bales of food for men and animals, huge wine casks set on end, two to a wagon; ordnance carts piled high with boxes of shells; lorries with ugly looking quick fire guns, and vans loaded with coils of barbed wire and with sharp pointed stakes used in the trenches and chevaux-de-frise.

"And this goes on day and night," said Major Camut. "Yes, it is busiest at night near the front, for the moving is dangerous in the daytime, so that the last laps, near the fighting line, start at dusk and go steadily on through the night."

Besides the activity on the highway, the fields alongside were equally busy. Here a cavalry camp was posted, and horses by the thousand were tethered. At one side a spur of railway had been run to a camp depot, and here freight cars were unloading supplies and the army vans were carrying them forward. Soldiers and camp followers and peasants were working at their innumerable occupations. One group at a crossroad, looked like a market scene in the East, with all races and languages—Africans from Algiers and mongrel Moors from the borders of Tunis and Morocco Senegalese as black as coal and yellow-faced Anamites. Most of the French colonials were in fez and zouave outfit. There were French poilus in their grey-blue uniforms, soiled and grimy, and steel casques and French territorials in the old-time red and blue uniforms with baggy trousers.

The most striking thing in this great field of activity was the regularity with which it was all going on, suggesting surpass of organization. There was no confusion and the machinery of warfare was running with the precision of a watch.

General Antonie and Minister Painleve now turned to the living quarters. Barracks stretched forhalf a mile ahead substantial temporary one-story structures of corrugated iron with an inner double sheathing of heavy paper felt. There was a blast of bugles and a ruffle of drums, saluting the commanding General and the Minister. As the sharp notes sounded hundreds of French soldiers who were camped along the route chatting in groups, sitting at rough benches, and doing their little camp duties, sprang to attention and stood like statues as the General passed by. Those with guns brought the piece sharply to present arms, while most of the poilus, taken unawares in their rough-and-ready garb, were without arms and saluted with the right hand at the cap as the officials passed.

Are the men content with the food? asked the General, halting and addressing by name one of the poilus.

Yes, my General, answered the poilu, his face beaming.

No, my General, they will not eat it.

The poilus was definite in condemning the rice portion of the ration, and had no hesitation in expressing this disapproval to the General. General Antonie asked other questions as to the food, and was answered in the same frank way.

This was a typical encounter between the commanding General of an army corps and a French poilu, and showed the inherent democracy of the French army.

In the barracks the poilus was ranged at attention alongside their long lines of bunks. Everything was spick and span; floors clean, bedclothes piled neatly, mattresses sunning in the windows. There was the same orderly arrangement in the eating quarters, kitchens and elsewhere.

Outside the barracks on the sloping terrace, the poilus had planted artistic flower beds, with huge letters in flowers spelling Joffre, Castelnau, Antoine, and the other commanders. A huge stock of shells rose among these flowers, and the poilus had stood some of the monster shells on end, with a bunch of flowers and a French flag in the noses of the projectiles.

General Antoine took a personal interest in the depot d'ecloppes, as it is called—an extensive organization run by slightly wounded men. General Antoine originated the idea, and it has spread all through the army, these depots back of the front doing scores of helpful little duties for the men on the firing line. Here was an immense laundry turning out a wash of 10,000 pieces.

It helps the man in the trench to have a clean shirt, says General Antoine as he showed the stocks of flannel shirts about to be returned to the men in front.

There were kitchen gardens for fresh vegetables, forges for mending trench tools, smories for cleaning guns, a candle factory and innumerable other activities, all run by soldiers who had lost a finger or the edge of an ear, or had some other slight wound temporarily incapacitating them.

At night the party were General Antoine's guests at a large private residence, requisitioned for army purposes alongside headquarters. It was evident by the home of a well-conditioned family, with spacious corridors lined with sculpture and painting. The dinner was cooked and served by soldiers, and even the menu card was a work of art done by a noted French cartoonist now serving as a soldier in the ranks.

The American expedition to Mexico came up for discussion as the party were leaving and General Antoine said:

"The experience of your army shows that cavalry is still an essential part of army organization. With our trench warfare the idea got about that mounted troops were a thing of the past. But they will always be indispensable for quick movements where elan and dash are needed, and particularly in a flat country. No, the Russians in Mesopotamia and the Americans in Mexico are demonstrating that cavalry is one of the most effective weapons of offense."

Back Was Lame and Ached; Could Do Very Little Work

Suffered Much From Kidney Disease for Years, But Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Doctors had tried to cure this man but failed to get at the cause of trouble probably because they relied on medicines which act on the kidneys only. The strong feature about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is their combined action on liver, kidneys and bowels. In many of these cases the disease is so complicated that ordinary kidney medicines fail, to be of much benefit. Under such conditions Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills usually touch the spot and effect a cure.

Had they been only moderately successful Dr. Chase would never have selected them for world wide distribution. As it was the demand for these pills resulted naturally from their superior merit and there was nothing else to do but supply them in large quantities.

Mr. Simeon Shieloff, Birchbrook Orchards, Birchbank, B.C., writes:

"For several years I suffered greatly from kidney disease. I was weak and could do very little work. My back was lame and ached and I suffer-or much from headaches. Tried doctors and obtained no relief. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended by a friend and after taking four boxes I think that I can say that I cured for I feel as well as I ever did."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Harry Anderson, J.P., who writes:

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Simeon Shieloff and believe his statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

In deference to Fashion's decree we are adding to a dressy blouse in all one material a frill or ruffle or such feature, so that the waist will owe its distinction to an effective finish as well as its clever lines. An example of a blouse of this type is No. 7,778. You will say at once that it is stylish. The collar, that may be rolled high or low at will, is a prominent feature, and there is a shoulder yoke to which the fronts are gathered. This rather aids in the fit of the blouse. The wide revers are stitched to the fronts of the blouse and made dainty with a double row of hemstitching. They give an airy look that appeals, but may be omitted and the fronts of the waist just hemmed. Short or long sleeves will be correct.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. To make a duplicate in size 36 will require 2 yards of 36 inch material.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 10 cents, or 3 for 25 cents.

SERGEANT ORDERED KILLING.

But Dublin Court Martial Acquits Him of Murder Charge.

DUBLIN, June .—Sergeant Robert Flood of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers was found not guilty of the murder of Lieut. A. Lucas of King Edward's Horse, a native of Montreal, and William J. Rice, a brewery employee, by the courtmartial trial yesterday. He was released.

Sergt. Flood was on guard duty at a brewery during the recent rebellion and did not recognize Lucas, who approached him in the darkness. The lieutenant opened a window, which was contrary to instructions. It was testified before the courtmartial that the sergeant ordered the arrest of the lieutenant and later his execution, as well as that of Rice.

Proper Thing Now Is To Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions, should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges during the heated days. There's no need for them any way since the virtues of mercolized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you have been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercolized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of cosmetics and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautifully white, satiny and youthful. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Another effective warm weather treatment—heat tending to cause wrinkles and flabbiness—is a skin tightener, made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Its use (as a face bath) leaves no trace.

WAR INCOME TAXES BIG.

Austrian Levies Ran as High as 45 Per Cent., Report Shows.

Austrian citizens whose incomes have increased more than $101,500 during the war will have to pay a special tax of 45 per cent. on that part of the increase above that amount, according to an Imperial decree of April 18 imposing heavy war taxes upon the increased income for 1914, 1915, and 1916, as compared with the average income for the previous five years. In a report sent by Consul General Albert Halstead from Vienna to the Department of Commerce at Washington the following details of the new law are given:

"Domestic corporations will pay 10 per cent. tax on that part of their increased income that does not exceed 5 per cent. of the invested capital, 15 per cent. for increased income in excess of 5 per cent, but not over 10 per cent. of invested capital, and 5 per cent. more for each 5 per cent. of invested capital until the tax reaches 35 per cent.

"Foreign corporations pay on their increased income as follows: $40,000, 20 per cent.; $40,000 to $81,200, 25 per cent.; $81,200 to $142,100, 30 per cent.; $142,100 to $203,000, 35 per cent.; and above $203,000, 40 per cent.

"No war taxe is imposed should the increased income not be in excess of $2,200 per year. This applies to domestic as well as foreign businesses.

Britons Scorn Near Beer Made By Government

LONDON, June .—"Drink government beer and dodge the headaches." This may be the type of future signs hanging about British public houses.

With the announcement that the official board of control for liquor traffic has acquired many saloons to operate as the board sees fit, it is also stated that the board has discovered a new brand of beer. This beverage is non-alcoholic, but it smells, looks and tastes like the real article. Attention to it has already been attracted in the House of Commons.

The only difference is the headache, said a member of the Board. "A workman drank twenty bottles as a test. He had no headache, but he felt rather full—that is—er—lack of capacity."

DAILY NIP IS TRADITIONAL

British workingmen, with whom the daily nip is traditional, disapprove of the government's beer. Members of parliament and public officials have tested it, and have generally declared in its favour. It contains but 2 per cent of alcohol and costs 4 cents a pint.

Moreover the "beerless beer" may be bought at any time of day. Ordinary beer comes under the category of intoxicating liquor, which the government has decreed must be bought only during certain hours. Ordinary beer contains between eight and 10 per cent of alcohol.

BREWERS DOWN ON SUBSTITUTE

British brewers also are down on the government's beer. They cite scientific facts to prove that beer isn't beer unless it is brewed like beer should be brewed.

Two per cent of alcohol doesn't make beer, they declare, because it isn't enough to keep the yeast germs from kicking up on their hind legs and making the beer sad.

Almost every public house in England has been supplied with the government's beer. But everybody seems to be against the government beer but the government.

LINCOLN PLEADS GUILTY EXPECTS BRITISH MERCY

LONDON, June 20.—After a preliminary hearing on the charge of forgery, at the conclusion of which he was committed for trial, Ignatius T. Lincoln, ex-M.P., who was extradited from New York, pleaded guilty. He expressed the hope to the court that justice would be tempered with mercy.

Lincoln addressed the court for two hours. Toward the close of his speech he said:

"I was driven on by ambition, lured by the deceptive prizes of life. Having lost nearly all my money, I did forge those documents." He added that while he was in the employ of the British Government he devised a scheme to destroy the German navy, but that Great Britain declined to adopt his plan because it would involve disclosures of the whereabouts of the British navy. Describing the manner in which he said he obtained valuable information about the German system of espionage, which he placed at the disposal of the British Government, Lincoln said it was "a devilish lie" to accuse him of treason. On the contrary, he had betrayed Germany.

The Magistrate remarked that he had only two legal points to decide, and was against Lincoln on both of them. Accordingly he committed him to await the action of the higher court at the next session.

During the trial is was stated that Lincoln was extradited to England on a forgery charge at the urgent behest of the British Admiralty so that he would not endanger the British Crown.

Lincoln, conducting his own case in Bow Street Police Court to-day, brought the admission from two witnesses that they had been summoned to see Admiralty officials, who prompted them to push the proceedings against Lincoln.

DREAM FINDS BOX OF GOLD.

William Heil of Bickerville, Pa. asserts that a dream revealed to him the hiding place of a can of gold the property of John Belleman, his predecessor on the farm.

Belleman did not believe in banks and secreted his money. He died suddenly and did not reveal even to his wife where he had it secreted.

Heil's story is that he had a dream that he was digging for Belleman's money in the haymow of the barn. He was about to give up the task when the spirit of Belleman appeared and commanded him to dig on.

The next morning he went to the haymow, dug under the hay and found a tin box. He took it to the home of Mrs. Belleman, who counted the contents, $5,000 in gold, and Heil was handsomely rewarded.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

SCRANTON COAL

Automatically Screened

It's a well-known fact that there is as great difference between different kinds of coal as there is between any other two commodities and it ought to pay coal consumers to do a little experimenting on their own account. We claim that the D. L. & W. Scranton Coal is the cleanest coal known. We claim that it will do more heating than any other coal.

THE RUSSIAN LEFT WING PUSHES FORWARD AT HEELS OF AUSTRIANS

German Report Admits That Russians in South Are Still Going Ahead But Claim that Northern Wing Has Been Pushed Back by the Combined German-Austrian Forces ---Greek Cabinet is Said to Have Resigned.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

BERLIN, June 21.—The left wing of the Russian armies continue to push forward on the heels of the retreating Austrians in Bukowina, but the extreme right wing has not only been halted, but is being pushed back by combined Austro-German forces.

The official statement from the Austrian War Office received here this afternoon admits that the Russians have crossed the River Bereth fighting Austrian rear guards.

The German War Office announces that a Russian force which crossed the River Styr west of Koli, has been driven back, the Germans taking 1,000 prisoners.

LONNDON, June 21.—The Athens correspondent of the Evening Star has cabled that the Greek Cabinet had positively resigned and that King Constantine had summoned H. Zaimis to form a new cabinet.

LONDON, June 21.—Six German divisions, 120,000 men, have been hurried eastward to check the Russian's offensive as bearing down upon Lemberg, Geneva despatches reported to-day. Two German divisions are en route to the Lutsk-Kovel front. The Austrians, supported by German troops, are counter attacking with great vigor on this northern flank of General Brusiloff's armies, and appear to have checked temporarily, at least the Russian advance.

Want To Make More Use of Subs

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, June 21.—Advocates of a strong submarine policy have reopened the campaign for more effective use of the German U-boats.

The German people now realize that hostilities will not end this summer and may drag into next year. Faced with this fact they are united in the desire to see the war pushed with the utmost vigor until the Allies are brought to terms.

This feeling, spreading gradually throughout the Empire during the past few weeks, has been seized upon as a weapon by the men who condemned Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg for yielding to the United States in the recent submarine controversy.

The Chancellor at the present momen has the upper hand. But the recent slackening of the press censorship has been followed by some bold statements regarding the effectiveness o fthe submarine weopen which Germany still possesses, and the renewed activity on the part of the Navy League.

A Monument In Memory of Kitchener

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, June 21.—Premier Asquith this afternoon asked the House of Commons to take immediate steps for the erection of a monument in memory of Lord Kitchener.

"After the recent adjournment of Parliament, Lord Kitchener conferred with a number of his most persistent critics and parted with a complete understanding," said the Prime Minister, eulogising the late secretary. "He was a great dominant personality."

SANCTUARY WOOD DUGOUT ROCKED LIKE CRADLE MID HAIL OF GERMAN SHELLS

"How We Pulled Through I Do Not Know," Writes Bombardier Batten —"The Bombardment Started Like a Clap of Thunder, Thousands of Shells Poured Like Rain in That Little Wood"

We Had Neither Rifles, Ammunition, Nor Grenades, So Our Only Alternative Was To Retreat Quickly

Bombardier Brock Batten, who forwards the following illuminating account of the personal aspect of the fighting at Sanctuary Wood and Zillebeke, is a son of Mr. A. C. Batten, president of the British and Colonial Press, Ltd., and one of the best known newspaper men in the Dominion.

Brock Batten has had ample experience of actual warfare, as he was transferred to Flanders shortly after his arrival in England, and his first duty was the operation of a trench mortar in a first line trench less than a hundred yards from the Teutons' first line.

TORONTO, June 20.—Bombardier Brock Batten, 5 Rathnally Avenue, in a letter to his parents dated "Flanders, Sunday, p.m., June 4," thus describes the battle of June 2 and 3 at Sanctuary Wood and Zillebeke, southeast of Ypres:

"How we pulled through I do not know, but it was queer to see fellows fall in front of you, and have to walk past the dead, and never get touched. It was simply frightful. I cannot fitly describe it. We had finished breakfast in the dugout in a little copse behind the line, when the bombardment started like a clap of thunder. Thousands and thousands of shells poured like rain into that little wood. Our little dugout rocked like a cradle. We stayed there over four hours. Fourteen of us were in it, but soon the shell-shocked and wounded increased the number to thirty.

WERE SAFER IN OPEN FIELDS THAN IN THE TRENCHES.

"Then after four and a half hours some one flashed by the doorway shouting, 'Come on, boys, they are after us.' We had no rifles, ammunition or grenades, so our only alternative was to retreat quickly. Down a communication trench we went, but it was ripped with shells, so we took to the fields. Fritz got after us with coal boxes and machine-gun fire. The latter 'Zip, Zip, Zip,' seemed right around our ears, and a strip travelled along by my feet. One fell a few inches in front, but on we went. A coal box blew Basil Lepper off his feet. He jumped up, however, and was soon in line. Then farther on down we got into a safer trench.

CARRIED DESPATCHES OVER SHELLED FIELD AT NIGHT.

"When we got back to the reserved dugouts our gang got together and reported to headquarters. Our immediate duty was to help the wounded, which we gladly did. We took several poor fellows to the clearing station. That night we carried despatches over a shelled field, but we pulled through all right. Even while we were in these reserve dugouts at the rear Fritz dropped tear shells around. They make the tears run freely, but we had our goggles ready.

FROM THE FRONT TRENCHES ONLY ONE IN TEN RETURNED

"That night I crawled into a dugout, made a bed of sandbags but I could not sleep. My eyes were painful and nerves considerably unstrung. The next morning all that was left of us were sent back to the safety zone.

"Fortunately for Basil and me, we had been relieved after five days in the front trenches only the night before the bombardment. Just one man out of ten has returned from those guns.

"The A.M.C. boys and doctors deserve credit for the way they handled the wounded. Everything worked like a clock."

SIXTEEN CENTS PAID FOR CHEESE THIS MORNING

2,772 Boxes of Cheese Were Boarded This Morning—Board Will Meet Again in Two Weeks

THE BIDDING

Sixteen cents was the maximum price paid on the Cheese Board which met this morning in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. The buyers present were Messrs. Gillespie, Thompson, Kerr, Flavelle, Cook and Morten. The bidding was opened by Mr. Cook at fifteen and a half cents. This was raised to sixteen cents by Mr. Flavelle, who at this price, secured Keene, Shearer, Westwood, Myrtle, East Emily and Fleetwood. At the same price Mr. Gillespie took Warminster, Selwyn, Villiers, Warsaw, Ormonde, Young's Point and Indian River. Mr. Gillespie bid fifteen and fifteen-sixteenths for further selections and took Oakdale, Lang, Norwood and Killarney.

The matter of adopting the "selection" system of selling off the Board was left over until the next meeting, which will be held in two weeks.

List of Factories.

Two thousand seven hundred and seventy-two boxes of cheese were boarded as follows:

Keene	100
Warminster	180
Shearer	205
Selwyn	180

Ladies Will Hold Meeting

Gathering Called For the Council Chamber To-morrow Afternoon

Capt. Manning, recruiting officer for Military District No. 3, has asked that a meeting of ladies be called for 4 p.m. Thursday afternoon. This meeting will be held in the Council Chamber and will be addressed by Mrs. Ogilvie, wife of Col. Hunter Ogilvie, Mrs. (Capt.) Campbell and Mrs. Manning. A large attendance is hoped for and patriotic associations are particularly requested to help to make this a great meeting.

The meeting will adjourn in time to escort the visiting ladies to the Fete, at Judge Hayeks's, for 5 o'clock tea.

93rd BATTALION IS NOT TO LEAVE FOR VALCARTIER AT PRESENT

Orders Received to Remain at Barriefield and Battalion Will Probably Stay There Until It Goes Overseas---Capt. F. E. Birdsall in Charge of Local Recruiting---Army Service Corps Officer Coming---Gossip From Barriefield and General Military News.

BARRIEFIELD, June 21.—The 93rd Battalion of Peterborough and the 109th Battalion of Lindsay will not go to Valcartier camp. Word was received this morning countermanding the previous order, and stating that the two battalions will remain a Barriefield camp for the present, and in all probability until they leave for overseas which, as announced several days ago, will be in the course of a few weeks. Arrangements were being made for the removal of the 93rd to Valcartier camp when the new order came. An advance party composed of twenty-four men from each company had been collected and were ready to leave to-day, while it had been expected that the main body would go down on Monday. These arrangements of course are all cancelled now.

Capt. Everett Birdsall, veteran of Ypres, Festubert and Givenchy, who was wounded in December by a trench mortar bomb and invalided home, has been placed in charge of the local recruiting office, taking charge this morning. Capt. Birdsall is looking well after his arduous experience. Recruiting for the 93rd will continue as long as the battalion is in Canada.

Pte. Jack McFadden of the 93rd Battalion military police, has been ordered to remain in Peterborough for a few days to assist Corp. J. Lemay in local work in connection with the battalion. Any member of the 93rd who overstay their leave or who come without a pass are rounded up and sent back to camp.

ORDER-IN-COUNCIL. P. C. No. 1288 of 1916.

It is published for the information of all concerned that Order-in-Council, P. C. No. 788 of 1916, and contained in this office circular letter, dated the 22nd April, inst. is hereby cancelled, and Order-in-Council P. C. No. 1360 of 1916, as follows, substituted:

His Royal Highness the Governor-General in Council is pleased to order that the Order and Regulations made under the provisions of the War Measures Act, 1914, by Order in Council of 11th April, 1916, (P. C. 788) prohibiting matches in explosives factories, shall be and the same are hereby cancelled, and the following Order and Regulations are made and established in lieu thereof:

Every person who

(a) Takes or attempts to take or assists in taking any matches into any Explosives factory or into any building, enclosure or place wherein the manufacture of explosives is being carried on, or where explosives are assembled or used or kept for the making or production of war material or munitions of war, or

(b) Has matches in his possession while in such factory, building enclosure or place: is liable upon summary conviction to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for any term not exceeding six months or to both, fine and imprisonment.

W. H. ARMSTRONG, Lieutenant.
Assistant Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

BARRIEFIELD June 20.— When the six battalions move from Barriefield camp they will take with them all of their equipment, including tents, tent floors and all such comforts, so that when they arrive in Valcartier this part of the work of establishing a camp will not have to be done all over again.

The Government, it is understood, has agreed to pay $600 to each battalion to cover the cost from the battalion funds which was necessary to install the floors.

The Kingston Whig says: The 93rd Battalion has a Ford motor truck to carry the many articles that are needed in a hurry by the battalion from one point to another and make it independent of a number of transportation applications that now have to be made to the Army Service Corps. The truck was brought down through the muddy roads from Peterborough by Lieut. Ketchum in six hours on Sunday, which certainly establishes a record for quick transport. The machine was presented to the battalion by Mrs. J. R. Stratton, and was given to Lieut.-Col. Johnston in recognition of his wonderful organizing ability in making the 93rd one of the best battalions in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Under the heading "The 93rd's fine band," the Kingston Whig says: On Sunday evening the 93rd Battalion band under Bandmaster Hughes conducted a sacred concert for the men in the new mess tent of the battalion, giving a fine programme. This band is recognized as one of the best in the camp, and brought personal congratulations from Col. T. D. R. Hemming, Camp Commandant, and Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, O.S.O., after the playing at the headquarters mess on Sunday afternoon. The trombone solo by Bandman Gilbert was particularly good.

The 93rd Battalion has in use four field kitchens which are in constant use every day in preparing the food for consumption by the soldiers of that unit. The kitchens were presented some time ago by the municipalities of Peterborough county and also by T. H. Hooper, confectioner.

Barriefield, June 20.—The physical training and bayonet fighting course which started at Barriefield camp on Monday is being held south of the Gananoque road, near the location of the trenches, which are used to demonstrate the expriftions of actual warfare.

PETERBORO' BOYS TELL OF TERRIBLE FIGHTING

PTE. HAROLD LOSEY, a Peterborough boy who left with the 39th Battalion, and who is officially reported wounded. He is a son of Pte. Joseph Losey of the 93rd Battalion.

Local Members of the Mounted Rifles Who Came Through Safely Describe Zellibeke Battle—Only Seventy Out of Seven Hundred in One Mounted Battalion Escaped Uninjured.

SOME THRILLING ESCAPES

Thrilling stories of the terrible battle in the Ypres salient in which the Canadians suffered so terribly, are told in letters received in Peterborough yesterday by relatives of some of the brave lads who came through the ordeal uninjured. A number of these letters are given below, and give a much better idea of the nature of the battle than the meagre news despatches that have come through:

Pte. Chas. Veenman.

Dear Folks,—Just a few lines to let you know I am safe and sound, for I know that long before you get this letter you will have heard about the big engagement the Canadians have been in, and that you will be worrying about me until you hear I am safe. I would have written long before, but I haven't had much time for anything since it happened, and to tell the truth I can't get it off my mind, so you can tell that I am not much good for writing just at present.

We are back getting a rest now, that is what is left of the good old regiment, and we will likely be here two or three weeks until we get reinforcements, and by that time we will be ready to take another crack at Fritz.

Well, mother, I am sorry to say Peterborough lost quite a few of her boys in it, but believe me, Fritz had to pay the price. We had to lay in a ditch of water from ten o'clock in the morning till nearly ten at night before we had a chance of getting out of the hole we were in. There were five of us together, four Peterborough boys and another chap from Cleveland, Jack Foster, Steve Curtis, Billy Field and myself. He happened to be in the far end of the trench and we got cut off from the rest of our fellows, so we couldn't get either up or down the trench. There were nearly ten of us at that time, I can't tell you what became of the rest. We all got buried under the last bit of parapet that was left where we were, but five of us managed to get out.

How we got out is really more than we know ourselves, and by that time our rifles were buried and smashed, so we were left almost helpless.

Well, Jack Foster saw a little ditch just a few yards from the trench, so we beat it for that and lay in it for nearly twelve hours with just our heads and shoulders out of the water. We dared not move on account of the aeroplanes, so we waited till it got dark and were just going to make a dash for where we thought the rest of our boys were when an attack came off and we had to lay down in the water again for another hour. You can imagine how cold we were lying in that water, and what made it worse we didn't have a rifle amongst us, for they had been smashed and buried on us by shell fire, so you can see what kind of a hole we were in.

As soon as the attack was over we made a dash for our lives and got there all right, but how we got there is more than we know ourselves, for we had to go through barbed wire entanglements and everything that would kill. When we got there we found that what was left of the old regiment had been relieved by another regiment, so we had to leave the line and find the rest of our boys.

Well, we are back now enjoying a much needed rest, but we haven't forgotten the Peterborough boys or any of the other boys who are not with us, and they will never be forgotten by us.

Pte. Walter Flowers.

Mrs. W. Flowers, 417 Dublin street, has received the following letter from her son, Private Walter Flowers, of the Mounted Rifles:

"Dear Mother,—Don't worry about getting a card about me being in the hospital. I am as well as can be expected. Our boys got a bad doing up, I got through O.K. without a scratch. I was buried three times by shells, but I got one of it all right. Dave Eldred is at the same hospital, but he came here some time ago with a bad cold. Another chap is here whom you may know. It is Fred Dainton of St. John's fame. He and his brother were in some place when they started to shell the town and his brother was killed, and Fred is now in the hospital suffering from shell shock. I have not heard from Arthur Theobald and the other boys, but I think they are O.K.

The country round about here is beautiful. The crops are splendid, and everything points to future prosperity. I have not seen Jimmy Richardson for three or four months. He is around somewhere and I may run across him any time.

LIEUT. MATTHEWS WAS IN FRONT LINE WHEN ATTACK BEGAN

Peterboro' Officer Had Been Sent Up as Forward Observing Officer Trenches Were Obliterated by Shell Fire and Nearly All Party Are Missing

HE MAY BE A PRISONER

Major D. O. White of the Canadian Field Artillery, writing from France on June 3rd to his brother in Ottawa gives some graphic details about Lieut. Harold Matthews of Peterborough, officially reported missing some time ago. The letter has been forwarded to Mr. T. F. Matthews, and is reproduced below. It is hoped that there may be some further news. The letter was written the day after the commencement of the battle, and one of the boys mentioned Gunner Alex. Butcher, of Peterborough, has since turned up, being officially reported admitted to hospital, wounded in the foot. Major White's letter follows:

Dear Fred,— Please get in touch with Mr. T. F. Matthews of Peterborough and let him know about his son Harold, who was with us. We are changing from 18 pdrs. to 4.5 in. howitzers, and on June 1st had two officers and 14 other ranks with an English howitzer battery for instruction. The forward observing officer of that battery was killed on June 1st and as they were short and F.O.O. work was part of the instruction, Matthews was sent out as F.O.O. (Forwarding Observing Officer). On the morning of June 2nd the Huns began an attack that is still going on. Matthews and Chapman (a sub of our 3rd Battery) and Bruce Hill (a sub of our 4th Battery) were together in the front trench. Our trenches were practically obliterated by shell fire, but Hill made a dash and got out O. K. Nothing has been seen or heard of Matthews or Chapman, or of young Butcher of Peterborough, who was Matthews' orderly and was with him or of the telephonists that were with them.

The Huns first attacked about 1.00 p.m. and later on an officer observing with a telescope saw Germans taking two British officers from near where Matthews and Chapman had been back into German lines, so as this is the best we can hope for, we hope these two were Matthews and Chapman, who were probably in a deep dugout. At the time of writing the Huns are still holding our trench at that point, and we can't find anyone who got back from there, so I'm afraid this is all the information I can give at present.

Charlie Cotton was also up with the guns for enfilade work, just behind our front trench, and nothing has been heard of him either.

It is all a very bloody and awful battle, but at least I think the Hun will not get far, though the cost of holding them and driving them back is too awful.

So far I am very much out of, and we just watch on the distance, which is most aggravating, but we shall probably be rushed in to-night or to-morrow night. Alderson and Bovill are both up with batteries, so Hughes and I are alone with all the men, and we are very restless. Have cabled Mr. Matthews, "Harold missing, probably prisoner."

In haste,
"DONALD."

THE RULING SPIRIT.

A little cartoon in "Le Annales" of the war, published in Paris, depicts the ruling spirit of the Huns. This cartoonette represents two German soldiers in a German trench, one with a rifle aimed at a French soldier. "Why are you waiting so long to shoot that Frenchman?" "I am waiting till he is wounded." This shows the diabolical spirit that animates the mass of the German soldiery—officers and men. It was demonstrated at Ypres where, as we are informed on official authority, the Germans bayonetted wounded Canadians, and the Canadian surgeons and attendants who were dressing their wounds. This new demonstration of the ruling spirit of German savagery appeals to us more strongly because our own Canadians were the victims. We are not fighting for conquest, nor for revenge; but if anything can waken and justify the avenging spirit it is such deeds as this. If anything can rouse the stay-at-home young man from the torpor of indifference and inspire him to take up arms, it is the Hun savagery that falls upon his fellow Canadians. There has been great wastage of Canadian troops in the recent fighting, in which Canadians have splendidly paid the penalty of their courage and patriotism in fighting the diabolism of the Huns, and we look to the young men physically fit to fill the depleted ranks. It is by the help of Canadians that Canada can be kept from the curse of coming under the ruling spirit of the Huns, which is inevitable if Canadians permit the Germans to win.

MOUNTAIN AND MOUSE.

The Toronto News has frequent attacks of "nerves," something which in the ladies, we should call hysterics. In last night's issue it gives a seven column "splash" heading in these words: "General Hughes Scores in Oral Battle with Liberal Counsel." This in letters nearly as big as those which announce the 25-mile drive of the Russians. One would think from this heading that General Hughes had said something tremendously clever and crushing. A search of the text to justify the flaunting claim of the heading and a careful reading do not disclose any heavier scoring than this: General Hughes, testifying before the Davidson Commission, is reported by the News as replying thus to a suggestion of the Liberal counsel, that the association of the name of Allison with a certain fact would help the War Minister's memory—

"I don't want any insinuations in regard to Col. Allison," shot back General Hughes, rather hotly. "He is a cleaner man than ever was Hartley Dewart" (the Liberal counsel.

If this is scoring "in an oral battle" it is nothing for the News to boast over. Sir Sam Hughes occupies a position of prominence in the country, and is required to set an example of frankness, politeness and dignity and sense of responsibility to the youth of the country, compatible with the importance of the representative place he fills. One would feel humiliated by an effort to fancy a British minister of the Crown so forgetful of the dignity of a Royal Commission Court, so forgetful of his own dignity, and that of the country he represents, as to bandy "smart" impertinences of repartee after the manner of yokels in argument at a barn-raising in the remotest sidelines. Sir Sam Hughes has done a good deal of good work, and we depend upon him for doing a good deal more. We have a claim upon him, and have a right to demand that he should not weaken his influence by indiscreet speech—which remembering his failing, suggests that the News should rather reprove this tendency to "oral scoring" than applaud it by seven-line heading, which have so little warrant that it is a case of the mountain in travail bringing forth a mouse.

THE NOVA SCOTIA ELECTION.

The result of the general elections in Nova Scotia is the return of the Murray—the Liberal — government, with somewhat increased strength, the standing of parties being 31 Liberal, 12 Conservative. The standing in the last legislature was 24 Liberals, 14 Conservatives. Since the last election five new seats have been added and all these were practically captured by the Liberals. The causes that contributed to the success of the Liberal government are perhaps twofold. The government record must have been a good one or it would not have succeeded in retaining public confidence, especially in view of its long term of office. The Liberals have been in power in Nova Scotia continuously for thirty-four years, and the present premier, Hon. G. H. Murray, has been in office twenty years. The excellence of the government record must have been a deciding factor, for there were no other outstanding issues. The government appealed for support on its record, and the Opposition made the cry, "it is time for a change," its chief ground of appeal. The government may not have been so strong as the Opposition was weak. This latter fact is impressed by contrasting the two policies in respect of a great issue in these days of war. The Liberal policy was to give free vocational training to returned soldiers at the Provincial Technical College and free expert training at the Agricultural College to the physically fit; and when the soldier was ready to purchase a farm, eighty per cent. of its value would, if necessary, be loaned him by the government, for the purchase of property, stock and implements. On the contrary, the policy of Mr. Charles E. Tanner, the leader of the Opposition, was the promise that if he were returned to power, he would ask Sir Robert Borden to purchase land in Nova Scotia, to offer as free grants to returned soldiers. With such weak, dependent and begging policy for a provincial leader it is no wonder that Mr. Tanner, the Opposition leader, was yesterday defeated in his own constituency. It is to be pretty confidently assumed that the Liberal government in Nova Scotia was so strongly sustained and strengthened yesterday on its merits. If it had been extravagant and dishonest it would have gone down. At this time, there is no quarter for bad governments. The popular impatience of "crookedness" engendered by the exhibition of German "crookedness" won't stand doubtful methods of administration. A government to retain popular confidence must be a government that does things and does them squarely.

THE ENEMY'S LACK OF ENTERPRISE.

Sir Douglas Haig was chosen to carry out the tremendous responsibilities and duties that have been placed upon him. He points out that the only assistance asked for by our Allies during the Verdun attacks was of an indirect nature — the relief of French troops on a portion of their defensive line. "This relief I was glad to be able to afford." Then General Haig adds, with a touch of pride which no one will be found to call unjustifiable, that "this delicate operation" of taking out a great French army and putting in a great British one was carried out "with complete success, thanks to the cordial cooperation and goodwill of all ranks concerned and to the lack of enterprise shown by the enemy during the relief." Here is food for reflection for our pessimists. They are generally inclined to talk as if our Generals had a monopoly of mistake-making, and as if the Germans never lost an opportunity or did a foolish thing. Yet could there have been a greater lack of vigilance on the port of the Germans? Suppose they had fallen upon us at the moment of disintegration!—London Spectator.

GERMAN MEALS GROWING LEANER

Two-thirds of Berlin Butcher Shops Are Closed

LONDON, June 20.—Evidence of increasing economic pressure in Germany and Austria due to the allies' blockade, comes from various sources. The Daily Telegraph's Rotterdam correspondent says: "The Berlin meat ration for the week beginning yesterday is 10½ ounces a head, as compared with 12½ ounces last week. The official explanation is the number of battle at its disposal will be smaller this week than last, but the truth is that in the latter period very many people were unable to obtain the quantity to which their meat cards entitled them. The shortage of potatoes continues. The ration allotted for the period June 12 to June 26 was five pounds per head, but the authorities now admit the available supplies are not adequate to this allowance, and announce that those unable to obtain potatoes may claim an extra quantity of bread.

"Serious disturbances took place in Aix-la-Chapelle Saturday. Thousands of people gathered in the streets and marched in procession. Afterward they assembled in large crowds, which had to be dispersed by police charges. Almost complete absence of foodstuffs was the cause of the outbreak.

Situation in Berlin.

An American who was in Berlin about the middle of May, writing in the Mail says: "I found fats of all kinds and oils and butter are not to be had, at least so far as the common people are concerned. Eggs are plentiful. It is not exaggerating to say that over two-thirds of the butcher shops of greater Berlin are closed on account of the lack of supplies. Potatoes were still to be had in small quantities, at about three times the normal cost. Onions practically are unobtainable. Other vegetables are scarce and dear. Tinned fruits and vegetables and marmalades are still plentiful, but frightfully dear. Sugar is almost unprocurable. At the time I was there very little coffee was for sale. Tea, cocoa, spices, and other similarly imported articles were either extremely dear or not to be had at all. There is a dearth of milk everywhere. In Berlin and other large cities cream is absolutely unobtainable. Dutch and Swiss cheese can still be had, but German cheese has entirely disappeared. Undoubtedly the most plentiful and least expensive article of food in Germany at the present time is fish. Such were conditions of food supply which I found in the enemy's capital about the middle of May."

Dutch Queen's Kindness.

The Mail's Amsterdam correspondent says that, according to the Vienna Reichspost, Queen Wilhelmina sent several waggon loads of condensed milk as a present to the women and children in Vienna, in response to an imploring telegram from the wife of the Viennese burgomaster.

The Post's Amsterdam correspondent says: "In several German towns the price of milk has again increased. At Leipsic and other towns in Saxony there is an almost total dearth of potatoes. In Saxony popular feeling is very excited and discontent is universally increasing."

Riots in Munich.

A Milan despatch to the Telegraph quotes the Munchener Nachrichten for an account of a food riot by women in Munich on Saturday. Toward evening the police found it necessary to disperse them. Other mobs immediately gathered, joined this time by soldiers, and the police were obliged to effect numerous arrests. Police and finally soldiers came upon the scene and hustled the crowd brutally. Among the cries heard from the mobs were: "We are starving," "We want bread," and "We want peace!"

Must Encourage Farming.

BERLIN, June 20.—King Ludwig, of Bavaria, in a speech at a celebration of the Bavarian Candle Day at Munich, said: "The German Empire, with its allies, is fighting almost the whole world, and it is clear that one cannot get done with it in six months. Since our enemies are unable to conquer us by force of arms, they now seek to compel us through hunger and need to make a shameful peace. This great and burdensome war has at least taught us one lesson. We must see to it that we can in future feed ourselves without any outside help. That will only be possible by encouraging farming. As you know, I myself have for a long time been engaged in farming, and it can only prosper when practised intensively."

Greek Bread Riots.

ATHENS, June 20. — Bread riots are reported at Patras, Aigina, Malias and Agrinion. The Greek general staff has been unable to demobilize three army corps in Macedonia owing to the holding up of the ships which had been requisitioned for their passage home by the blockade.

Dutch Feel It.

AMSTERDAM, June 20.—Demonstrations protesting against the food prices continue to take place daily in Amsterdam. The Danish Government is about to prohibit the exportation of sea fish.

The Undependability of the Slide-Struck Panama Canal

The re-opening of the Panama Canal for the "nth" time and the opening of the Marseilles Canal for the first time are two interesting events in connection with the transportation problem. The Panama Canal is a splendid engineering achievement and of great importance to the world's commerce, but to what extent can it be depended upon? It suffers fearfully from the geological disease known as landslides. According to Dr. Brauner, president emeritus of Stanford University, the prevention of the Panama slides is a question of geology no less than of engineering. The inter-relations of the modern sciences have become so involved that it is not surprising that our scientific nomenclature has become rather confused.

There is no term more abused than that of "engineer," not even "professor." An engineer may be almost anything and almost anything may call himself an engineer. However, an engineer is not necessarily a geologist, although a civil engineer ought to know something about geology; and a geologist is not necessarily an engineer. At Panama the engineers seem to have reckoned without their geologist. Water is a very useful thing in a canal, but Dr. Brauner says the only way to prevent the slides is to keep the water out of the earth surrounding the canal. So long as the soil is water-soaked just so long will it keep sliding. "One might as well try to excavate a passage through the Atlantic by shovelling out water." Dr. Brauner's diagnosis is presumably correct. That is a question of geology. He says: "In dealing with the ordinary run of slides it is customary to dig trenches to turn water away from the ground endangered. But with slides covering 120 acres, a rainfall of seven feet and banks of slippery clay and weak rocks 800 feet high it seems highly improbable that they can be depended on to stop the sliding."

When it comes to prescribing a remedy that is a question of engineering, and the doctor himself does not seem to feel that he is on safe ground. To him the only thing that offers any hope of success is to protect the entire area sliding or likely to slide first by keeping the surface waters from running into it and finally by some sort of a water-tight covering over all the sliding or threatened ground, that will completely shut out the water and keep it out. That sounds about as promising as to stand over the slippery ground with an umbrella. But the professor knows a good deal about landslides and earthquakes, and his report to the Government is not encouraging.

Of great importance to the world's commerce also is the Marseilles Canal, which now connects the Mediterranean Sea at Marseilles and the English Channel at Havre. This canal, which is only sixty miles long, cuts off the long voyage around the Spanish Peninsula and through the tempestuous Bay of Biscay, and whether in peace or in war promises to be of incalculable value to France and to her Ally, Great Britain, especially, and to the nations of the Mediterranean and the East. It will not accommodate the big steamers that pass through the Suez Canal, but it will take ships of 600 tons displacement. The size has been restricted by the ridge of hills which has cut off Marseilles from the Rhine, and through which a tunnel has been bored five miles long, seventy-five feet wide and seventy feet high. Small destroyers and submarines can get through the canal quickly, and it will be surprising if we do not hear of it being utilized for the purposes of the present war. It certainly places the German navy at one more disadvantage. We hope the French Government will not overlook the fact that the Germans make a specialty of trying to blow up canals. It is a wonder that their spies have not brought on some big landslides in the Panama zone.—Montreal Herald.

ALSACE-LORRAINE NOT LOYAL TO GERMANY

PARIS, June 20.—Germany has repeatedly pointed out since the outbreak of the war that Alsace-Lorraine subjects were fighting willingly for Germany, but a confidential War Office document, signed "Von Wandel," refers to numerous anti-German manifestations noted among the Alsace-Lorraine population.

The order refers to the suggestion that soldiers from Alsace-Lorraine should be directed either to an internal portion of Germany or to the eastern frontier, no matter what their record or the recommendations made regarding them. The document goes on to state that previous regulations seem sufficient, except that nationals of Alsace-Lorraine should be excluded from posts where they might obtain information as to the organization of the army and its proposed movements.

It is also insisted that they should not be employed by superior officers or by the staff as orderlies, despatch bearers or secretaries.

SHIRKERS' HEADS SMALLER.

LONDON, June 19.—According to leading London hatters a greater proportion of small-sized hats are being sold now than formerly. They attribute this to the war, maintaining that the "shirkers'" heads average smaller than those of the Britishers who are off at the front. The conclusion is drawn that the brains are smaller, too.

Notice of Registration of By-law

Notice is hereby given that a by-law was passed by the Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough on the 19th day of June, 1916, providing for the issue of debentures to the amount of $35,000.00 for the purpose of paying for repairs and improvements of and to the South Central School, being school property of the Board of Education of the City of Peterborough, and that such by-law was registered in the Registry Office of the County of Peterborough on the 20th day of June, 1916. Any motion to quash or set aside the same or any part thereof must be made within three months after the first publication of this notice, and cannot be made thereafter.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BROOKLYN WILL WIN FLAG IF OTHERS DON'T WATCH OUT

If some National League team, preferably the Giants, does not perk up soon and put a shoulder against the Dodgers, Brooklyn will be so far out in front the pennant race will be over by July 4. To date Brooklyn has lost fewer games than any team in either major league, and is further away from its nearest competitor and showing no signs of slowing up at all.

Scattered through the circuit there are thousands of 'fans' who would not be put out to any great extent if Brooklyn should hold to the pace and outfoot the field. Fifteen years is a long time to wait for satisfaction, and by all intents and purposes Brooklyn is in line for the championship, because it has been fifteen years since a team worried the Dodgers into the lead.

Wilbert Robinson is getting high success out of his pitchers. Possessed of a large quantity of clever mound artists, any one of whom would bolster up the pitching staff of the seven other clubs, Robinson has been using the men wisely and regularly. Although Pfeffer, Dell, Cheney, Smith, Coombs, Marquard and Appleton are not the only stars on the Brooklyn aggregation, the pitching of these men has done more probably to carry the pacesetters along than any one other help.

TWO STAR PITCHERS.

Pfeffer and Dell are outstanding stars. Both big men, strong of heart and hack, speed ball throwers with baffling curves, they have won consistently enough to give the others confidence. Pfeffer was some time getting into form, but right now he is practically unbeatable, pitching the sort of a game that would shame an Alexander or Johnson.

Many critics do not believe Brooklyn can win the pennant because of the weakness of the team on the left side of the diamond and in the outfield. Mowrey, Getz, O'Mara and Olson have been used interchangeably from the start of the season for no other reason than one or the other would fall down when least expected and force a substitute into his position. Mowrey is a timely hitter and fields in spots, being probably the most reliable man of the four, yet Robinson continues to take Mowrey out of the game because of fielding blunders.

Wheat has not regained the form that made him so potent a factor two years ago. His fielding is faultless, but his hitting has fallen off to an alarming degree. Only "Hy" Myers seems to be a reliable outfielder for the Dodgers.

MEYERS PLAYING BETTER.

"Chief" Meyers seems to be paying more attention to his knitting this season, and consequently giving a better account of himself than was the case when with the Giants last year. Still the catching staff of the Dodgers is nothing to boast of, and experts have said that never did a club win a pennant without at least one star catcher.

There are so many weak spots and so few strong outside of the pitchers that it seems a most difficult task for the Dodgers to keep in front. However, Philadelphia last season and the Braves this season before made the prognosticators hunt for a hole and pull the hole in after them, and there is no reason why the Dodgers should not continue to disprove the "dope" this year.

The Giants are still ailing, or, it might be termed, convalescing, as the team has been most inconsistent so far as chalking up victories at home is concerned. After its great and glorious and much sung about seventeen straight victories on the road the club came home to slump with three games won and six lost to the very same teams that it found so easy on its journey in the last of the enemy. Continually preaching of the uncertainty of baseball is the only thing that keeps the "fans" from wondering how such a thing could happen honestly.

MORE ALIBIS IN MAKING.

So many worthy and worthless theories have been advanced for the Giants' inability to win at home the "fans" must be sorely puzzled now. Lights and shadows have crept into the explanations offered by McGraw and "Benny Kauff" is using a lame back and an alibi. No one has thought of corns or bunions yet, but give them time.

There are many good points to the Giants and really only a few poor ones. For this reason few critics are willing to count the Giants out of the running by any means. Any team that has on its line-up such noted and feared hitters as Burns, Robertson, Doyle, Kauff Fletcher and Merkle can provide a lot of terror if not amusement for the opposition. Once that crowd of sluggers begins swinging something has to give and only rarely will it be the sluggers.

"Pol" Perritt has pitched several high class games of late, and right now is the mightiest of the Giant lot. He is performing in the style that brought him so much attention and big offers from the Federal League two years ago while with St. Louis. Should he continue as now and Anderson, Benton, Tesreau and "Matty" do their share, the Dodgers will have to find a hotter pace to hold the lead.

BRAVES OUT OF RACE

The Boston Braves have slumped to such an extent that it is next to impossible for that team to hope to get into the running. With Evers on the bench with a sore arm and, according to some, dissatisfied with conditions at Boston, the team does not appear as strong as it was rated during the spring. Right now Boston is only an ordinary collection of average ball players.

The Phillies refuse to crack or to give much ground, winning a fair percentage of their games each week and holding to the runner up position carefully. However, few are willing to go on record as predicting that the Phillies will repeat. Cincinnatti and Chicago seem to be the stronger of the four Western clubs with neither showing anything that would warrant fear by the three leading candidates for the flag.

The American League race is fast assuming a six team combat, with St. Louis and Philadelphia already and entirely eliminated for this season at least. Right now the six are travelling along on one another's heels with daily struggles changing the complexion of the standing. Cleveland is out in front, but not far enough away to be confident or relax for a minute.

The Western invasion by the East which ended yesterday found both Detroit and Chicago getting into the stride that every one expected of them but which was missing until a couple of weeks ago. Detroit has been playing especially efficient and consistent baseball and is a dangerous contender for the pace setting job right now.

"Bill" Donovan's Yankees got a fine start at the outset of their trip, but then failed miserably and fell from the lofty place of fourth position. However, the club is not far enough behind to cause worry or to keep it from the top once a winning streak is found. A shaken up batting order, with Walter Pipp back in his old place as clean up hitter, has found favour and is producing.

Last Night's Schedule Games

The first of the 1916 schedule games were played last night, with the following result:

Waddell	01102000111—7
Maynecord	3001011000—6
Pratt	1020110102—8
Calma	0201001010—5

The remaining rinks will finish their first round on Friday of this week.

Should any rink fail to be represented by at least two of its regular members that rink will default to its opposing rink.

The winning rinks will play off next week.

The rinks due to play on Friday next are: Brightman vs. Cunningham; Moore vs. Vosden; Sturgeon vs Widdis; Elliott vs. Skinner.

The games will be called promptly at 7.30.

WAR ITEMS BY LATEST MAIL.

All Germans who attained their 17th year in April of this year have been summoned before the military authorities to be immediately enrolled.

German newspapers say that the agricultural minister has ordered that crows, starlings, sparrows, storks, and also roe deer and goats shall be killed and sold as food.

Owing to the steady increase in the price of matches owing to the war, flint rocks and steels are being sold in large quantites at Soochow. The business has become so successful that some of the Chinese retail dealers believe that flint and steel may ultimately supersede matches.

"Alliance with England; friendship with France; that was, and is now, our external policy," says Senhor Bernardino Machado, the president of Portugal. "The war is not only popular but it also expresses the exact sentiment of the two nations."

Two German girls, one 15 and the other 17 years old, have been sentenced by court martial at Ulm to a fine of $25, or in default to one month's imprisonment, for "having love affairs with two French prisoners of war employed on a farm."

There are about 400 in attendance at the morning session and 300 in the afternoon class. These men spent an hour and a half under the direction of men who have previously taken the course, and the next half hour is spent in individual instruction. The work is exactly as outlined in a previous article in this paper.

The course is being held so that the officers and N. C. O.'s, who up to now have been unable to give instruction in the work, will now be able to relieve the regular instructors and carry on the work themselves.

The Examiner a few days ago gave a statement of recruiting throughout the Dominion and the number referred to be furnished by each division. The division which includes New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and P. E. I., is called upon to give 65,000 of which 31,961 have responded in the previous item in the Examiner the Maritime Provinces were said, through a typographical error to have raised but 3061 men. Mr. Logie, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia himself a New Brunswicker called the Examiner's attention to the error and added that in face of conditions in the Maritime Provinces he believed their record of native born would be higher than in any of the provinces farther west. He claimed that immigration never stays in the east and consequently the eastern provinces did not have the same percentage of old countrymen in fact had practically none to go with the first contingent, the opposite of which was the case in other parts of Canada. Then again the east gives up great numbers of her young men to the west and has not received credit on this account, although the casualty lists will show countless cases of next of kin from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and P. E. I. of enlistments in Ontario and farther western provinces. Mr. Logie who has great faith and pride in the east wished it to get credit for at least all it had accomplished.

The Examiner has received the following two advertisements. Whether there is any connection between the two or not will have to be settled by the interested parties.

LOST.

At Barriefield camp in or around the lines of the 93rd Battalion, one pair of new rubber boots. Reward for their return to Pay Sergeant, J. Abraham.

AUCTION SALE.

Armourer Sergt. Geo. Grange will sell by public auction at Barriefield camp on Saturday afternoon, June 24 one pair of new rubber boots in first class condition.

The latest recruits to join the 93rd Battalion is Mr. Low W. Lebarr, proprietor of the well known cleaning and pressing establishment and news stand on Charlotte street. Mr. Lebarr was sworn in as a member of the Peterborough Battalion yesterday and will leave for Barriefield to-morrow morning with his son Pte. Harold Lebarr who is also a member of the 93rd. Pte. Lebarr, Sr. is known and are old time sporting fans as a runner and lacrosse player. He had an oppotunity to join the 235th Battalion at Bowmanville as Sergeant tailor but turned down the proffered stripes to go overseas with his son in the 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Melville Hartley of the Paymasters Department, 93rd Battalion is home from Barriefield on leave.

Two more recruits for the 93rd Battalion left for Barriefield this morning in the person of T. J. Quinlan and Wm. Corbett. They were in charge of Q.M.S. King.

Sergt. C. Payne of the 93rd Battalion who has been home on leave returned to Barriefield last night.

Sergt. J. Mackin of the 93rd Battalion canteen, is home from Barriefield on leave. Sergt. Chas. Cheverill is also home from camp for a day or two.

Among the recent recruits for the 74th Battery is Mr. Wm. Gray, Brock street, a veteran member of the 24th Field Battery, who will make a valuable man for the new battery. Mr. Gray's son, Signaller Percy Gray, went overseas with the 2nd Canadian Division.

All members of the 93rd band are requested to meet at the recruiting rooms, George street, at 3.30 p.m. Thursday instead of 2.30 p.m. as was arranged before. W. Hughes, Bandmaster.

CAMP NOTES.

BARRIEFIELD, June 20—Captain Munro, Captain Hall and Major Loch arrived in camp from their leave yesterday, and are welcomed back by the officers. All report a pleasant time.

The whole of the officers and N. C. O's. of the 93rd are busy taking the special bayonet fighting and physical training course this week, along with the officers and N. C. O's. of other battalions.

The medical examination is in full swing. The doctors report a small percentage of the men in the 93rd unfit for overseas service, and report the men generally as being in fine shape. About eighty of the men were examined yesterday and the examination is continuing to-day. Quite a number of the 93th were also put through yesterday, they being slated as the only other battalion going overseas with the 93rd.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

CANADA IS NOT SAFE FROM THE ENEMY

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

Is more than a motion picture. It is the most note-worthy achievement in the history of motion pictures.

If you have a drop of red blood in your veins, you will experience in witnessing this production a thrill such as you have never known before.

You will see the enemy approaching, the powerlessness of New York, the weakness of its forts and defences. You will see the havoc wrought by the enemy's howitzers, sub-marines, airships; by its shells, shrapnels and bombs.

You will see the most beautiful sky line in the world in flames, the metropolis of the western hemisphere devastated.

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

It was written by J. Stuart Blackton and vitagraphed under his personal supervision.

Scores of prominent Americans in the army and navy and administrative circles have contributed to its preparation.

MR. CHARLES RICHMAN, the distinguished actor, heads a cast of eminent Vitagraph stars—a cast containing twenty-five thousand National Guardsmen, five thousand horses, eight thousand supernumeraries.

This Astounding Pictorial Demonstration will prove it to you. Hudson Maxim says so, American Generals say so, leading men on both sides of the boundary say so, as well as the Press, the Pulpit and Parliament. No book, no speech, no statistics yet presented drive home this awful truth so mercilessly as "The Battle Cry of Peace," the acme of Film realism

GRAND OPERA HOUSE, JUNE 26, 27 AND 28

Canadian Military Endorsement

MILITIA AND DEFENCE

Toronto, March 21st, 1916

TO THE PEOPLE OF CANADA:

After seeing the motion picture "The Battle Cry Of Peace" we are unqualifiedly of the opinion that it is the most effective recruiting medium that has ever been used in this country.

The very realistic portrayal of what would happen were this continent invaded by a powerful enemy and the terrible scenes depicted in the thrillingly realistic way, in which they are shown in this great film, should make every man who is not now in khaki rush to the colours.

It is absolutely convincing proof that the best way to defend our homes from the invader is to prevent him from ever landing on our shores, and the only way to do this is by crushing him in Europe so that he cannot come here.

The scenes shown are reproductions of outrages that have occurred all over Belgium, France, and other European countries that have been over-run by the ruthless Hun.

This picture should be seen by every man who is not in khaki, and if the women, too, could witness the harrowing sights that are so vividly depicted in this wonderful picture, it is difficult to believe that they would any longer hold back their men from doing their duty.

Budget of War News From English Letter

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

I read yesterday a four thousand word letter from a distinguished member of the English Parliament written to a prominent Philadelphian, who showed it to me. The letter was marked "censored" but not a single word has been erased.

It was the best summary of what is going on in Europe that I have ever read. Without attempting to quote sentences, I shall give the meat of that encyclopedia of war news.

England has "an army of over five million in being", he men are fully equipped and ready.

A new trench gun, called the 'stoker' and much the best yet produced, has been invented in England. It throws a shell only 450 yards, but is so highly destructive.

The Allies on the west are preparing for a grand offensive movement, "which cannot strat until the Russians begin a similar attack in the East in June." 'As the Russians have started, I suppose that we shall now read that the English and French have also begun a great offensive move.

Hospitals all over Southern England have been emptied of their soldier patients and others to make room for the expected stream of wounded which will pour back from this Allied assault upon the German western front.

This member of Parliament pays a tax of $30 on his automobile. Gasolene is taxed at 42 cents a gallon. Money derived from investments is taxed 25 per cent. "Nobody complains."

He refers to a Keppelin as a 'skunk'.

Munition factories are "going splendidly."

The British surrender at Kut-el-Amara "does not change the plan" of campaign in the East.

A Dutch Jew who pretended to be a diamond merchant carried damaging information to the Germans on papers rolled inside of cigars. He was promptly shot by the English after having made weekly tripa since the war began.

This letter was written in the latter part of May, but these two examples of spy activity suggest how easily German got word that Kitchener was to sail for Russia on a certain ship.

This distinguished Briton says the war will "go on for a long time." Then this:—"We are all learning to live for this war alone, and until the German dreams have been finally and completely shattered and Europe can once more breathe freely we can do nothing else."

BEE STING CAUSES AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Five Young Women Hurt When Driver Loses Control—One Has Broken Leg.

SYOSSET, L. I., June 20.—An automobile driven by Sidney E. Brewster of Glen Cove, and containing five young women guests at the Brewster estate was wrecked to-day and all of its occupants injured when a bee stung Mr. Brewster. One of the young women, Miss Katherine Hall, suffered a broken leg.

The accident occurred between Syosset and Cold Spring Harbour. Mr. Brewster did not see the bee on his head until he distinctly felt it. In an effort to knock it off he lost control of the automobile and it plunged into a ditch beside the road and through a heavy fence. The vehicle turned half over so that all of its occupants were thrown to the ground.

British Sportsmen Give 100 Ambulances To Allies

LONDON, June 19.— The National Sporting Club has indicated a great scheme appealing to sportsmen to combine in the raising of a fleet of a hundred ambulances for presentation to the Allies. At the beginning of the war seventy motor ambulances were presented by the club and they were in commission up to a few months ago. But this scheme is meant primarily to show the appreciation of the sportsmen of Great Britain for the tremendous fight which Britain's allies are making against German frightfulness.

At a luncheon at the National Sporting Club over which Lord Lonsdale presided the scheme was discussed. A message which he brought back from the front and which he considered appealed to all true sportsmen was: "France is grateful to Britain for all that she has done." France, who had been bearing the brunt of the fighting in this great war, was grateful to Britain. And, as another speaker observed, let the sportsmen of Britain show that this country was, in turn, grateful to France for her gratitude.

Two important matters were settled forthwith. A belt valued at £1,400 ($7,000) is to be given for a heavyweight boxing championship of the world, the proceeds of the first contest at least to be given to the fund for the one hundred ambulances. Mr. Horatio Bottomley, who was present, immediately met that with a promise of a similar belt for an international middleweight championship. It is proposed, if the authorities permit, to hold a special race meeting at Hurst Park in August in aid of the fund. And, as was remarked, as sportsmen are the first to put their hands in their pockets when they know the cause is just, if the sportsmen of England will only lend their assistance to the scheme there should be little difficulty in raising the £40,000 ($200,000) required.

The Excursion To Barriefield Goes C. P. R.

Don't Forget This—The Special Leaves C.P.R. Station at 8 O'clock Saturday Morning

Good news came to Peterborough to-day; The 93rd Battalion is not to leave Barriefield until they sail overseas, and the excursion on Saturday comes at a very opportune time. The stay of the 93rd will be short, and if you want to see your friends and relatives in their camp surroundings just go to Barriefield on Saturday. The special train leaves C.P.R. station at 8 o'clock a.m., returning, leaves Kingston at 8 o'clock in the evening, but tickets are good to stay over Sunday and come up by regular train on Monday.

Mass Meeting of Protest

Special to The Examiner:

BUENOS AYRES, June 21.—All South America to-day focused its attention on the Mexican-American crisis awaiting eagerly Gen. Carranza's next move in reply to the American note. The Latin-American Association issued a call for a mass meeting of protest against the American occupation of the Mexican territory

ALSACE-LORRAINE TO BE WIPED OUT; NEW GERMAN PLAN

Berlin, June 21.—The province of Alsace-Lorraine as a "Reichs-stand" (State of the empire) undoubtedly will cease to exist after the war.

It has now been virtually decided that the annexed provinces will be absorbed in some manner into the general unity of the empire and no longer administered under the abnormal conditions prevailing since the war of 1870, according to high administrative officials here.

The project at present most favored is a division of the provinces into three parts, with annexation to Bavaria, Baden and Prussia, Bavaria getting the lion's share.

The Chancellor's discussions with south German rulers and statesmen led to no definite decision, however, and while it may be stated that a change in the status of the "Reichs-stand" has been determined upon in principle no solution of the highly complicated problem has been decided upon in detail.

The general lines upon which the question will be settled seem fairly obvious, however, from geographical and ethnological considerations, the authorities declare.

Bavaria, whose province of the Palatinate, borders Alsace-Lorraine on the north, probably would receive the northeastern section, including lower Alsace, large parts of which formerly were included in the Bavarian kingdom and inhabited by the same stock as the Palatinate.

Southern Alsace, it is thought, would be joined to Baden, while Prussia would receive that portion of Lorraine which adjoins the Prussian Rhineland.

While this is considered the obvious solution certain strong objections have made themselves manifest, not the least of which is the reluctance of the Baden government to have added the Grand Duchy, the population of which is largely evangelical and moderately liberal, a province overwhelmingly Catholic and largely Social Democratic.

The Will of The Late Hon. J. R. Stratton

The Estate is Valued at $370,642.01 —How it is Divided

The probate of the last will and testament and codicil of the late Honourable James Robert Stratton was duly granted by the Surrogate Court of the County of Peterborough, on the twentieth instant.

The personal estate is valued at $331,064.56; and the real estate is valued at $39,569.43, making a total estate valued at $370,642.01.

The testator under his will appointed his widow, Mrs. Stratton, and his Manager of the Peterborough Examiner, Roland Maxwell Glover, executors and trustees of his will.

To pay to his widow, Mrs. Stratton, $65,000.00 for her own absolute use and benefit, and to pay to her the interest on $30,000.00 during her lifetime. He also bequeathed to her all household furniture and household effects, and his summer cottage at Stoney Lake, and confirmed the gift made to her in his lifetime of his homestead in Peterborough and of a residence in Toronto.

He bequeathed to his three sisters, Mrs. Eliza Jane Hunter, Miss Rosanna Stratton, and Miss Mary Stratton, $20,000.00 each.

He bequeathed to his brother, Albert H. Stratton, $5,000.00, and to Mr. Albert H. Stratton's three sons the sum of $5,000 each.

He also bequeathed to his sister Mrs. T. F. Matthews, $5,000.00, and to her daughter, $5,000.00.

He also bequeathed to his niece, Mrs. Robertson, the sum of $5,000.00.

He bequeathed to his adopted daughter, Mrs. Harris Ardiel of Toronto, $20,000, and to her son, $5,000.

He bequeathed to Mrs. Ormond $1,000.00, and to R. M. Glover, his Manager of The Examiner, $5,000.00, and to F. R. Yokome, his Editor of The Examiner, $1,000.00.

He also directed his trustees "to "pay to the trustees of the Murray "Street Baptist Church, in the City "of Peterborough, the balance, if "any, which may be due, and owing "by me at the time of my decease on "my subscription for $5,000.00 to the "building fund of such church. I "have already paid the sum of $3,"000.00 on account of such subscrip "tion."

And also "to pay to the Trustees "of the Charlotte Street Methodist "Church in the City of Peterborough "whatever amount, if any, I may owe "on my account of my subscription "for $1,500.00 to such church at the "time of my decease."

He authorized and directed his "trustees to give to my brother, Al"bert H. Stratton and the said Rol"and Maxwell Glover, an option for "ten days from the granting of the "probate of this my will by the pro"per Surrogate Court in the Province "of Ontario, to purchase all my "shares in the capital stock of the "Peterborough Examiner, Limited, "for the sum of fifty thousand dol"lars ($50,000.00) to be paid as fol"lows, that is to say, the sum of ten "thousand dollars ($10,000.00) thereof "in cash on the acceptance of said "option, and the balance thereof "namely forty thousand dollars, ($40,"000.00) to be paid within one year "after my decease. In case both of "them, the said Albert H. Stratton "and Roland Maxwell Glover, do not "accept said option, then and in "such case the said Albert H. Strat"tton is to have ten days after the "expiration of said first mentioned "option within which to purchase my "said shares for the sum of fifty "thousand dollars ($50,000.00), pay"able on the same terms and condi"tions hereinafter provided for the "payment thereof, and in case the "said Albert H. Stratton does not ac"cept said last mentioned option, "then and in such case the said "Roland Maxwell Glover is to have "an option for ten days from the ex"piration of such last mentioned op"tion within which to purchase my "said shares for the sum of fifty "thousand dollars ($50,000.00) to be paid on the same terms and condi"tions as hereinbefore provided for "the payment thereof."

All the rest residue and remainder of his estate both real and and personal, whatsoever and wheresoever he gave, devised and bequeathed to his brother, Mr. Albert H. Stratton and his sisters, Mrs. Eliza Jane Hunter, Miss Rosanna Stratton, Miss Mary Stratton and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, to be divided among them in such proportions as will give to each of them the said Miss Eliza Jane Hunter, Miss Rosanna Stratton and Miss Mary Stratton twice as much of said residuary estate as is given to each of them, the said Mr. Albert H Stratton, and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, in said residuary estate.

Badly Cut Up.

The following letter was also received by Mrs. Flowers. It is from her nephew, Private Dick Perry, another Peterborough Mounted Rifles man. It reads as follows:

"I want to thank you very much for the socks and things you sent which I received this morning. You will probably know by now that we were badly cut up. Teddy Skilleter saw Walter flowers go through the reserve with shell shock, but otherwise uninjured. He was buried several times I believe. The terrific bombardment that we all had to undergo would account for this. I am thankful to say I got out without a scratch, but am afraid Jimmy is gone. You will never have any idea of what it was like. The trenches were absolutely flat long before I left, and several mines had been exploded, and they had us all in a curtain of fire. There were less than fifty left when we were told that the Germans were coming over, so all we could do was to get out as best we could. We made a burst across the open and men were falling on either side under a murderous shell fire, and rifle and machine gun fire. The dead in the communication trenches were terrible to see, but we did what we could for the wounded. Out of almost seven hundred of our regiment we came out seventy strong, and one officer uninjured. Walter's battalion, the 5th, did not lose so heavily but suffered a lot."

Women Clamour For Peace Before Emperor's Castle

London, June 20.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that peace demonstrations, most of whom were women, marched from Vienna on Monday evening to the Schoenbrun castle, the residence of the Emperor, and demanded a separate peace with Russia.

A number of the women managed to avoid the police and entered the castle grounds where they shouted their demands beneath the windows of the emperor's private apartments.

They were arrested and the castle guard was later equipped with machine guns.

Allies Unite For Reconstruction

Enemy Powers to Be Deprived of Favoured Nation Treatment—Economical Alliance Framed

PARIS, June 20.—In announcing the decisions arrived at during the economic conference of the Allies last week, it is stated that during the reconstruction period the allies have declared their purpose to carry on joint action in restoring industry agriculture, and merchant fleets.

All treaties with the enemy being abrogated, the Allies agree that favoured-nation treatment shall not be accorded to enemy powers during a number of years to be agreed upon by the Allies, after hostilities cease. They further declare in favour of the allied nations dealing among themselves as far as possible in their natural resources.

BAR ENEMY GOODS.

The Allies agree to prevent 'dumping' of enemy goods by fixing a period of time during which enemy commerce shall be subject to special rule and prohibitions.

The Allies further agree upon joint collaboration after the war to secure complete independence from enemy countries relative to raw products, and manufactured goods essential to the development of their economic activities. These measures, it is set forth, should also include the independence of the allies in financial, commercial, and maritime organisation. In execution of this resolution they will adopt the "means most appropriate, according to the nature of the goods and following the principles which govern their political economy." They will adopt subventions and advances to encourage enterprises and research, scientific and technical.

TARIFF CHANGES.

Besides subventions and advances to certain industries, the allies will consider tariff changes and prohibitions, temporary or permanent. The mutual exchange of goods among the allies will be encouraged by rapid transit, reduced freight rates, and common arrangements concerning postal and telegraphic communication.

Technically trained delegates will meet to frame joint measures for the allies regarding patents and trade marks. They agree to adopt an identical practice as far as possible in the regulation of the inventions, trademarks and copyright of literary and artistic works created in enemy countries during the war.

IMMEDIATE EFFECT.

The agreement closes with the declaration that the delegates recommend that their Governments give immediate effect to the policies as agreed upon.

ANIMALS ON SHORT RATIONS

Budapest, June 21.—The animals in the Budapest Zoo are also feeling the pangs of hunger owing to the scarcity of foodstuffs, and these are sad times for the animals in the Varosliget. The horseflesh with which they fed the wild animals has become so expensive that rations had to be reduced by half, so that the roaring of the lions and the tigers is now incessant, to the great delight, it may be added, of the children.

The wild birds, eagles and vultures, are being fed with the flesh of rats, bred for the purpose in the zoo, by hundreds, and killed by dozens daily, so as to save the horse flesh for the king of beasts. Some days there was no horseflesh at all, and in order to keep the lions and the wolves and other wild beasts alive they had to slaughter some of the goats and other less valuable animals exhibited.

The herbivorous animals are also very badly off. There is no hay to be had at all, and a substitute has been found in wild chestnuts, an innovation strongly deplored by the animals but reluctantly accepted as better than nothing. Even under these circumstances last year's budget of the Budapest zoo was double that of the previous year although many of the animals have been dispensed with in consequence of the food difficulties.

The seals—there were about ten of them—were killed, for no fish could be provided for them, and their flesh was given to the wild beasts. Two of the polar bears were also shot, one because he absolutely refused to eat the war food and the other because he grew so weak on the new diet that it was an act of charity to finish him off. The director of the zoo opened a competition for the shooting of the polar bears and one Nimrod paid 12 pounds sterling for the pleasure of settling them.

British Soldier Carries Rations and 222 Articles

Two hundred and twenty two articles besides the rations are carried by British soldiers sent into the trenches, including sixteen items worn on the person, eleven carried in the pockets, nine in the haversack, sixteen in the valise, and nine in the "bivdali," besides sixteen items of equipment.

St. Peter's Patriotic Club Report Work

At the regular meeting of St. Peter's Patriotic Club which was held on Monday evening, a report of the work done during the past three months was given by the secretary and consisted of the following:

53 Flannel Day Shirts, 58 Hospital Night Shirts, 144 Pillow Cases, 1132 towels, 154 Many-tailed Bandages, 59 Wash Cloths and 55 pairs of socks. The socks will be sent at once to the Secours National, Toronto and from there will be shipped to the soldiers in trenches and at Verdun. It was decided at this meeting to close the tea room during July and August, but tea will be served to-morrow and Thursday the 29th as usual. The afternoon teas have been a great success and the members wish to thank all those who helped to make them so. All are asked to come to work as early as possible to-morrow. The Work Room is open from 1.30 every Thursday and closes at 8.30 p.m.

LANCE-CORP. D. GUNN, of the 38th Battalion, who has been invalided home with a fractured knee-cap, and is expected to arrive in Quebec at the end of this week. His baby boy died this morning at 462 Albert street after an illness of eight weeks.

OTONABEE CHAPTER, I. O. D. E.

Midsummer Garden Fete, June 22nd, at the residence of His Honour, Judge Huycke, Englebarn Park, from 3 to 10 p.m. Proceeds for the benefit of the 93rd Battalion. Outdoor cards during the afternoon, fee for each player 50 cents. Two performances of Maypole Dance, by children. Refreshments, Flowers, Fortune Tellers, Home-made Candies, Fish Pond, Sawdust Pie.

Lingerie

In Lingerie we feature THE FASHION BRAND which is the reason our Waists are so different from what you generally see. The quality is unsurpassed both in material and workmanship, and the styles are the newest, most becoming and practical, as a result of a competent New York designer's every-day work.

Prices most moderate, from $1.50 to $3.95

Silk

There are many new features in the last shipment of Summer Silk Waists which we have just received and among them stripes seem to predominate. We have selected two different lines, in smart styles which represent all the latest shades in new stripes such as Nile and White, King's Blue and White, Old Rose & White and Black and White, for a special selling at $2.69. These are regularly worth $3 to $3.50.

Pte. H. Losey Is Wounded

Peterboro' Boy Who Left With 39th Battalion Hit on June 12th

Mrs. Joseph Losey, 872 Water street, received news from Ottawa this morning that her son, Pte Harold Losey, Canadian infantry, is officially reported wounded on June 11th. Pte. Losey is a son of Pte. Joseph Losey, now at Barriefield camp with the 93rd Battalion. The wounded soldier enlisted here in the spring of 1915 with the 39th Battalion and went overseas with that unit, being afterwards transferred to the 58th Battalion at the front. He is a native-born Canadian and before enlisting was employed in the Auburn Woollen Mills.

Pte. Boyd Killed.

Mr. W. T. C. Boyd of Bobcaygeon, was notified yesterday that his son, Pte. Thornton C. Boyd, who went overseas with a universities company, to reinforce the Princess Pats, has been killed in action. The young soldier, who was born in Bobcaygeon, was a college graduate.

Women's Institute Of Mt. Julian

Patriotic Shower Was a Feature of June Session

Mount Julian, June 20.—The June meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Lauder. The minutes of the May meeting were read and approved and a discussion followed on patriotic subjects and other matters of interest to the Institute.

A shower of 90 pairs of towels, 2 1-2 dozen cakes of soap, 22 cards of safety pins and several wash cloths was donated to the Red Cross Hospital for our soldiers and a sock shower will be given at the September meeting.

Th delegates from the Department this year is Mrs. M. L. Woolard of West Toronto and her subject will be Mother's Day. As Mrs. Woolard has had practical experience in the several lines of subjects she discusses, we expect, up-to-date information given in a very instructive manner.

The meeting will be held at Mrs. Albert Reid's on the 6th of July at 1.45 p.m., and it is hoped there will be a full attendance of the members and all who are interested in the work of the Institute.

After the business of the meeting was finished a pleasant time was spent in listening to readings and recitations given by Mrs. Wm. Thompson, Mrs. Lauder and Miss Bronson and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Pte. Wm. Dainton Killed in Action

Keene Member of Mounted Rifles Loses His Life in Zillebeke Fighting

Special to The Examiner:

KEENE, June 21.—The wife of Mr. William Dainton received word on Monday morning that he was killed in active service near Ypres on June 2nd. The late Mr. Dainton left Keene on October 4th, 1915 for overseas service with the Canadian Mounted Rifles going as a volunteer, wishing to join his brother, Pte. Fred Dainton who was then in England. The news came as a shock to his many friends. He was on the Honour Roll of the Keene Methodist church and took an active interest in Sunday School and League work in connection with the church. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his love, the eldest a boy of 7 years and the youngest a baby of a few months. There has been no official word from the war department, but a letter was received by Mrs Dainton from his mother giving full details of his death.

COUNTY COUNCIL DOWN TO ROUTINE BUSINESS ALL DAY

The County Council resumed its activities this morning, going directly into County Property committee and continuing committee work until noon. This afternoon two deputations are on the Warden's diary, one of Agricultural and Plowmen's Associations at two o'clock, the other at three o'clock, representing the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Both deputations have designs on some of the contents of the county's money bags.

GUESTS AT DAN WHETUNG'S LODGE GET BIG FISH

THE CHEMONG HOUSE, Curve Lake, June 21.—The first guest that was here was Mr. Wm. Johnston of Toronto. Fishing off the boat house he had such great fun catching mud cats, he did not give himself time to come up for his dinner; we had to take the lunch to him.

The next arrivals were Mr. Payne, Mr. Stinson and Mr. Wm. Taylor of Peterborough; Mr. Rider, Mr. G. S. Johnston, Mr. B. Fisher and Mr. C. M. Prizrer of Toronto.

Mr. S. R. Childs of Niagara Falls N.Y., was out to-day with his guide Walter Jacobs and caught three fine bass and a small lunge 5 1-4 lbs. and one big lunge weighing 20 1-2 lbs. and lost one weighing 25 lbs. I said, "how did you know his weight" and he said, "Don't you know that fish always have 'scales' with them."

Few more booked for next week.

Borden Battery Brought Down Two "Fokkers"

Cyril Giroux, of the Borden armoured Battery, writing on June 4th to his father, Mr. Geo. H. Giroux that their battery had recently shot down two Fokker aeroplanes. One of them fell two hundred yards from the battery's emplacement. Private Giroux tells of going out to the destroyed machine and finding the shattered bodies of the German pilot and observer. Their machine was hit at 3,000 feet.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE W. M. S.

The annual meeting of the W. M. S. of George Street Methodist Church was held Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Kendry occupied the chair. An interesting programme was rendered. A solo by Miss E. Kemp, entitled 'Be a Hero,' was enjoyed very much.

Mrs. Lewis, the delegate to the Branch meeting, held at Oshawa, gave an excellent report. She not only brought the thoughts and suggestions of the Branch meeting, but the spirit of the meeting also, which gave to those present a spiritual uplift. In conclusion, Mrs. Lewis said we could not go far astray if we took for our motto "For God, for Home, for Country," thus making best things first things.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour was spent.

SUMMER COURSE

During July and August

IN

BOOK-KEEPING AND PENMANSHIP | SHORTHAND AND TYPEWRITING

Classes are being organized—Several have already expressed their intention of joining. Cost is small—the benefits great. To those going to Normal or University shorthand is of inestimable value in taking notes. By means of it some pay their way through College—ever think of it?

Ambitious teachers (by means of the courses) can earn from $300.00 to $500.00 a year more—will tell you how easily it can be done, if you'll write us. The plan is simple—and the best of it is—the earnings come in the months that are usually lost.

Wishing is of no value—prompt action is necessary. Write to-day for full information to the

HOW LIGHTNING MISSED A BARN AT BRIDGENORTH

BRIDGENORTH, June 21.—On account of the wet weather many of the farmers have not got all their crops in. The low lands are not doing well and in many places the roads are full of ruts and in bad condition.

Prof. Bull and family of New York opened their cottage last week. Prof. Bull underwent a serious operation but is getting along nicely.

Mrs. Halpine and family of New York have opened their cottage.

Prof. Houghton and family are expected in a few days.

Mayor Duffus has been up to his cottage several times and is expected to arrive for the summer shortly with his family.

Many have been trying their hand at fishing, but there have been no good catches because of the rough weather.

Farmers in many localities are unable to get their corn in. Not one-quarter of it is in around this section.

P. Udy's stable was struck by lightning. It had a galvanized roof and lightning rods. The lightning ran down the roof to a clothes line and along to a post which it splintered as the bold disappeared into the ground.

Mr. J. A. Jobe has returned from a trip to Niagara Falls.

Americans To Leave Vera Cruz

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, June 21.— Consul Rodgers, in Mexico City, notified the State Department to-day that he had completed arrangements for a special train to take American citizens to Vera Cruz to-morrow. This was with the full consent of the authorities, who promised that the train would be protected. Secretary of the Navy Daniels speaking before the National Editorial Association to-day, pointed out the duty of newspapers in the present crisis and declared that the country will unite in standing behind President Wilson if the break comes. There's no room for politics in questions touching our national honour and safety," Daniels declared.

Returning Soldier's Infant Boy Is Dead

The home-coming of Lance-Corporal Daniel Gunn will be saddened by the death this morning of his infant son aged one year and eleven months. The baby boy had been ill during the past eight weeks and the distress of Mrs. Gunn can be appreciated. Lance Corporal Gunn has been invalided as the result of a fractured knee-cap. The funeral of their baby will be on Thursday afternoon at three o'clock from 483 Albert street to the Little Lake cemetery.

HOUSEWIVES ATTENTION

GUARANTEED FRUIT

The Niagara Fruit Growers are going to protect the fruit buying public, and their action will be generally applauded and appreciated. Housewives have long suffered from dishonest packing and careless handling and there has never been any distinguishing mark to guide her in her purchases. The Niagara Growers have adopted a label, showing a small map of the Niagara Peninsula each label bearing the number of the grower of the fruit. This little map will assure buyers that the fruit is grown in the Niagara Peninsula, and also that the grower has sufficient confidence in his product to put his own number on it. Every complaint can thus be traced. Fruit buyers will do well to profit by this protection and buy only fruit with the label.

LONDON, June 21.—The British troops have occupied Kandei and Altangenburg in German East Africa, taking huge German stores, and repulsing several serious enemy counter attacks. This indicates continuous progress by the British South African troops under General Smuts.

OBITUARY

CHARLES H. JONES.

At noon to-day the death occurred of Charles H. Jones, at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. P. A. Ferguson, 3 Encleburn avenue, East City. Deceased has been ill for upwards of six years. He was born in Omemee and for about thirty years conducted a successful business in Lindsay. He was well known and highly respected in the community in which he spent the greater part of his life, and his demise will occasion genuine regret among a wide circle of friends.

Besides his widow the late Mr Jones leaves to mourn his loss one son, Ross Jones of Toledo, O., and two daughters, Mrs. W. D. Hanna of St. Catharines and Mrs. P. A. Ferguson of this city.

Funeral announcement will be made later.

COUNT CANITZ KILLED IN ACTION IN PERSIA

The North German Allgemeinen Zeotung has advices form Teheran, telling of the death on the battlefield of Count Von Kanita, military attache to the German legation at Teheran.

Count Kanita, who was 39 years of age, and commander of a detachment of Turks, Persian gendarmes and Persian volunteers, engaged the Russians at Bid-Sorky Pass, near Kangavar, and was victorious in a hotly contested battle.

On January 16th of this year Count Kanita's forces were surprised near Kangavar by a large force of Russians, and while Count Kanita engaged the Russians with a small force in order to protect the retreat of the remainder of the detachment, the count was killed.

The confirmation of his death has caused much grief in Germany, and especially in Berlin, where Count Kanita was very popular. He was a lieutenant in the Prussian guards and had a bright career ahead of him in the diplomatic service.

Madame Sarah Bernhardt in May gave six performances at different points of the French front before audiences of soldiers, who came to the entertainment between fights. "We came," said the great actress, "to bring them comfort and faith, but it was them on the contrary, who communicated to us their overwhelming confidence and their invincible faith."

Nordheimer Piano

Will be Exhibited To-morrow in the End Show Window of The Arcade of The Cressman Store.

THIS Elegant Pianoforte has been purchased by a well known citizen of Peterborough for his City residence. It is recognized as the Highest type of instrument in which QUALITY rather than price predominates.

The constructional improvements of the NORDHEIMER have given it those qualities of Tone and Touch which distinguish the High Class Instrument.

To the NORDHEIMER belongs the distinction of having been chosen by many such customers in preference to imported instruments. It has that merit which gives it a place alongside those few pianos that are renowned on two continents.

An invitation is extended to those contemplating the purchase of this type of instrument to view this elegant specimen.

Dr. R. J. Zimmerman, of Toronto, is going to Clear Lake on Friday to open his cottage for the summer. He will ston over here on the way, and will speak at Bethany Tabernacle on Thursday night.

The engagement of Miss Christine McGregor, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McGregor, Vanguard, Sask., formerly of Milton, Ont., to Mr. Gordon Foster Elliott of the Union Bank, Pennant, Sask., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Elliott, Morden, Man., is announced. The wedding will take place quietly the latter part of this month. The bride-to-be is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McGregor of 160 Brock Street.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, June 21.—Steel and Munition stocks showed strength while there were irregular changes in the general list at the opening of the Stock Exchange to-day.

Steel was up 3-8 of a point, at 84 1-2; Crucible gained 2 3-4 points, and Mexican Petrol. sold at 3-4 of a point at 86 3-4.

Specialties moved widely during the morning. Continental Can. sold up four, at 102 1-2 and American zinc dropped 4 3-8 to 44, and Butt. and Superior sold down 2 1-2 to 70. Will is Overland sold up 3 1-2 to 283 1-3

Our Invariable Rule is to Provide the Lenses You Require in the Mounting that Most Becomes You

That is the whole thing in a nutshell. Glasses are useless unless they suit your eyes and become your face. Are you thinking of getting glasses? Do you know whether you need them? Do you find your eyes tire easily? Do they feel as if they had sand in them? Do they water? Do you suffer from headache? These are a few of the symptoms that denote eye trouble. Don't put it off any longer; call and see Dr. Lacey; he will tell you whether you need them or not. You can't afford to take chances with your eyes. The charge for glasses is very low considering the quality. Artificial eyes fitted, lenses duplicated and all repair work. Open this evening.

Germans Make Futile Attempts To Stem The Advance

ITALIANS CAPTURE A NUMBER OF AUSTRIAN POSITIONS

AUSTRIAN ARMY IS RETREATING ALONG THE FRONTIER

THREE MAIN LINES

PETROGRAD, June 22.—On the northern flank of General Brusiloff's front the Austrian resistance, considerably stiffened by the arrival of a large number of German reinforcements, has succeeded in checking the Russian drive between Lutsk and Kovel, which, directed against Vladimir-Volynski, aims at destroying the Austrian communications between Kovel and Lemberg. But in spite of the violent Austro-German counter attacks, one of which broke through the Russian lines, the latest reports are to the effect that the Russians again have resumed progress in this sector, after taking the usual toll of prisoners.

On the southern flank the Austrians have been unable to check, even momentarily, the Russian advance toward Kolomea and toward the final Dniester fortification of Halicz.

General Pflanzer, the Austrian commander, apparently is paying the penalty for having too long delayed his retirement from Czernowitz, and his army, now cut in two, is reported to be in precipitate flight, one part along the Roumanian frontier and the other into the Carpathians.

Turning from Czernowitz, General Letchitzky's forces are pressing their flank attack further north and have reached a point on the Zlota Lipa some miles to the northwest of Czernowitz. Russian military critics consider it unlikely that the Austrians will be able to hold the Zlota Lipa line, but will be forced back upon Halicz.

The separate Russian movements are now showing a strongly centralised tendency. There are three converging lines of advance, the common objective of which is Lemberg. The first of these lines is approaching Vladimir-Volynski; the second Brody, the third Halicz. The capture of any one of these towns would place the Galician capital in a position of grave danger.

Germans Are Making Strenuous Efforts To Stem Russian Advance

Enemy Attacks Were Repulsed---Russians Have Captured a Large Number of Prisoners---Official List of Austrians Captured Since the Present Onslaught---Italians Capture a Number of important Austrian Positions.

PETROGRAD, June 22.—The Germans are making strenuous efforts to stem the Russian advance but were repulsed at most points. The Russians have captured a large number of Germans and several machine guns on the eastern front. Official figures issued from Petrograd give the number of Austrians captured by the Russians between June 3rd and June 15th at 3,360 officers, 169,134 men, 198 guns, 550 machine guns, and a large quantity of other material.

HEAVY ATTACKS LAUNCHED.

PARIS, June 22.—The Germans have launched very heavy attacks on both banks of the Meuse.

SUCCESS FOR THE ITALIANS.

Crops Suitable For Late Sowing in Ontario

Continued Wet Weather Has Prevented the Sowing of Some of the Usual Crops at the Usual Time---Farmer Has No Reason to Feel Discouraged Over the Situation---Prospects Are Good.

Written by J. H. Grisdale, Director Dominion Experimental Farms.

In some parts of Ontario the continued wet weather that has characterized this season up to the present has prevented the sowing of some of the usual crops at the usual time and has had a tendency to discourage the the farmer. Such however, should not be the feeling since the possibilities of producing crops on land not yet sown are practically as good as ever provided the weather improves a bit and the right crops be sown in the right way and properly looked after.

Among crops sure of proving satisfactory even at this late date are barley for grain, peas and oats for forage, buckwheat, millet, hungarian grass, corn for forage or ensilage, swedes, white or flat turnips and rape.

Barley would likely do well even yet on fairly well drained land. Sow about 2 bushels per acre.

Peas and Oats sown 3 bushel oats and 1 bushel of peas per acre to be cut green for hay may be expected to give profitable returns if sown anywhere before June 25.

Millets and Hungarian Grass have wonderful possibilities as forage producers and even for seed for poultry or swine if sown before July 10.

Buckwheat may be sown up to July 10 with certainty of profitable returns on almost any kind of land where water does not stand.

Corn and Forage. Early or Flint varieties (Longfellow Comptons Early, etc.) should be chosen. Sow thinly up to June 25.

Swedes thrive in such a season as we are having and may be expected to give good returns of sown anywhere before the end of June.

Flat Turnips or White Turnips while not so satisfactory as swedes for most purposes do well if sown even as late as the end of July and are most excellent cattle feed, being particularly suitable for dairy cows. They do not keep as well as swedes.

With late seeding most thorough preparation of the seed bed is absolutely necessary if success is to be hoped for. If land has to be ploughed turn a shallow furrow and in case land is grassy it will be much better to plough again even if already ploughed last fall or early this spring. After ploughing roll, disc two or three times and harrow before seeding. After seeding roll again if surface is very dry.

In any case get the seed in well and what is quite as important in the case of hoed crops above mentioned see to it that they are kept absolutely free from weeds for the next two months. Neglect in this important detail means failure when crops are sown late.

If a choice of crops is possible sow corn, buckwheat, turnips and hungarian grass on the lighter soils and other crops on other kinds of soil, that is, clays, clay loams, peaty or mucky soils, etc., but any one of these crops will do quite well on almost any kind of land.

Soldier's Little Son Predicted Own Death

Kingston, June 21. — A startling piece of testimony was given by Pte. L. Lossee, of the 80th Battalion before County Magistrate Hunter here. Lossee was charged with desertion, but was acquitted as he proved that illness prevented him from rejoining his battalion. He told the magistrate that when he enlisted his little son remarked that if his dad joined the soldiers he (the little fellow) would die in three days. The boy contracted diphtheria and died within three days after his father enlisted.

WAR MAKES SCARCITY OF INDIAN LABOUR

FLAX GROWERS IN WINGHAM VICINITY APPREHENSIVE OF HARVESTING TIME.

Wingham, June 22.—Flax growers here state that it will be a hard job for them to harvest their crops this year owing to the scarcity of Indian labor. One grower states that where he secured the assistance of 100 Indians last year, he could only secure 35 this year. As many of the Indians have enlisted and their families are drawing from the separation and patriotic allowances, many remaining do not have to work.

SIX LIVES LOST IN EXPLOSION TWENTY INJURED

PARRY SOUND, June 22.—The explosion which occurred at the Nobel plant of the Canadian Explosives, Limited completely destroyed No. 3 charge house in the shrapnel section and caused a loss of life which may reach half a dozen or more. The explosion took place about 11.30 o'clock shattering the big building which immediately caught fire. In this building were employed about 70 hands, many of whom are hurt. About three seconds is all the time the hands had to escape.

The fire brigade of the plant was very quickly at work and saved much of the building that had been left after the explosion. Six doctors were sent from here by special train and in about an hour the first batch of injured, fifteen in number, were brought down and sent to the two hospitals. Shortly afterwards two of the injured died while being cared for.

It is thought the death roll may reach five or six with about twenty seriously injured. A large number have received slight wounds and burns. It will not be known how many were killed until the debris is removed.

This is the second accident in the shrapnel section of the works this year. It is believed that the explosion was accidental, but an inquest will be held.

MAJOR GAULT HAS FORTY-TWO WOUNDS

LONDON, June 22.—The report today that Major Hamilton Gault is doing as well as can be expected following the amputation of his leg, is showing his wonderful grit. He has 42 wounds in various parts of his body and it will be two months at least before it is possible to move him to England.

Capt. Given of the Montreal Highlanders, was killed 24 hours after being in London. An official telegram recalling him from leave missed him, but he returned voluntarily from Devonshire and went straight back to the front on hearing that the battalion had suffered in officers.

Ques.: "How much walking time" do you lose?"

Ans.: "Come again, Joe, I don't see it."

Ans.: "Say—it's lunch time, don't keep me."

Ques.: "Wait a minute, this means hundreds of dollars to you. Answer me this one—where is the time recorded in your plant?"

Ans.: "At the factory door, of course."

Ques.: "Then they do take exercise at your expense? Your employees, I mean. They can take a quite a promenade couldn't they, from factory door to department door?"

Ques.: "Why not put a Time Recorder at Each Department door? Then your employees can take all the time they need in the halls or the lavatories or cloak rooms. But they can't get into the bench until they are all ready for work and just then they "punch the clock." How about it?"

Ans.: "Sounds good. Put me next."

"TREATED ME IN CRUEL AND INHUMAN MANNER," SAID MRS. MARY VIX.

New York, June 22.—Mrs. Mary Vix who died on June 10, leaving about $60,000, gave $1.00 to her husband, Edward Vix, of the Palace Hotel, Montgomery, N.Y., by her will. The remainder of her estate went to her son and daughter, George Vix receiving five-sixths, as Mrs. Maude Malloy had previously received most of her interest.

The will said: "The reason I have bequeathed to my husband the sum of one dollar is that from almost the commencement of our married life he has constantly neglected me, he has always failed and refused to properly support me and my children and has almost constantly treated me in a cruel and inhuman manner."

German Food Laws Draw Press Attack

Berlin Tageblatt Bitterly Assails Government's Method of Handling Crisis

LAYS FAULT TO RED TAPE

PAUL HARMS DECLARES PRUSSIAN AND IMPERIAL BUREAUCRATS ARE COLD-BLOODED TO THE PEOPLE.

Bitter attacks by leading German publicists upon the bureaucracy of the Empire for its failure to solve the problem of an equitable distribution of the food supplies and its success in enmeshing the public in an enormous mass of red tape, were largely responsible for the recent move in official circles in Berlin ending in the establishment of a "food dictatorship," according to reports in German newspapers reaching this country.

It is further pointed out that the freedom with which this criticism was exercised indicated that the Government was willing to have the people thus prepared for a drastic change in the method of handling the critical situation created by the blockade and the ensuing shortage of food. For instance, the Berlin Tageblatt, one of the leading papers of the Empire, both in circulation and in influence, featured on the front page of its issue of April 16 the following attack upon the bureaucracy by Paul Harms, a noted writer:

"When petroleum began to become scarce people justly banned the use of alcohol for lighting purposes. At this time many persons in moderate or straitened circumstances had their kerosene lamps rebuilt or bought spirit lamps. It must have been especially pleasing to these people to read a little while ago that the Spirits Bureau, at the request of the Imperial Ministry of the Interior, had stopped the delivery of alcohol for light and fuel. 'Until further notice, nothing more. So, respected public you know enough now to draw the conclusion for yourself!

LAMPS RENDERED USELESS.

"The green table over which such things are often 'regulated' has electric light, of course. The gentlemen who issued their orders from there have no idea what it means to poor people to scrape together five or ten marks for the purpose of providing themselves with a means of illumination which they have reason to believe will be permanent. It may be that the gentlemen act under pressure of an imperative necessity when they, without any warning, render these apparatuses useless within 24 hours. But isn't the infinitely patient and self-sacrificing German people worthy of receiving at least a word of explanation and reassurance regarding these severe measures? Besides, the gentlemen of the green table surely know how to obtain publicity when it is necessary to present their own excellence in the right light. Why, then, be so stingy with words when a fresh burden is added to the many already borne by the poor and the very poor? The saving of fuel is a nice thing, and those who draw a steady income from the State certainly will not find it particularly hard to show themselves deserving in this connection. Unfortunately besides these there are plenty of poor devils, both male and female, who are compelled to toil until far into the night unless they want to starve to death altogether. It would not be doing too much to at least tell them that they are not being deprived of their costly material for fuel in the future merely as a joke.

CALLS IT COLD BLOODED.

"This cold-blooded way of ruling from above by means of paper ordinances, regardless of the inevitable consequences involved, is not, unfortunately, an isolated case in our so-called war economic administration.

"It is not surprising, therefore, that a succinct criticism of this war administration, coming from an authoritative source, proves simply annihilating. The convention of German Mayors has sent a memorial to the Imperial Chancellor which, while mainly devoted to what should be done in the future regarding economic administration, is not able to avoid passing judgment upon the measures adopted in the past as a basis for its recommendations. This judgment is that the Government has been entirely lacking in foresight that it has adopted its measures under the pressure of the moment and for the moment, and that it has had no comprehension at all of the most important task, that of the just distribution of the abundant supplies on hand. Thanks to a management both short sighted and short of intelligence, we have brought about a shortage in potatoes, following a record crop. Hardly was the scarcity of potatoes half way relieved when for months we had the elevating spectacle of the shortage of butter and its results. And after a necessary change has been made there the shortage of sugar takes care that the Imperial capital is not obliged to forego the spectacle of crowds of human beings waiting for hours in the front of stores. Such a feat in the greatest sugar-producing country could hardly be equalled by any one else!

"Already before the beginning of the first winter of the war competing authorities—and here Dr. Heim of Bavaria must be given the first place—directed the attention of the Government most expressly to the fact that nothing was to be accomplished by forcible price regulation alone; that it was absolutely necessary to organize the relation between production and consumption, and that whoever wanted to creat this organization must, above all, take control of all the supplies on hand. To-day, with exception of the second winter of the war behind us, the representatives of the cities inform the Government in writing that it has only concerned itself with the questions of prices and supplies and that it has criminally neglected the question of equitable distribution. And they demand that an early end be made to this irresponsible negligence, and that now, in the spring, a far-reaching programme be laid down that will cover the entire harvest year and that—and it is remarkable that this must be expressly asserted—it be executed with a firm will. It is worthy of particular emphasis that the demands of the Convention of Mayors refrain from criticising the agricultural industry. No reproaches are made nor are any unfair demands presented. It is merely stated that the farmers must be informed now what they will have to furnish in the fall and winter, and it is strange enough, and anything but creditable to us, that after two war winters, it is necessary to state this as a preliminary condition to holding out.

"Or is it perhaps creditable after all? It is, from a certain point of view, but then not for those upon whom lay the responsibility. It is to the credit of the people that it has been able to adjust itself so well, despite all these preposterous, rash, and half-way measures. Perhaps the most brilliant evidence of the indestructible vitality of our people is to be found in the fact that, in spite of all official shortcomings, it could not be beaten down. That the people has held out better than was expected through two war winters, although the holding out has been made more difficult through the measures adopted at home than by the measures used by the enemy; that we, despite all official precautions, despite 10,000 orders by the Federal Council, despite a monstrous development of the bureaucratic apparatus in the shape of imperial grain, imperial meat, imperial potato, imperial clothing, imperial leather, imperial sugar, imperial coffee, and God only knows what other imperial bureaus, still stand so firmly on sound feet; this will perhaps be regarded by posterity as the greatest wonder of this time, of war that has not been exactly destitute of surprises. Bismarck in his day was often seized with fear at the sight of the sinister work of the pens of the bureaucracy; he was afraid that some day we might be smothered in it. Could he see what an overweight we are able to endure in this respect in addition to all other burdens, he would confess that the Germany he had put in the saddle would still be able to ride under such difficult circumstances.

Dreads Another Winter.

"But must a people that has shown itself to be sound and capable of far greater resistance than was expected be handed over to the bureaucracy for further experiments, so that the latter may find out to what degree the burden due to preposterous and insufficient measures can be endured. The Mayors' Convention is decidedly of the contrary opinion, and the people will agree with it. If the people will agree, however, then the fact must not be concealed that it is high time the righteous demands made by the Mayors' Convention be granted. Unfortunately, we shall be compelled to reduce our hopes that it will be done to a minimum. For an answer to the question of from what quarter is to come the improvement for us for the third winter of the war—for which we have to prepare ourselves under all circumstances—is desperately hard to find. It is hardly to be expected that in the wondrously beautiful month of May there will come a rejuvenating sprouting and budding in the bureaus that are responsible to us for all the 'cares and impossibilities' in the past. We might call upon the Reichstag, if we hadn't done it so many times, and in vain. It is a long time since we have seen as sorry a disappointment as the Economic Advisory Council to the Imperial Ministry of the Interior has become.

"It has been the custom to call for help after the measures adopted prove to be failures. And certainly not without reason. For who is to free us from the concerns, ills due to humdrum bureaucracy if not men who will replace this continual considering, investigating, and altering of mistaken regulations with intelligently directed deeds? If we have such men, we should put them where they can do their work. We shouldn't overcautiously inquire of them which way they came, nor regarding their names and manners. Only we must repeat what has already been said here on one occasion, and that is that neither the Imperial Administration nor the Prussian Administration seems to be the ground where such talents as we so urgently need at present are growing naturally. We suffer not merely under the sins of the race of bureaucrats ruling at present; we are being planned by the sins of a long past for which we are all jointly responsible. And we ought to remind ourselves of this once in a while."

A PRAYER.

There is a cheery and characteristic poem by Mrs. Nellie McClung, who is a "Grey Girl" by birth. The verses, "A Prayer," may well express the feelings of all:

Lord, let me live while I can see
The beauty in the blossoming tree,
The message in the wayside flower,
And love it for its one short hour:
While morning song of lark and jay,
Can scatter all my doubts away,
And lift my poor heart from the sod,
And tell them I am born of God;
While I can feel I'm linked with all
The burdened ones who halt and fall,
While I can feel my share of blame
In every cheek that's dyed with shame,
While I can feel life's burdens sweep
Across my heart and drive out sleep,
While I can suffer, hunger, strive,
Lord, let me live
—for I'm alive.

But if the time should come when I
Forget to lift my eyes on high,
Forget to seek for love divine,
Or seek it for me and mine;
When my dim eyes shall fail to trace
Thy image in each human face,
When lulled by comfort, ease and pride,
I find my soul is satisfied
To build its house of wood and hay,
Letting the old world go its way,
Content to preen before a glass
Where wounded ones barefooted pass,
Easing my conscience if I must
By throwing hungry dogs a crust,
Then, Lord, thy crowning mercy shed
And let me die
—for I am dead.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Some Easy Marks

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

To let you into a part of the plot at the beginning, so that it may not be so great a puzzle to your brain, it may be stated that there was a widow named Ridgeway living at Colville, a town of 2,000 inhabitants.

There was living, also, at Beach Hill a lawyer named Hammond. Beach Hill and Colville were forty miles apart, but the lawyer and the widow had somehow become acquainted, and perhaps they would have fallen in love had either been able to support the other. Five miles from Beach Hill was a place called Widowville. There was a good reason for it. Five widowers, all farmers, had built their houses there. Each widower had a lot of children, numbering from five to eight.

Between Beach Hill and Widowville was a farm of eighty acres called the Lester farm. In seven years it had had five tenants. The soil was so poor that they all starved out. This farm the Widow Ridgeway leased.

Of course the five widowers of Widowville heard of the widow's arrival and what she proposed to do, and they pricked up their ears and said that something would be doing. Enos Cook, who had the biggest number of children, was the first one to drive over and introduce himself.

Jason Turner was the next caller, and he went over the same ground and came away feeling just as good. So it was with Luke Harper, Moses Swift and Philetus Johnson. All looked upon the Widow Ridgeway as a prize to be won, and each one determined in his own mind to win her, though he didn't say anything to the others about it.

Two weeks had passed when they all called again, and this time their talk with the widow was more free.

It was at the third call that the plot developed. "If the farmers could spare a little time from their own work they might plow a little and plant a little for her and thus help her along. Of course they would. They would be only too glad to do it. What crop did the widow think would pay her best? She promptly answered that potatoes would probably be the best selling crop. How many acres? Why, she had figured out that about sixty acres would be the right thing.

Sixty acres of potatoes! Why, the average farmer thinks he has a big planting if he puts in ten. The widowers elevated their eyebrows in something like horror, but after a conference lasting an hour it was agreed to come to the widow's figures. When it came time for plowing the five brought their teams and plows and worked happily together. When they couldn't come themselves they sent their hired men. Sixty acres is a big field, but it was eventually plowed and dragged. It was then that the widow made an announcement. She gathered together the five tired men at the back door and said:

"My friends, do not think I lack modesty when I tell you that I know you are all in love with me and intend to propose marriage. I like you all. You are good and true men. I cannot as yet say that I prefer one to another, but I am going to carry out a plan. The one that does the most for me in this matter of the potato crop I shall look upon as being the most worthy to become my husband."

To plant sixty acres of ground takes a heap of seed potatoes. The widow didn't have a peck. The five farmers chipped in and bought them for her. They planted them for her. When it was time they plowed them out and hoed them for her. Again, when it was time they dug them for her. When the tubers were ripe for digging the potato trust sent a man to offer 50 cents a bushel, which was the usual price. Two weeks later, after it had been ascertained that not another potato would be offered for sale in that part of the state, it raised its offer to 75 cents, and the widow took it.

When the last potato had been loaded up and drawn away the widow Ridgeway gave a banquet to the five farmers, and it was known that her choice was to be announced. The farmers noticed that eight plates were placed on the table. That meant two more persons were to sit down. They arrived. It was Lawyer Hammond and the Baptist preacher from the village. What business had brought them? Inquired each farmer of himself, but no one had solved the question when the banquet was finished, and the lawyer rose up and said:

"Gentlemen, this has been a great race between who should have the widow's heart and hand. You have all done nobly. Each one of you has shown himself to be a good and true man. In fact, you all have been so worthy of this good woman's love that she cannot decide which one of you to accept. She cannot marry the whole five of you, as you must know, and rather than give herself to one and make the four others miserable for life she has decided to marry the sixth man, which is me." The marriage took place, but there were five men who did not smile nor offer a congratulation. Their faces were very solemn as they slid out of the house and started for their homes, and on their way thither each one remarked to himself:

"Gol durn my cuts and dogs! If any one had told me that I was such an easy mark I'd have licked him all over a ten acre lot!"

Had Palpitation
OF THE HEART
ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. F. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Cured

Here's the remarkable experience of a Nova Scotian:—

"I was once a terrible sufferer with kidney and bladder troubles, and at times I would lose the use of my legs, and could not go away from home without some one with me. I was treated by different doctors for 3 years, and only got temporary relief. My son advised me to take Gin Pills, and after taking the first 2 or 3 doses I got relief. I continued to take them until I got completely cured. I owe my life to Gin Pills.

Yours very truly,
P. M. KEMPTON,

GIN PILLS are 50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50 at all druggists. Sample treatment free if requested.

SHE GAINED 20 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy, had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 20 pounds in weight."

WHERE WOMAN EXCELS.

Spinsters More Practical and Efficient Than Bachelors.

Many queer things happen in Chicago, especially among the college professors, but a new light on human nature is reflected by a recent story from that city. A bachelor Judge of the Court of Domestic Relations has, at his own request, removed from that bench to a new sphere of duty. The daily recitals of matrimonial tribulations were too much for his powers of endurance, and he found himself becoming morbid and unhappy in his judicial atmosphere of unending woes. The Judge had had the job only six months, but in that brief period he had lost most of his beautiful illusions regarding life and all his poetical ideals of matrimony had evaporated. He came to believe that married happiness was about the hollowest of romantic fiction, and he begged for a change of jurisdiction lest he become a hopeless misogynist.

Of course, it was too severe a test for any sensitive bachelor to be subjected to. Only a thoroughly domesticated man, a husband of long experience could endure listening to the continued airing of domestic relations with fortitude and composure. Such a man has usually lost the fine edge of his juvenile illusions through a gradual process of attrition, and his ideals have been reduced to hardpan. In short, he is a "practical man," fortified by the one form of higher education that can count in such matters, and he has learned to take the world and married life as he finds them.

Introduced too suddenly to a persistent course of this intimate knowledge, the average bachelor could scarcely withstand the shock. A year of it would probably permanently embitter him and lay the foundation for a crabbed old age. Putting an ingenious and idealistic single man in such a judicial position as this, with all its variety of sad enlightenment, might well be called cruelty to bachelors. If we had women Judges, it would be altogether different with a spinster in such a position.

40 YEAR PERIOD OF WET WEATHER IS A POSSIBILITY

Weather Man at Toronto Makes No Official Statement But Offers Little Cheer in Observations

TORONTO, June 22—The announcement of the official weather prophets this morning that to-morrow, as well as to-day, is to be fair should pacify in some measure those who had begun to criticize the continued wet spell in heated terms and with expressive adjectives. The only drawback to the announcement is that it is not to be attended by summer warmth, but is to be accompanied by the coolness of early spring or fall.

We are also warned that the fact that to-day or to-morrow or even the next day is fair is not be be construed as a promise of continued dry weather. It is even a possibility that we are enveloped in a cycle of wet weather. The officials of the bureau have talked in whispers of this possibility, but are not sure enough to stake their reputations on it. The evidence to support such a possibility consists in the fact that the beginning of the 19th century was almost drowned in the rains. For about forty years after this the weather was fairly dry, although once in a while there were heavy downpours in some seasons.

More Deluges.

In the forties the rain came on again. In the eighties there were more deluges, and now as we approach the end of the third forty-year period, we find that the weather is once more becoming wetter than was ever known to extend over such a long period. While the ends of the forty-year periods seem to have been characterized by exceptional rains, in between them the country experienced variations or rain and drought, each of two or three or four years' duration. The year 1911 marked the summit of the last period of drought. From 1912 to 1915 the amount of rain has been on the increase, until last summer over 16 inches fell in July, August and September. This year the rain seems to have begun earlier. The peculiarity of this wet season is that the Maritime Provinces in the east, which one would think would have more rain than the inland territory, have been very dry. Newfoundland has had hardly any rain at all this year. This disproves the idea which has been gaining weight that what is going on in France is responsible for the wet weather.

The Squibs of Man.

"The shooting of all the big guns that have ever been made or ever will be made are mere squibs compared to the natural forces of nature in producing atmospheric changes," said Sir Frederick Stupart, head of the weather office of the Dominion. Sir Frederic mentioned that Newfoundland and the eastern provinces were right in line with France and, that if the firing were responsible for the rain, the eastern provinces of the Dominion ought to have had it before it got to Ontario, whereas they have not.

As for the effect of the sun spots on the weather and their connection, if any, with the rain, the weather officials are inclined to be credulous. It is admitted that areas of sun spots affect the magnetic conditions of the earth. Once ever 11 years the sun spots are very pronounced and at such times the magnetic poles of the earth move somewhat from their usual location. But it is not on this account that they may have an effect on the rain, but because they affect the amount of heat given out by the sun.

Sun Spots Pronounced.

Last May 16 there were several pronounced sun spots in the central portion of the sun. They extended over an area of 35,000 miles — more than enough to compass the entire earth. Possibly these spots induced some of the change in the sun, so that the usual heat is not being given, and so the usual breezes are not induced. For all breezes and air currents have their prime origin in the sun's heat, and this is the variable quantity which makes our temperature changes.

Factors in Weather.

The factors which are responsible for the weather in any given place are: First, the distance from the equator. That cannot be changed. The second is the distance from the seaboard. That is also fixed; and the third is the altitude, which does not vary to any appreciable extent in several thousand years. The only other element is the prevailing winds, and these depend altogether on the heat of the sun, which makes the air so hot at the equator that it rises and produces a lightening of the atmosphere behind it, so that currents are immediately set up to equalize the pressure. At present there are only two spots on the sun; One is on the western face and the other is on the eastern side; but plenty of rain has occurred when there were no spots on the sun at all. It cannot, therefore, be the spots which directly affect our atmosphere and cause rain; but inasmuch as they affect the sun's radiation, changing the usual amount of heat which falls on this earth, they are a factor in rainfall.

Possible Solution.

Seeing that changes in the sun cause different variations in weather, Sir Frederick Stupart is of the opinion that in the study of the sun's face lies possibly a solution to some of our weather problems.

Forced To Leave School, Had St. Vitus' Dance

Astonishing Cure of This Nervous Trouble Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Here is a case where life-long gratitude will be felt for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As a school girl and in later life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to the rescue when the nerves gave out. Now a healthy, robust woman happily gives the credit to this great food cure for restoring her to health and strength.

Miss Sadie M. White, 28 Waterloo street, Fredericton, N.B. writes:—

"When ten years of age a friend of mine had St. Vitus' Dance and she had to leave school and go under a doctor's care. Instead of benefiting by the treatment she appeared to get worse. Her tonsils and tongue became so swollen that she could scarcely take any nourishment. For two weeks she was this way and then took convulsions and nearly choked to death. She was ordered to the hospital, but soon got worse again. I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to her and she used nine boxes, steadily growing better. Three years later a severe fright brought on the nervous trouble again, and she suffered everything a human being could endure. Her mother bought a dozen boxes of Nerve Food, and with this treatment she was fully restored. I wish you could see her now, a strong, healthy, robust woman with two lovely babies. She still uses the Nerve Food when she feels out of sorts, but has had no return of the old nervous trouble."

For weak, puny, nervous children there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood, restores the starved nerves and start them on the way to health. When they fail to get proper nourishment from the food they eat, this food cure presents the necessary ingredients in condensed and easily assimilated form, and strength and vigor is restored. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

GERMAN SOLDIER A DESERTER AFTER SEEING THE DEAD

IN THE ARGONNE FOREST, June 19.—My companion is an American, given to American habits of speech. He regarded Frita heavily for some minutes when that unattractive specimen was led out before us. He heard what Frita had done. Then he delivered judgment.

"You gotta hand it to him," said he. "He don't look the part, but he certainly puts it over. You gotta hand it to him."

Because Frita is a successful deserter from the German army. There is no more dangerous task in war that the accomplishing of a successful desertion. Some one is always watching from both sides. The deserter stands an excellent chance of being shot in the back by his jilted comrades as he runs, and a more than excellent chance of being shot in front by the other fellows. The mere fact that an enemy soldier comes hootink "Kamarad!" through the fog does not guarantee his good faith. He may merely be the live bait of a new ruse.

ADMITS HIS FRIGHT.

"Certainly I was frightened!" said Frita when interrogated. "Mein Gott!"

Frita is an undersized little runt of a man. When I saw him, surrounded as he was by tall, slender, good-looking young officers of a certain French staff, he looked even smaller and more worm-eaten than he really is. His weakened little face is decked by a fringe of foxy-red and unraced for whiskers. He wore the "feld-grau" recently issued to the German soldiers and which is of such mediocre quality that it fades and wrinkles quite shamelessly. His blue eyes were cunning and hard and shifting.

"All the time I was frightened," Frita added, "by the shells".

BUT HE WILL BE SHOT.

Incidentally "Frita" is a generic name for German prisoners. They are all Fritzes. The name of this particular Frita will not be given, because he may escape being propped against a German wall and shot when the war is over. It is difficult to see just how he will escape. He will be exchanged with the rest of the German prisoners of war, and somewhere in Germany Frita's dossier is to-day crossed by a line telling of his desertion in the face of the enemy on the morning of May, 1916. Still he may escape. He is very hopeful.

"The chance is better than lying between the lines where those others lie," said Frita, with a shudder. "With the rain beating on their faces and turning them gray. And the rain beating on them at night—"

He is one of the Ersatz regiments. These are composed of men who escaped military service before the war for one and another reason. In Frita's case the reason is evident. He is too small to be worth incorporating in an army during time of peace. The top of his head seems hardly to come to the shoulder of a man of ordinary size.

Ten months ago Frita was inoculated and taken to the barracks. He blames himself secretly for this. It did not occur to him, he says, that Germany would ever call for his services. He might have escaped across the frontier long ago.

DEAD MEN MADE HIM ILL.

The months he was drilled and goose-stepped and right-shoulder-shifted into the semblance of a soldier. One morning a draft left for the front. Frita was in it. He was not in fear, he says. He had never before felt so well. He had been worked and fed until he was in the prime of condition. The other men suffered a bit because they were leaving their families and were a bit nervy over what might come.

Frita doesn't worry about any family he may have, and he has not imagination enough to imagine what the front might be like. He reached "the back of the front" and stayed there for a few days. One night his detachment marched for hours. At last they reached the front line trenches.

Ten days before an attack upon the French trenches had failed at this point. A French counter-attack had likewise been repulsed. Between the lines were the grim evidences of that double failure. Frita watched them, fascinated, through his loophole. Sometimes shells fell among them, so that the dead seemed to stir uneasily in their sleep.

The sight made him physically ill. He tried to retire decently into his dug-out, but his comrades would have none of it. Most of them were veterans. They had no patience with men who suffered from queasiness.

"Two days I watched them," said Frita. "At night it seemed to me I could see candles moving about their heads."

Then the French began to shell. In the Argonne the French shell with a sort of joyous abandon. If the Germans make a serious reply, the storm of French shells is redoubled, for here they send two shells, at least, to the Germans' one. For three days that shelling was continued. Frita saw men fresh killed in his trench. They lay there for hours until they could be carried away. He learned the scent of new blood. He heard the wounded men cry. He began to suffer—actually to suffer—from fear, it is probably quite impossible for the normal man to appreciate what the congenial coward feels at such times. His sergeant kicked him, and his comrades heartily approved of the kicking. No matter Frita continued to be inexhaustibly ill.

TRYING TO MAKE A MAN.

One day he was put on sentry duty at a "listening post"—a spur trench which had been run toward the French lines. His officer perhaps thought to cure Frita of his cowardice or kill him. Maybe he thought such a shameful coward would be a better listener than a better man.

The shells fell faster that day. Bullets whistled overhead. It was cold and foggy, and a raw wind blew. Frita coughed and shivered and attended to his blue and swollen nose, and listened. At last he could stand no more. He threw down his rifle and leaped out of his trench and ran toward the French trenches.

Both sides fired at him, but by a miracle he was unhurt. He tumbled breathless into a trench filled with equally breathless Frenchmen, who for a time believed he was but the forerunner of some new German trick. Ever since he has been anxiously responding to each question put to him by the French staff in the hope that he may gain merit in their eyes.

"Do you believe him," I asked. A French officer laughed and bade me listen. He stepped to Frita's side.

"Has the Kaiser been wounded?" he asked.

The group of officers laughed and turned away and Frita spattered up a gray and dripping street, knee deep in mud, between two stalwart French guards. A cold rain was being driven by a raw wind through his cheap looking gray uniform. He had no overcoat. Great beads of rain water ran through his fringy red whiskers. That night he might sleep in a stone stable on a pile of hay. My American companion nudged me.

"Happily little cuss," said he. 'Look at him smile.'

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms poisonous alkaline-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxines, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn of constipation, biliousness, acid stomachs, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

Instant Relief for

Flatulence

Heartburn and Windy Spasms

The efficacy of Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief in these complaints will be a revelation to those who have hitherto trusted to bismuth or soda mixtures, or to old-fashioned liver pills and salts. The trouble is due to gas in the stomach or bowels arising from undigested food, and the natural remedy is to restore the organs to healthy action. Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief does that quickly, surely, and so it effects real cure where the old purgative preparations only weaken the system, and create the pill-taking or salts-taking habit.

Take Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief for constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, sick headache, dizziness, specks before the eyes, faintness and windy spasms, acidity, heartburn, impure blood, and that dull, heavy feeling which is a sure indication of liver troubles.

Law Delays Astor Marriage No License Before Thursday

Bar Harbor, Maine, June 18.—Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor's marriage plans swirled and shifted to-day like the gray mist that curled in from the Atlantic and encompassed her picturesque summer home, Isleeote.

The young widow of Colonel Astor found that she and her fiance, William Karl Dick, were helpless in the face of the rockbound marriage license laws of the State of Maine.

Accordingly, after hours at the long distance telephone, Mrs. Astor recalled the limited invitations she had issued for to-morrow evening. She told her friends she and Mr. Dick might wait until Thursday, when a license can legally be issued for the marriage.

"Or, perhaps," she added, "I shall meet Mr. Dick in New York and be married there."

The beautiful young widow was almost in tears this afternoon when W. H. Sherman, the town clerk, motored up to her Mount Desert home.

A license application had been filed in her behalf on Saturday by Victor Cushman, a young Newport and Washington society man.

The town clerk explained that under a law of April 2, 1913, five days must elapse before non-residents can be united in marriage following the filing of an application.

PRETTY WIDOW PROVOKED.

"Dear, dear!" exclaimed Mrs. Astor. "My New York attorneys told me I could come to Maine and be married the same day. They read the Maine statute to me, but it must have been before the 1913 act was passed.

"Isn't there anyway that we can secure a special permit or something," she continued in high excitement.

"I don't believe there is," responded Mr. Sherman. "As town clerk I cannot break the law."

"Isn't that the most provoking thing that you ever heard of?" remarked Mrs. Astor. "Why I had everything planned for the wedding to-morrow evening. I think I will go to New York this afternoon and be married there."

The young woman consulted with her mother, Mrs. William H. Force, and her sister, Katherine, who arrived to-day. They called New York on the phone and consulted with members of the Force and Dick families and others. Then she called Mr. Sherman again. He again assured her there was no possible way of getting around the awkward clause in the law.

"It looks as though Thursday will be the earliest date you can issue my license," she told him. "Well, perhaps I shall have to wait until then. You are sure that nothing will go awry?"

Mr. Sherman assured her he would issue the license on Thursday. The town official asked if she had definitely decided to be married on Thursday.

MAY NOT WAIT TILL THURSDAY

"Yes, I suppose so," she said wearily, "unless I find that the law is simpler in Massachusetts or some other nearby state."

A number of the wedding guests, including William H. Force and the Dick family party, were due to-morrow. They may however delay their trip because of the postponement of the wedding.

The old Tudor house on the hill had been elaborately decorated with flowers from the Astor and George Vanderbilt greenhouses. A wedding supper had been specially ordered and everything was in readiness for the nuptials.

The Rev. A. C. Larned the rector of St. Saviour's Protestant Episcopal Church on Mt Desert street, had agreed to perform the ceremony. The minister to-night was as much "up in the air" on the wedding plans as anyone.

"The wedding is going to take place—I am certain of that," he said, when seen at the rectory. "When?—Why, frankly, I can't tell you. Mrs. Astor has asked me to say nothing, and I know practically nothing."

Neither Mrs. Astor nor her mother and sister would see newspaper men to-day. She talked for a time with the local correspondent of a New York paper, a young man who was formerly in her secretarial service. She authorized her former employee to say that she would not give out any statement before Tuesday evening—if then.

HOPED TO AVOID PUBLICITY.

Despite the cumulative evidence, Mrs. Astor would not even publicly admit that she was engaged or that she intended marrying. A friend said to-night she had really hoped to be married before any announcement of her intentions reached the public.

"It was a source of gratification to her that her engagement of several months had been kept a close secret," said this friend.

"She is so deeply and sincerely in love with Mr. Dick that she wanted to keep her love to herself."

Mrs. Astor does not consider that she is making any sacrifice in marrying Mr. Dick. She cares nothing for the huge fortune that she will lose because of her remarriage, and I know she has scorned the suggestion that a court contest might result in her retention of control of some of the Astor millions.

Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Don't use soaps and prepared shampoos that contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky; bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Salt dissolved in alcohol will remove spots of grease from cloth.

New Russian Shells Made in America

Washington, June 21—Ordnance experts in both the Navy and War Departments declare that the shell Russia is using in her present offensive is a product of American manufactories. An ordnance official said today:

"They are of the nine-inch and fourteen inch howitzer types, and hundreds of thousands have been shipped from the United States within the last year. The fourteen inch type carries principally explosives and its object is to do blasting work, of which there have been demonstrations in the German shells around Verdun. The nine inch type carries explosives but also a head full of grape and canister. It follows a bombardment by shells of larger calibre.

"The United States' choice lies for future adoption between the nine inch and the fourteen inch and the sixteen inch type for attack on fortresses."

LUMBERMEN IN ENGLAND

Expert Canadian lumbermen are scattered through many forests of England cutting down trees for the purpose of "making a battering-ram wherewith to win the war." These brown, lithe backwoodsmen—half soldier and half trapper—were brought to England from the Dominion because of their knowledge of the forests, to turn into a war asset the vast and valuable stretches of British timberland. Apart from the timber proper, which is so much in demand for military purpose, the by-products are valuable for they include tanning bark, turpentine and potash.

The first work of the Canadians was the marking down and surveying of certain tracts of forest land, "blazing" the trees—mainly the soft wood trees of pine and fir—and so arranging their scheme of attack that the beauties of the rural scenes would not be unnecessarily marred. With the arrival of the plants and the milling machinery the lumbermen began turning out wood in all sorts of forms from railway ties to matches.

There are still left in England two and a half milloin acres of forest, the Crown woods alone covering about 125,000 acres.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7765

In this dress the colors seen by candle-light will be the same as seen by day—'tis made for the beautiful silks or other handsome weaves and for a harmony of the beautiful colors, of which we have so many that choice is really difficult. There's a spell in every line of the garment, and the spell or charm will be there just the same without the "lines" of a striped material. Just full of style and snap, with the double collar in cape effect and in scalloped outline; the cuffs on three-quarter sleeves are in harmony. There is a front closing to the plain waist, which has the shoulder edges gathered. A silk girdle is used to conceal the joining of the one-piece gathered skirt, that may be plain, as illustrated, or have trimming bands.

The pattern may be had in sizes 36 to 42 inches. To make like the illustration in size 36 will require 5⅛ yards of 40 inch material, with 1 yard for collar and cuffs in contrasting cloth in 36 inch width. In all one material 8¾ yards of goods 40 inches wide will be needed.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough

AUSTRIANS TO GIVE UP BUKOWINA

HOT FIGHTING RESUMED AT VERDUN

THE AUSTRIAN ARMY DEMORALIZED WILL ABANDON SOUTHERN BUKOWINA

Austrians Are Abandoning Large Quantities of Ammunition in the Flight While Russians Are Throwing Large Forces Across the Sereth River in an Attempt to Cut Off Army From the Carpathians---Russian Advance in North Reported Checked.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, June 22.—Gen. Pflanger's demoralized army is preparing to abandon all Southern Bukowina to the Russians, according to Berne despatches to-day. The Berne correspondents received their information from Vienna. They reported that the Austrians would make a stand at Rodna Pass, twenty miles northwest of the Roumanian frontier, and at other strategic points, barring he Russian advance ino Hungary. The Russians are now throwing large forces across the Sereth River, attempting to cut off large Austrian forces before they reach the Carpathians. The Austrians are abandoning large quantities of ammunition in their flight. Despatches from all sources agreed to-day that the Russian advance on the northern wing has been checked by heavy Austro-German counter attacks.

ROME, June 22.—A Bucharest despatch to-day reported that preparations for the military evacuation of Lemberg were made at a special Austro-German war council.

LONDON, June 22.—In the Commons to-day it was announced that the Admiralty, after a rigid investigation, had considered it unnecessary to hold a court martial in regard to the sinking of the cruiser Hampshire with Kitchener aboard.

Hot Fighting Around Verdun Positions

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), June 22.—German troops pushed forward in furious fighting early to-day near Fort Vaux, on the northeastern front of Verdun, the War Office announced. The Germans launched a powerful onslaught in Fumin Wood. They gained a small thicket but were quickly driven out by the French counter attack. At midnight the Germans directed a second drive. They were repulsed with bloody losses, except between the Fumin and Chenois woods where they gained a foothold in advanced French trenches. Stubborn grenade fighting occurred all night west and south of Fort Vaux. A German grenade attack on Hill 321 failed. West of the Meuse the enemy attacked last night on the southern slopes of Dead Man's Hall, but were repulsed. In the Champagne a hot artillery duel is going on. The War Office announced that enemy war planes were shot down in Lorraine. Air squadrons bombarded the stations at Apremont, Grand Pre, Sarges and the military depot north of Thronville.

Arabs Have Revolted Against the Turks

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (Bulletin), June 22.—Reuter's despatches say thousands of Arabs have risen against the Turks in Asiatic Turkey and have captured the Holy City of Mecca, and also Meddina, and are continuing advance to other parts of the country.

LONDON, June 22.—The Post says: "The uprising is due to the recent wholesale executions of the Mohammedan and Syrian notables, also to the spreading in Aribia of a feeling that the Turks have become the vassals of Germany."

The Graphic says: "The revolt is a smashing blow at Turkey, and the capture of Mecca is an event which will shake Turkish prestige to its foundations."

King of Greece Has Accepted the Demands

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 22.—M. Zaimas, the Greek Premier, announced to-day that King Constantine has accepted all the demands of the Allies, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Athens.

The demands of the Allies, which Greece has conceded included the complete demobilization of the Greek army; the deportation of German agents, and the suppression of German propaganda; and protection for proally propaganda. One report says a large Allied fleet has been cruising off the Greek port of Pireaus (Athens) for some days, to enforce Allies' demands.

Llvely Fighting on The Italian Front

Examiner Special:

ROME, June 22.—Lively fighting is going on in the Ladro Valley, the War Office announced to-day. An Austrian attack was completely repulsed in Tuesday's fighting. Between Lake Garda and he Astico Valley artillery engagements and infantry skirmishes occurred, the Italians taking many small posts.

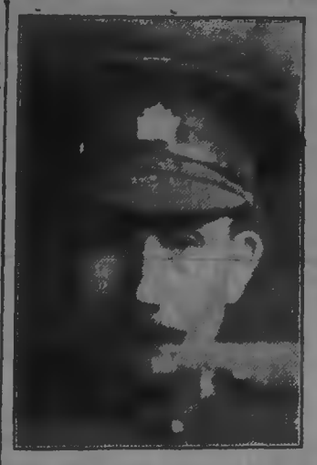
A special meeting in the interests of recruiting will be held this evening in the City Council chamber. Lieut.-Col. C. G. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for the Dominion is expected to be present. Matters respecting ways and means of promoting recruiting will be discussed. Representatives of the City Council, County Council, Board of Trade and other local bodies will be present.



PTE. GEO. EZRA REED, Peterborough member of the Mounted Rifles, who is reported wounded. This is the second time in a few weeks Pte. Reed has been on the list.

COLLISION IN BASEBALL GAME ENDS IN DEATH

Philip Taylor, Seventeen-Year-Old Peterborough Boy, Dies as a Result of a Simple Accident in Church League Game

DIED THIS MORNING

Philip Taylor, the seventeen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Taylor, 45 Ware street, passed away this morning under most tragic circumstances as the result of a simple accident in a game of baseball. The mishap occurred during a Church League game at Central Park on Tuesday evening between Knox church and the East City teams. Young Taylor was playing shortstop for the Knox church team. An East City batter hit a high fly into the diamond and Taylor and Frank Montgomery, who was playing second base, both went after it, colliding while running at full speed Taylor was knocked over but it was not thought at first that he was seriously injured. The medical aid was summoned and the unfortunate boy was removed to his home. His condition was bad yesterday as a result of internal injuries, and although he rallied last night for a while the improvement was only momentary and he passed away this morning about 8 o'clock. The affair was purely accidental, such collisions often happening in a ball game.

His father and mother survive him as well as five brothers, three of whom are on active service. The brothers are Gunner Alfred in France with the C.F.A., Pte. Fred at Barriefield with the 133th, Pte. Oliver at Barriefield with the 93rd. Ben at home, and Will in Cobourg.

The community generally will sympathize with the family in their bereavement. The boy was a bright, likeable youngster. He had just finished at King Edward school for the ball team of which he used to play.

The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock to Little Lake cemetery, with a service at the house at 2.30. Rev. Mr. McKenzie will officiate.

PENSIONS FOR THE CANADIAN SOLDIERS LARGELY INCREASED

Yearly Pay For Total Disability For Privates Increased From $264 to $480--Other Ranks Raised in Proportion--News From Barriefield Camp--Recruiting Notes and General Military News.

OTTAWA, June 22.—Following are the new soldiers disability pensions, showing increases all along the line. These figures are for totally disabled cases. The lesser cases of disability are graded into four other classes, with proportionate increases under the new schedule:

Sergeants and company staff sergeants, $336 to $540.

Regimental Sergeants, $432 to $620.

Warrant officers, $420 to $600.

Lieutenants, $480 to $720.

Captains, $720 to $1,000.

Majors, $960 to $1,260.

Lieutenant Colonels, $1,260 to $1,560.

Colonels, $1,440 to $1,800.

Brigadier Generals, $2,100 to $2,700.

An allowance is also made of $6.00 per month for each child in addition to personal pension up to the rank of lieutenant. For the children of captains this is increased to $7 a month, a major $8, and higher ranks, $10.00 per month.

The Kingston Standard says:

Yesterday afternoon, Colonel Hemming, the camp commandant, inspected the 93rd Battalion of Peterborough, and at the close of the inspection complimented officers and men on their appearance, their smartness and their efficiency. All the officers from the O. C. of the 93rd, the senior and junior Majors, and the company officers were called upon by Colonel Hemming to drill the battalion, and every platoon commander was called upon to drill the company. The officers proved that they were equal to any task, and acquitted themselves in a most creditable manner.

CAMP NEWS.

Special to The Examiner:

BARRIEFIELD, June 22. — Word has been received from Ottawa that the 93rd Battalion and also the 109th Battalion are to remain in camp for some time, probably until leaving for overseas. There is certainly some excitement in camp, as this will give the boys an opportunity of getting leave. As previous orders stood, the instructions were to entrain Friday, the 23rd inst., and the advance party which were to have left to-day, were all ready when word was received this morning. Moving to Valcartier would naturally mean a tremendous amount of work, and then only probably for a short time. However the latest news seems to have put new life into the whole of the camp

Lt.-Col. Johnston and Capt. Burnham have been in touch with Col. Hemming who, realizing the superiority of the 93rd and the 109th battalions over the other battalions in camp, thought it advisable they should remain here to finish their training. Lt.-Col. Johnston broke the news to the battalion just before dismissing the morning parade, the men not forgetting to cheer on receiving the good tidings.

Battalion Sergt.-Major Miller, Co. Sergts. Melton, Rose, Martin, Jones, Knowles and E. Abraham have returned from leave.

Co. Sergt.-Major Calladine, Sergt. Walker, Traynor, Loomis, W. Miller, Carpenter and Co. Sergt.-Maj. Playford are taking their leave.

Lieut.-Col. Johnston expects to be in Peterborough on business this week end.

Sergt.-Major S. Calladine, B Company, Sergt.-Major J. Hawthorne, C Company and Sergt.-Major J. Playford, D Company of the 93rd Battalion, are home on leave from Barriefield camp. Sergt. B. Carpenter of A Company, is also home for a few days.

The boys at Barriefield are looking forward to seeing their friends on the excursion from Peterborough Saturday. It looked for a while yesterday as if there would be no 93rd Battalion at Barriefield by the end of the week, but the order to move to Valcartier were countermanded and now everything is serene.

UNOFFICIALLY REPORTED PRISONER.

Gunner Fred Lebar, Canadian Field Artillery.

Five more Peterborough casualties were officially reported this morning, making a total of forty-eight Peterborough names on the list since June 1st.

GUNNER FRED LEBAR.

Mrs. Phoebe Lebar, 306 Aylmer Street, received a telegram from Ottawa this morning, stating that her son Gunner Fred Lebar, who left Peterborough with the 33rd Battery, is unofficially reported a prisoner of war. The Ottawa wire stated that this information had been received in a cable from overseas. Gunner Lebar, who was employed by Barries' Limited, before enlisting, was born in Peterborough, and is only eighteen years of age. Before the war he was a member of the Bugle Band of the 57th Regiment. Last summer he joined the 33rd Battery and went overseas with that unit. His many friends will hope for better news.

LANCE CORP. CHAS. NICHOLAS.

Word was received by local relatives this morning that Lance Corp. Chas. Nicholas of Peterborough, is officially reported admitted to No. 2B General Hospital, Camiers, on June 5th, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the eye. The wire states that his injury is serious. Lance-Corp. Nicholas, who is a native-born Canadian, enlisted in Peterborough last Spring with the 39th Battalion, leaving here with the last draft for that battalion. After some further training in England, he was transferred to another battalion at the front. He formerly lived at 66 Auburn street.

PTE. GEO. EZRA REED.

For the second time in a few weeks Pte. Geo. Ezra Reed, whose wife and family lived at 126 Park Street, is reported wounded. A short time ago Pte Reed's name appeared on the casualty list, but he recovered in time to get into the big fight at Zillebeke. The message states that he was wounded on June 2nd or 3rd. Pte. Reed enlisted here with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R.

PTE. WALTER FLOWERS.

The official news that Pte. Walter Flowers, Canadian Mounted Rifles, is reported wounded, reached his mother, Mrs. Margaret Flowers, 417 Dublin street, two days after she had received a letter from him, telling her that he was in hospital suffering from shell shock as a result of the big battle. Pte Flowers is a well-known athlete, having played goal for the Peterborough Junior and Intermediate O.H.A. teams, as well as being prominent in basket ball, running and other sports.

PTE. WALLACE IMPROVING.

Mrs. John Wallace, 717 Harvey street, received a message from Ottawa to-day, that her son, Pte. Jas. A. Wallace, 9th C.M.R., who was reported a few days ago as dangerously ill, has been struck off the list of dangerously ill, which shows that he is improving.

PTE. W. J. BALDOCK.

Another member of the Peterborough contingent, who went overseas with the 39th Battalion to be wounded, is No. 412373, Pte. W. F Baldock.

SITUATION IN MEXICO GROWING STEADILY WORSE

Reinforcements of United States Regulars Have Been Rushed to Aid of the 10th Cavalry Ambushed by the Mexicans

CARRANZA'S ORDERS

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—In dispatches sent to the War Department by Gen. Funston early to-day, the situation in Northern Mexico was described as increasingly bad. Orders issued by Carranza for the arming of citizens adding materially to the anti-American feeling.

Secretary of War Baker announced to-day that the Department is endeavouring to get the California, Missouri and Kansas militia and reserves to the border immediately.

Reinforcements of regulars were rushed to-day to the aid of the tenth cavalry, victims of an ambush by Mexicans, in which forty Americans are reported to have been killed and seventeen captured.

BUENOS AIRES, June 22. — The Mexican government to-day launched an extensive anti-United States' propaganda in South America. A former Argenine congressman, Palacia, has accepted an offer to make a speaking tour against the United States. He is working directly under the auspices of the Mexican Federation of Labour.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Explanation of the presence of Gen. Pershing's men so far from their headquarters and also of the Carrizal fighting, together with the takings of two Mexican towns by Pershing, was demanded of the State Department by Mexican Ambassador Arredondo to-day. Secretary Lansing promised to inquire. The interview lasted only a few minutes.

Mrs. Astor Is Married To-day

Examiner Special:

BAR HARBOR, Maine, June 22 — Dressed in a simple blue serge travelling suit, with blue straw hat and white gloves to match, Mrs. Madeline Force Astor was married to Wm Karl Dick of New York by Rev. Albert C. Larned to-day. There were few present during the ceremony and no music, flowers, or attendants. Little John Jacob Astor, the Fourth, Mrs Astor's son, born after the Titanic disaster, when the father was drowned, witnessed the ceremony. He was all excited over the event, and is already friends with his new papa. Immediately after the ceremony Mr and Mrs. Dick left for a honeymoon in California.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JUNE 22, 1916

SURROUNDED.

"Surrounded," in a military sense, defines doom, and is the general forecast of disaster. This meaning of the word, representing and explaining military success or failure, according to viewpoint, must have influenced the Irish corporal in the Crimean War, who explained to his colonel his appearance in camp with five Russian prisoners, by the laconic report—"I surrounded them, sor."

We are all weary of this war which drags its slow length along, in a heart rending way. We are sick of the bloodshed and suffering, the waste of treasure and the suspense and soul-suffering of the waiting ones at home. We feel that the ordeal is hard; that the night is long; but we can be encouraged by the more than hope—the knowledge that the dawn of brighter days is lighting the overhanging gloom.

We are encouraged by the fact that ever since the war began the enemy has had added one failure after another of realization of his schemes for world domination; has had blight after blight put upon his ambitions. In his fatuous optimism the Kaiser did not, to do him credit, anticipate the terrible scourge he has brought upon Europe and the world. He doubtless believed that the war would, if bloody, be short; that he would realize his programme of a dinner in Paris in mid-September of 1914, to celebrate the conquest of France as a preparation for conquering Britain. We all know that his plans, like the "plans of mice and men," have gone "agley."

In this there is good grounds for hope. If Germany, armed to the teeth, entrenched with forty years of military preparation, at the apogee of her strength and capacity for frightfulness, has not, after twenty-one months of war, been able to carry out one detail of her satanic "slate" of aim and ambition against enemies taken by surprise and unprepared, can she expect success now, when her strength has become exhausted, her resources dissipated, her larder empty and her enemies arrived at the maximum of naval and aerial and military strength, fighting efficiency and moral equipment?

At the present moment the Central Empires—Germany and Austria—are "surrounded" in the completest sense. Geographically they are hemmed in by seas on every side. The oceans are inaccessible to them from every cardinal point of the compass. The North sea and English channel on the north, and the Mediterranean and Black seas on the south. They have a nominal but profitless hold on Constantinople, but the British and Russian struggle hold on Asia Minor, across the sea door by way of the Persian gulf.

The Central Powers are besides ringed in by a girdle of steel on every side, with the clamps tightening every day. Russia is making a resistless drive in Austria's back door; Saloniki is ready to make its menace good. In the west the Germans are struggling impotently, as far as progress is concerned, against the steel wall. The French and the British are thrusting forward with relentless pressure, growing greater every day in strength and power to persist.

With loss on every side, with the relentless circle closing in and the area of effective activity and successful resistance growing narrower every day, with food scarcity, domestic discontent, and the spirit of riot permeating the whole of the central empires, the end is in sight—victory for the Entente Allies and defeat for their enemies.

Still there is much fighting to do. We have never underestimated the strength of the enemy, and there is a good deal of fight left in the Teutonic powers yet. We need to use all our resources to make the defeat complete. We need men and resources. Canada must continue to do her share; having put her hand to the plough she must not turn back. We went into this war of our own free will, we were under no compulsion but the compulsion of duty; and we must maintain the stand we took at the opening of the war. We should be encouraged by the prospects of success. If we volunteered to fight when the outlook was dark; when the foe was at the height of his strength and we unprepared, we should be heartened when the victory, with proper effort, is assured, and Premier Asquith's conditions realized.

"We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed."

MANITOBA GOLD.

Even staid Manitoba has got the gold bee in its bonnet. The Examiner has received a circular letter from the secretary of the Selkirk Board of Trade calling attention to the "recently discovered and lately developed gold fields near Rice Lake, east of Lake Winnipeg." The Selkirk Board of Trade "believes that the present exploration of the district will result in the opening of a mining camp that will rank on a par, as far as quality and quantity of output is considered, with any of the famous mining districts of the world." These are brave words but they only reflect official optimism. Premier Norris is quoted as saying in regard to the new bonanza:

"We have the greatest mineral wealth of any place in Canada. I believe we are on the threshold of one of the most wonderful developments in the history of minerals. I believe that Winnipeg will be one of the greatest mining camps we have ever had in Canada."

Premier Norris may know little about the greatest mineral wealth, but his manner of words show the spirit of optimism that is the making of the west. Though the new gold fields may not prove as profitable and permanent as the gold mine represented by the millions of fertile acres of wheat land; and though they may not "pan out" like No. 1 hard, there is no reason to doubt that there may be something in the claim of a mineral belt in Manitoba. The Examiner has frequently contended, not from any technical knowledge, but on the reasonable assumption that the Builder of the world was too wise to make anything in vain, that every square mile of the area of Canada holds resources of value for the uses of man. Land that will not grow wheat is of some use if that use were discovered. Premier Norris' optimism is warranted, if not in fact, and finding, then in analogy. Ontario is an example. A little over a dozen years ago an optimistic exploration of what is called "New Ontario," had its critics. Even a prominent public man like James P. Whitney could see nothing of value in New Ontario—"the land of the stunted poplar." Yet the fact has developed that in the matter of mineral wealth, not to speak of agricultural resources, it was worth while. It lends warrant to the optimistic belief of Premier Norris, that "we have the greatest mineral wealth of any place in Canada," and that "Winnipeg will be one of the greatest mining camps in Canada." This may seem chimeric talking, but we have in fact and not in hope in New Ontario, not only "one of the greatest mining camps in Canad," but one of the greatest in the world.

It is to be hoped that the Rice Lake "gold fields" of Manitoba may pan out to sample, and that real gold bricks may be more numerous than the "gold bricks" the company promoter and mining-stock shooter will doubtless develop from the situation.

MOOSE FORM BIG PROBLEM; WHERE WILL THEY TURN?

DETROIT, Mich., June 22.—To whom will the Progressive party voters turn, Wilson or Hughes? This appears to be the all absorbing question among Michigan political leaders.

According to Democratic chieftains, many of the states that Roosevelt carried in 1912 will be debatable Democratic territory this year, and Michigan is one of those. That the Democrats are going to make a determined effort to carry the Wolverine state this year is plainly evident.

Michigan gave Roosevelt a plurality of 60,000 votes in 1912 and there is still a pronounced sentiment for him, it is declared. The scant consideration given the colonel at the Republican convention will drive many of his supporters to the Wilson banner, say adherents of the Princeton sage.

MOOSE MAN O. K's HUGHES.

On the other hand, Republican leaders insist that Hughes will receive the undivided support of former Michigan Republicans. That some of them will do so is evidenced by the recent statement of a western Michigan Republican who was a delegate to the Chicago convention and cast his vote for Roosevelt on the second ballot. This delegate immediately wired his pledge of support to Justice Hughes and believes many Roosevelt supporters will rally to the Hughes standard.

With the national conventions a matter of history, interest is switching to the senatorial and congressional contests, which promise to be the warmest in many years.

Efforts are being made to induce Richard I. Lawson, collector of customs in Detroit, to become a candidate on the Democratic ticket for the United States senate next fall to succeed Senator Charles E. Townsend of Jackson.

Lawson is reported to as Detroit's most representative Democrat and his friends declare he is the one member of the party who could give the incumbent a real battle. Townsend also has a fight on his hands to secure the nomination in the person of Theodore M. Joslin, of Adrian, former Bull Mooser, who has announced his intentions of seeking the Jackson man's togs.

OPPONENT TOO LOUD.

Tenth district Democrats, who usually have to beg some one to run for congress as a matter of form, already have a candidate to oppose Representative Loud of Bay City, Henry C. Haller, a fellow townsman, having announced himself as a candidate.

In the Third district Congressman J. M. C. Smith, Republican will be opposed for the nomination by E. N. Dingley and State Senator Taylor, both of Kalamazoo, and Henry E. Straight of Coldwater, who is frankly running on a dry platform.

Two years ago Mr. Dingley was one of the strongest Roosevelt men in Michigan, making a campaign for congress on the Progressive party ticket. He declares now that Michigan Roosevelt men can conscientiously vote for Hughes, and urges them to stand by the Republican nominee.

DISTILLERS' DIPLOMACY NOT AS GOOD AS THEIR "GOODS"

The distillers of Ontario, who find their business embarrassed by the embargo laid by the British Government on imports of whisky, cannot be congratulated on the exercise of diplomacy in their efforts to obtain the removal of the embargo. An Ottawa dispatch to the Montreal Gazette says:

"Ottawa, June 15.—A protest by the Canadian distillery industry against the exclusion of Canadian spirits from the British market has been forwarded by the Government to the Imperial authorities. Canadian rye whisky and kindred spirits came under one of the later embargoes placed by the British Government against the importation of certain foodstuffs and other commodities, this action being taken for the purpose, as explained here, of conserving the already limited tonnage for other classes of shipments more urgently required for the prosecution of the war.

"The protests of the Canadian distillers is based upon the claim that the embargo on spirits is being enforced primarily as a measure of protection for distilleries in the United Kingdom, rather than for the purpose of conserving tonnage. A number of Ontario distillers have subscribed to this protest which, as already stated, has been forwarded to London. No reply has been received from the Imperial Government.

"The distillers are much concerned at having their export market in Great Britain closed, especially in view of the material diminution present and prospective, of their sales in Canada."

The embargo has been established by the British Government and they only can remove it. Is it likely that they will receive sympathetically an application which begins by suggesting that they are hypocrites, that while they are pretending to be influenced by a high policy respecting the conservation of vessels for the carriage of more necessary things, their real purpose is to protect the home distiller against competition? Men are not usually moved to favourable action by allegations of that kind. It is hardly probable that any such thought of protection to the British distillers entered the minds of the British Ministers when they made their regulation. But if they should desire to protect their home industries, are we in Canada in a position to complain? There is a large measure of protection in our Canadian tariff, especially in the duties on spirits. Heavy duties are imposed by our laws to shut out British whisky. If Great Britain should wish to realiate we could not very reasonably complain. Embargoes on trade between Great Britain and the Dominions are much to be regretted. It is only right that efforts should be made to prevent them. But the distillers' petition is not happily conceived for their purpose.—Journal of Commerce.

YEAR 1816 MAY REPEAT ITSELF

Weather Conditions of One Hundred Years Ago—Five Inches of Snow in June.

The evidence of the past month indicates that we have had no summer at all, and there are other evidences, fortunately not yet conclusive, that we may get no summer at all. The question is whether we are approaching something unprecedented in weather conditions, or has it occurred before. The general tone of remarks on street cars and public places inclines one strongly to the view that it has never been known before within the history of man kind.

BRIGHT SUNNY DAYS.

The outstanding features of Peterborough summers have been the fact that wholly overcast and rainy days are of rare occurrence; "in fact," states Sir Frederic Stupart in a recent report on the climate "from the middle of June until the end of August, one may almost count on days of at least part sunshine."

HOW ABOUT SKATING?

"When will skating begin?" was a common interrogative to-day. That possibility may not be so very remote. Supposing the weather of 1816 is repeating itself. Weather has been known to do this disagreeable thing.

"The most remarkable depressions of temperature in the summer months, known to all history of thermometric measurements, occurred in the period from 1811 to 1817. Of these 1812 and 1816 were the coldest. From May to September of 1812 each month was 3.6 to 7.2 degrees below average, a most unprecedented refrigeration, and equalled for two months only, June and July of 1816 which were 5 and 5.8 degrees below. Frosts occurred in every month of both summers. Indian corn did not ripen, fruits and grains of every sort were greatly reduced in quantity or wholly cut off."

In a record of the weather in Vermont, United States, it is stated "On the 6th of June snow fell in all parts of the state, and upon high lands and mountains to a depth of five inches. It was accompanied by a hard frost and on the morning of the 9th ice was half an inch thick on shallow standing water and icicles were to be seen a foot long. The weather continued so cold that several days elapsed before the snow disappeared. Corn and other vegetables were killed to the ground and upon the highlands the leaves of the trees withered and fell off."

BAND OF HOPEFULS.

The weather officials to-day, however, are inclined to think the outlook more promising. There will probably be some sunshine to-morrow. The average temperature for June 21st is 64 degrees. The maximum temperature this morning was only 61, while it sank to 45 1-2 at one point, though at noon it was back to 58 degrees. The indications are that the whole day will be about 10 degrees below normal.

THE END.

"Gentlemen," said the innocent-looking young man, "many people would be disposed to doubt some of the stories that you have been telling about the freaks of the wind, but I don't. The man who told how the wind took off the roof of his and neighbour's houses, exchanged them, and nailed them down, has my unlimited confidence. My father had an experience which will not permit me to be skeptical."

"Did he have a house blown down?"

"No, he hadn't any house to be blown down. He had been living in a hotle, waiting for his new residence in the country to be completed. All the material was lying out in the fields and the plans were in a toolshed near by. When we went to look at the place one morning he found that the wind had broken open the toolhouse, secured the plans, blown the whole house up, cleaned the windows and started a fire in the kitchen range."

Each man picked up his hat and went home.

Equally Effective.

"My daughter cannot exist without at least three servants," said the proud mother to her future son-in-law.

"Leave that to me," answered the young man.

"But will you be able to provide them for her?"

"No, but I will be able to prove conclusively that she can exist with only one."

PRISONER PROBLEM IN RUSSIA SERIOUS

RELIEF ORGANIZED SLOWLY

Assumption of Teuton Interest by the United States an Unexpectedly Formidable Undertaking.

PETROGRAD, June 20.—When, at the beginning of the war, the United States Government was asked to take charge, through the agency of its representatives in Russia, of the Austrian and German interests in that country, it blithely accepted without stopping apparently for a single moment to consider what it was doing. The protection of the many Americans in Russia either more or less permanently, or of those caught there by the outbreak, was a natural function of our Government, and was carried out perfunctorily and with as little exertion as possible. Fortunately, this was a matter in which there were no questions of life and death involved, but at the most discomfort and a possible loss of money or time or both.

The acceptance of German and Austrian interests was something new, and had our Government had any idea of what it was doing and the magnitude of the undertaking, it is to be hoped that it would have refused the proffered trust and have thus allowed this work to pass into other hands more fitted to attempt it.

This vast responsibility was naturally divided into two distinct groups of activities. One was the care and protection of the Austrial and German civil prisoners, that is, those men, women, and children who were caught in Russian territory at the beginning of the war and placed in concentration camps or deported to distant Governments far away from the scene of hostilities. The other great branch of the work was that regarding the interests of the real war prisoners captured by the Russian forces during the course of the fighting and sent into the interior of the country.

In any attempt to organize the work and put it on any rational basis there were always two forces to be considered. On was the natural desire of the German Government to have the interests of its people as well taken care of as if there had been no state of war; the other was the military necessity for Russia of removing from the war zone all inhabitants who might reasonably be suspected of partiality toward the enemy or who might, if left alone, give information to the hostile forces. As for the military prisoners, it was necessary to remove them from the fronts as quickly as could be done, so that there might be no possible chance for them to be captured by their own forces in some turn of the struggle or of their being able to escape to their friends.

PROBLEM OF CIVIL PRISONERS.

The problem of the civil prisoners naturally came up even before the first soldier was captured by the Russians, and as the outbreak of the contest was so sudden, it was impossible for any Government to have taken adequate measures in advance for the movement and accommodation of a mixed mass of hostile aliens numbering perhaps some millions. In the beginning the whole question was in the hands of the Department of the Interior, whence it passed down through the various official grades of responsibility until it was lodged in the hands of the local police and administrative authorities in the cities involved.

When the removal of the Austrian and German population of a town or village was decided upon, they were shipped as fast as possible to the points selected for their concentration, or, in some cases, just sent away, without any definite destination As soon as the news spread that our representatives were in charge of their interests, crowds of people besieged our Embassy in Petrograd, and our consulates in the other Russian cities, begging for protection and assistance in various forms.

Our officials were at their wits' ends to know what to do with the problem so suddenly and urgently presented to them. They called wildly time after time to the United States for instructions and money, but for a long time fruitlessly. Our State Department was too thoroughly disorganized to be able to cope with the situation if it had understood it, and too busy signing treaties for universal arbitration to have time for study ing anything else.

Furthermore, our Embassy in Petrograd attempted to treat the problem not as something which required system and the organization of a complicated network of agencies under the control of one central bureau, but as isolated cases each of which might be attended to separately and without coordination. The result was what might have been expected—hopeless confusion. Instead of engaging a competent and sufficiently large staff of local help to carry on the details of the work and the large correspondence in German and Russian, persons speaking neith er language were floundering about hopelessly and adding to the general disorder.

When finally our State Department sent out a special agent to take charge of this work and to try to disentangle the mess, he found the petty jealousies with which he was surrounded and the indifference to urgent conditions so great that after establishing a temporary system of relief and organizing committees in many localities to look after the distribution of the funds which were then beginning to come from the German and Austrian governments he returned home in disgust and resigned

SOME CRITICISM UNJUSTIFIED.

Some of the criticism, however, which has been levelled at our Embassy in Petrograd was not entirely justified. It was forgotten by those interested in the efficient carrying out of the relief work that Russia is an enormous country and that things could not be handled there as quickly as they could in England and France. The lack of communication, the great distances to which prisoners had to be transported and the distance from the railroad to many of the concentration camps were all factors which helped the confusion and delay and made it harder to establish promptly and efficiently any general system of relief.

At first all funds were transmitted through the local Russian police officers in the case of civil prisoners, and by them turned over to the persons for whom the funds were intended. This system in most instances worked very well, but as the number of prisoners and their families grew so rapidly it was found impossible to continue it, as the volume of work thrown on the local officials was too heavy for them to carry on in addition to the great amount of extra labour they already had in arranging the many details of the concentration and feeding.

Through the so-called "American Embassy Relief Office" another system of relief distribution was then put into effect. Local committees of the more prominent of the prisoners themselves were formed in each centre of concentration, with local committees acting under the direction of these district organizations. This was in many ways a great improvement over the former system, as it was far easier for the German and Austrian committeemen to communicate with compatriots and to learn their needs than it had been for the Russian officers. There was not, in the first place, the barrier of a foreign language, and in the second place, there was less of the unavoidable mistrust and suspicion which were only natural between Russians and their prisoners under the circumstances.

Funds wer sent to these district committees by the Relief Office and disbursed by them in accordance with their knowledge of local needs. One of the comic incidents of this work was that the Embassy received communications from aggrieved Germans in certain places asking that the relief measures be again intrusted to the Russian officials, as the prisoners who had been named on the German committees had been so inflated with pride by bearing the proud title of Mr. President of the Local Committee, or Mr. Local Committeeman, that their heads had been entirely turned, and it was impossible to transact business with them or to obtain decent treatment from them.

After a long series of delays permission for the special agent of the State Department to travel around the country and inspect certain prison camps was finally obtained, and this important work was started by an extensive trip to Russian Turkistan. Afterwards permission for several other agents of different grades was obtained and now the work is being carried on in various camps and under better conditions.

NUMBER OF PRISONERS A PROBLEM.

The first great object of concern was the physical welfare of the prisoners. The two chief defects in the general system were found to be overcrowding of quarters and the hardships of the trip, especially in the first months of the war, when everything was more or less in confusion and unorganized. It had not been thought possible for so many prisoners to be taken, and adequate provision for the reception of such vast numbers had not been made.

In the case of the military prisoners the barracks formerly used by the Russian troops who had then gone to other stations or to the front were turned into reception places for the prisoners, and these speedily became full to overflowing. Second, and in some cases third, sets of floors had to be made in the sleeping quarters, something on the order of upper and lower berths, and the men had to climb up and down on ladders at night and in the morning.

The food supplied was for the most part abundant and rough, but wholesome. There were a number of complaints from the prisoners who were not accustomed to eating so much black rye bread, three pounds of which formed the main item of the daily supply of food. The dinner consisted of a soup with three-quarters of a pound of meat in it, and three times a day tea was provided, with boiled water at all times in most of the camps.

Of course the welfare of the prisoners depended very largely upon the Russian commandant in each locality. Some of these were retired officers or those who were unfitted for active service in the field, and they varied greatly as to what was considered comfort, or even endurable conditions, for the prisoners. Most of them realized that the men should be treated not as criminals; but as soldiers, and so treated them Unfortunately this treatment was made more harsh, in several instances intentionally, as the result of reports coming from Germany as to the cruel treatment of Russian prisoners in that country.

One of the most frequent causes of complaint was the failure to receive and be able to transmit correspondence to family and friends in their own land. The chief reason for this was said to be the lack of competent translators for some of the languages. Correspondence was supposed to be sent only out of Russian in Russian, German, French, or Hungarian, but this did not supply the needs of a very large number of the prisoners, who were unable to write a word except in one of the forty-odd dialects or languages of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. It was, of course, impossible to obtain competent Russians to translate such letters, and thus many of the prisoners never have been able to write to their people. Many companies in the Austrian army captured by the Russians had to have special interpreters so that the officers could communicate with their men an ordinary business. In infrequent instances it happened that the prisoners' correspondence was not forwarded at all on account of the lack of interpreters.

Another difficulty in locating prisoners was in the frequent shifting from camp to camp. The military requirements and the numbers of prisoners at the different camps and the consequent amount of available accommodation caused an incessant movement of the men and even of the officers, so that their mail and relief had to be forwarded when their whereabouts was known or sent back until the new address could be ascertained.

TREATMENT OF OFFICERS.

The life of the Austrian and German officers in the prison camps has been on the whole not so irksome. From them also there were complaints at times of overcrowding and discomfort, but in general they seem to have been as well treated as could be expected.

For the most part they were allowed to visit the neighboring townsquite freely and to buy what they wished at the local stores for their own housekeeping. All the officers in one camp would as a rule combine and appoint one of their own number housekeeper. This man would then oversee the cooking, which was often done by his own orderlies; purchase supplies, and get the best that they could for their table.

In most of the camps the system was introduced of appointing prisoner officers to be in direct charge of their own men, subject only to the general supervision of the Russian commandant. This method worked well when the officers appointed were energetic and thorough, but it frequently happened that they were so inattentive to their new duties and so careless of the interests of their own soldiers that the Russian government had to intervene again and again with some energy.

During the first months of the war, no useful work could be found for the captured soldiers but afterwards they were set to work in many districts at agricultural or other field work or on various public improvements or municipal undertakings to supply the shortage of Russian labor occasioned by the demands of the war. For this work the prisoners received a small sum in payment which was sufficient to buy them tobacco and other luxuries.

This Garden Hose Can't Kink

So there's no excuse for having hose that soon springs leaks from breaks in the ripped fabric. And the life of this hose can't separate. So water, wear and weather can't loosen and ruin it like common hose.

GIVES FRENCH TROOPS A REST

NEW YORK, June 21. — Charles Duvent, the French Government artist who brought his war paintings to this country last week to be shown in connection with the Allied Bazaar in Grand Central Palace, said, speaking of his experiences on the battlefronts of Belgium, Artois, Champagne, Lorraine, and Alsace, that the most novel thing in the conduct of the Verdun battles had been troop transportation.

"When these men," he said, "have heard the continuous explosion of 20,000 shells every fifteen minutes for several days they need a rest — at least their heads do. The government, after much deliberation, decided that the best thing to do was to establish a motor service which would bring up reinforcements of fresh troops every so often. Shortly after the great battle, foreseen, of course, had commenced the regular file of motors started, say from Bar le Duc or some point like that sufficiently removed from the front so that the terrible din of battle would be beyond the hearing of the weary poilus.

"There were never battles of greater violence than those at Verdun, where the fighting is most intense. We organized this motor system to take the battle-weary away. The healthy as well as the wounded have to be taken away from the front, and the circuit is unending."

LIEUT. IMMELMANN KILLED.

Famous German Aviator Shot Down Fifteen Acres.

BERLIN, June 21.—Lieut. Immelmann whose daring exploits as an aviator have made his name known throughout the world, is reported to have been killed in a fall with his aeroplane.

The Lieutenant's name was first mentioned in an official report from the German War Office on October 2, 1915, when it was related that he had shot down his fourth aeroplane. The last mention of his name in an official communication was on May 17, when he shot down his fifteenth aeroplane.

How You Can Quickly Remove Hairy Growths

(Aids to Beauty)

A well known beauty specialist advises this treatment for the removal of hair from the face. Mix into a paste some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This method is quick and entirely safe. To avoid disappointment, however, it is well to make certain you get the genuine delatone.

Women as Brave As the Men

THEIR STRUGGLE SHOWS A REMARKABLE SPIRIT.

Talk of the bravery of men, but where can you find a finer spirit than among the half-sick women who are fighting and struggling to do their duty against the terrible odds of ill-health, and who will not give up.

One woman in every three is struggling against weakness. Most of them are not exactly sick, but, oh, how miserable!

The burden and misery of it all has its foundation in the blood which is thin and watery. The red cells are too few. The very stream of life is reduced in vitality. Weakness and inevitable ill-health are the certain result.

Every ailing or weak woman can quickly regain her health in this very simple way. By filling the system with the nutrition that comes from rich red blood, a quick change for the better will result. To accomplish this, take two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets after each meal. You'll feel better immediately for the simple reason that Ferrozone renews the blood. It gives you vim, vigor, endurance, restores a tired, worn-out system very quickly.

You'll feel like new all over once you get Ferrozone working through your blood. It puts color into faded cheeks, brightens the eye, quickens the step, brings back that wonderful feeling of youth.

One of the finest things Ferrozone does is to bake you eat lots and digest it as well. With keen appetite, sound sleep, strong nerves and lots of nourishing blood you're bound to regain robust health. Any sickly girl or ailing woman that Ferrozone won't make well must be incurable. There is a secret power in Ferrozone and it is worth a trial at all events. Fifty cents per box, six for $2.50. At all dealers in medicine, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Company is placing in service a large, elegant motor 'bus—one of the finest of its type—capable of holding twelve passengers, and its handsome appearance and modern equipment is quite in keping with the perfect service, luxurious accommodation, and excellent cuisine of the Fort Garry. The Union Station is only one minute's walk from the Fort Garry, while from the C.P.R. depot, where the 'bus will meet all trains, the traveller will now be able to reach the hotel in less than five minutes.

JONEY CANUCK.

'Twas when the gallant ninety-third
Were going to entrain,
For Barrefield, and from sad eyes
The tears fell down like rain,
For sweethearts, husbands, brothers some,
Wives, mothers, maidens mourn,
For only heaven above may know
If they will ere return.

I heard a noble mother say
To one oppressed with woe,
Proud would I be, had I to-day
Like you, a son to go.

Our country's calling and expects
That duty will be done,
And where is the Canuck would flinch
To face the hellish Hun?
Who prizes not, more dear than life
Fair honour's stainless worth,
Our hearths and homes, and Canada,
The land that gave us birth.
That parting rends the heart with pain,
My friend, full well I know,
But still I say to you rejoice
That you've a son to go.

My only son, who should have
In feeble age, my stay,
Fell, 'mid brave Bennet's valiant band
In wild St. Julien's fray.
I loved him, he was all I had,
And bled my bosom's core,
What time we parted, but I loved
Hope hangs no radiant tow,
I would not, were he here again
Begrudge to let him go.

High every loyal mother's heart
With patriot pride should swell
Whose son is not afraid to fight
The despots power to quell.
And where the paths of glory lead,
Grim danger scorns to shun,
For cowards die a thousand deaths,
A brave man only one.
And the battling for the right he falls
Before the furious foe,
Still glory, that you had a son
Was man enough to go.

Would worthy mother, keep her boy
Nor deem it dire disgrace
To have him shirk at home, the while,
Another takes his place.
Vile will the craven's name go down,
To everlasting shame
Who never to his country's aid
Against the mighty came.
While on fame's roll, emblazoned bright
The heroe's name shall glow,
Who to defend his kith and king
Was brave enough to go.

Weep not, nor let dull sorrow fill
Your sorrow with dark dismay,
For be you sure, just heaven, the right
With victory will repay.
Pray that celestial hosts encamp,
On tented Barrefield,
And there as in far France entrenched
Our boys protect and shield.
Until the Teuton tyrants' pride
In in the dust laid low,
And laureled they return, who now
Are brave enough to go.

EASY ON MACARONI.

Italy has placed an embargo on macaroni, suspending the exportation of this article of food pending the issuance of new instructions. This means such a hardship on the Italians living in America as might be supposed, for many families make their own macaroni, and the manufacturers in the United States have been turning out increasingly larger quantities.

The Growing Tendency of the Age—

No less remarkable is the cause which he adds, "is not unlikely due to removing from the diet those elements of cereal food which Nature has hid in the husk of the grain, and which man in his ignorance discards."

The elements to which he refers are the well-known mineral salts of phosphorous, lime, iron, etc. removed in milling flour to make it white, but which physicians know are indispensable to normal, well-balanced nerves, bodies and brains.

What About Re-Covering Those Shabby Chairs?

Are There Not Some In Every Household?

THEY may have merely worn or faded covers or they may be actually decrepit with weak backs and legs, and bony springs; but in nine cases out of ten they only need the attention of an Upholsterer to make them as "Good as New." Perhaps even you may be the fortunate possessor of Antique Walnut Furniture and though they show a combination of graceful lines and good workmanship, these pieces—and mark you they are increasing in value every day—may have been relegated to some attic because they are shabby. If that be the case, just send them to our Upholstery Department to be re-finished and re-upholstered with a suitable covering and you will be amazed at the transformation. We employ experts in this sort of work—and our charges are very moderate. The choice of fabrics is very large and includes Velvets, and the most delightful of Chintz, Shadow Cloth and Printed Linens at a wide range of prices.

Gift From The Ladies Thoroughly Appreciated

To the Ladies of Peterborough.

A friend of mine, a member of the 93rd Battalion at Barriefield, has written to me and asked me to thank the ladies of Peterborough for their kindness in supplying the big tent in which the boys have their meals; as he says, they now have a dry place to eat in. As a member of the 1st contingent, who did not know much about any dry places while training on Salisbury Plain, I can fully appreciate what it means to be able to eat your meals in sort of comfort. Our experiences in this line would hardly be believed; only our appetites were pretty keen, we would never have attempted to attack the food when brought from the cook house. I will, if I may tell you, one instance that happened me: Our tent was about 250 yards from the cook house, I was mess orderly one day as usual it was raining and the ground was one slippery, slimy mass of mud. I was engaged carrying two dishes, one of meat and the other of potatoes, which were for my tent about half-way, I slipped, and down I came in the mud, meat, potatoes and all. Of course, most of the meat and potatoes got scattered in the mud. I proceeded to pick up as much of the meat as I could see, and also the potatoes; as you may know, they were smothered in a muddy liquid, so I "beat it back" to the cook-house where we poured some gravy over the meat and potatoes and made them look decent. This time I arrived safely at the tent. Of course, there was a general roar went up as to why I was so long. I made some excuse, but if the boys had ever heard the truth I would have been lynched. This instance is just to show you that in providing this tent, you will prevent any such accident as happened to me, and will insure the boys having a good, dry meal, with no mud in it.

Continue the good work, ladies. The boys are worthy of it, and wherever they may be they will always look back with gratitude to the ladies of Peterborough.

Yours truly,
C. W. STENSON.

HASTINGS SOLDIER REPORTED WOUNDED

HASTINGS, June 21. — Mrs. T. Learmouth is in receipt of the sad intelligence that her son Thomas has been wounded at the front. His friends here wish for him a speedy and complete recovery.

Wedding Bells.

A very pleasing social event took place on Wednesday last at Morganston,, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Campbell, when their daughter, Bessie, was married to Mr. Ernest Tate, grocer, Hastings. The ceremony was performed at high noon and was witnessed by a large number of the friends of the happy couple. The floral decorations were lavish and handsome, and the repast all that could be desired. After dinner had been partaken of the bride and groom left for a short trip to the United States, and upon returning will take up residence in Hastings. Mr. and Mrs. Tate have a host of warm friends who extend hearty congratulations and best wishes for prosperity and happiness. A great number of beautiful and useful gifts were received by the bride as a testimony of esteem and respect.

Home on Leave.

A number of soldiers from Barriefield spent Sunday in town with their families.

The Union Bank has been moved into the new rooms which have been thoroughly renovated and refitted, and the manager and staff are well pleased with the change.

The Sabbath school district convention will be held in the Presbyterian church here on Thursday, 29th.

Mr. Winters of Campbellford, was in town on Sunday.

Mr. D. Clapper of Orillia, is visiting friends here.

Rev. Archie Thomson is supplying the pulpit of the Presbyterian church during the absence of his father.

Rev. D. A. Thomson is in Winnipeg. The reverend gentleman is attending the General Assembly which is convened there.

Mrs. C. Plant has been visiting in Roseneath at the home of Mrs. Dr. Wade.

Mrs. J. Shearer of Winnipeg, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fleming.

Mrs. Malcolm Baker spent a few days last week with friends in Morganston.

Weather Unfavourable.

The weather still continues showery and the farmers are unable to finish the seeding. Corn and roots are not as yet in. The oldest settlers say that weather conditions such as the present were never known in this section before.

We are informed that Mrs. (Dr.) Edmison and children of Toronto (late of Hastings), will sail for England to join her husband, Capt. Dr. Edmison. Her many friends here wish for her a pleasant and safe voyage.

Entrance Class.

The standing of the Entrance class for the month of May is as follows: Everett Greenley, Blanche Williams, Jean Murray, Loniel Anderson, Edwin Parsons, James Hormel, Margaret Orr, Vera Hadlow, Christie Hatherley, Beryl Montgomery, Reta Dodd.

The Entrance exams. will begin on Wednesday, 21st June.

CZAR AND PEOPLE DETERMINED TO SECURE VICTORY

New Light on Russia's Attitude Toward Great Struggle — Two Views From Opposite Types

PRESENT COMMANDER WON A PLACE ON MERITS ALONE, THOUGH PEASANT.

PARIS, June 20.—"Russia will never make an independent peace. If Russia suspected negotiations were pending for an independent peace there would be a revolution."

That statement has been made to me by the two men in Paris most able to judge Russian conditions and willing to speak of them frankly. The one is in close touch with the inner circles of the Russian Government. He has dined with the Czar and with the Grand Duke and with scores of the unknown others who direct the policy of the empire. In all things, I believe, he reflects their point of view. He seems to know little or nothing of that Russia which is in constant ferment.

The other is an avowed revolutionist. He is one of the few men who ever succeeded in scaping from the Fortress of Peter and Paul. A sentence of twelve years in Siberia now awaits his serving. Three times he escaped from prison in Russia, twice after having been convicted and sentenced for political offences. He was mixed up in at least one bomb plot. He is in constant touch with the Russian revolutionary movement.

"Russia would tear the Czar from his throne if he attempted to make peace," says the revolutionist. "We all believe he would yield if he dared."

"I know the Czar well," said the other man. "He has staked his life and his dynasty on the winning of this war. He will never yield.

Except for this difference of opinion the twain agree fairly well on the Russian situation. Russia was loosely, carelessly disorganised at the beginning of the war. Nepotism reigned supreme. The fetish than an aristocrat is a man born to command a regiment still held sway in Russia. The army lacked everything. It even lacked men. Last summer there was no time when there were more than a million men on the front. This was contrary to the opinion held by the world.

In August the situation at Petrograd had become very serious. The pro-German party was gaining in strength. There was reason to believe that a separate peace would be signed.

The revolutionist and man of the court agree in this, just as they agree that a separate peace is now impossible. The man who has talked with the Czar believes that to the Czar is largely due Russia's present certainty of continued resistance to Germany.

The long retreat of the Grand Duke had made a profound impression on Russia," said he. "The Russians feared they were being betrayed into the hands of their enemy. One heard everywhere that the retreat was an instrument of the pro-German party. "The time will come," one heard them say, "when they will say 'We have done our best. We can do no more. We must submit.'"

WHEN THE CZAR ACTED.

In order to end this threatening situation the Czar acted. He assumed command of the army. He went to the great headquarters himself and took the Czarevitch with him. That fact made a great impression on Russia. In effect the Czar staked his life and his dynasty on winning the war.

"It put an end to the peace talk," said the man of the court. "One does not hear it now in Russia. We are resigned to a long and costly war, but a war which must be victorious. Russia will fight on. Unless you know Russia as I do, you cannot conceive of the depth of feeling the Russian manifests toward Holy Russia. It is more than patriotism. It is a religion."

The revolutionist is unable to accord such lofty motives to the Czar. He insists that Russia's ruler was forced to go to great headquarters because of the fear that a revolution might break out because of the popular distruct with the talk of separate peace. He would make the Czar a passive instrument in the hands of stronger men. Oddly enough, though the men disagreed on the Czar they are quite alike in their estimate of the Grand Duke.

"A great man and an absolutely honest man," both say. He is devoted to Russia and he has done Russia a tremendous service by his fight against dishonesty in high places. He has hanged many thieves."

General Alexieff is the present commander in chief of the Russian army. The son of a peasant he worked his way to the top by sheer force and merit. One would think the revolutionist would approve of such a man.

"Nitchevo," said he. "Nothing much."

The other man knows Alexieff well. He has lived at the great headquarters and dined at Alexieff's table.

"He is just a peasant," said he, "but he is a great general. The Czar wished him to dine at his table every night but after suffering through a few dinners in an agony of embarrassment Alexieff mutinied.

"'I have my work to do,' he told the Czar bluntly. 'This worries me.'"

The Czar good naturedly let him off. Alexieff began his army career as a private soldier. He began as a corporal because he was the best man in his company. By and by he became a captain. He was made colonel because his company was the best in the regiment, and he became the general of a division because his regiment had shown itself the best.

"Alexieff does not care who a man is," said his admirer. "All he asks is what he is. When he takes over a new command it is his custom to give the officers of his staff individual orders to do a particular very difficult thing. The officers who are successful are thanked by a nod and given more work to do. Sometimes the officer reports:

"I have failed."

"Take the train for Petrograd," is Alexieff's reply. "You may be needed there. You are not here."

He means the very next train, too, and it is always taken. For a time after he ascended to the high command generals returned to Petrograd by the train load. Nowadays, according to the man of the court, the Russian army is being officered by men of ability rather than by men of birth.

"Officers of peasant blood are everywhere," said the man. "The Russian army is fighting itself into efficiency. It is a slow and costly process but an efficacious one. At first our men were only able to suffer. They suffered uncomplainingly. Now, they are being armed and drilled and well led, and they are showing to the world that they can fight. In another year—not before then—they will crush through the German lines. Some think we will not be ready to take a great offensive before two more years have passed. But the time will come. After all our losses our army is an infinitely stronger one in every respect than at the beginning of the war. Alexieff is organizing it. Russia has never before known organization."

The revolutionists agree with him in this. The revolutionists hear from the heart of Russia where the ferment continues. One of these days he hopes—one knows what revolutionists hope—but for the time being he is doing all that he can to make sure of a Russian victory. He says that there is no longer a revolutionary party in Russia—when the war is over the revolutionists will begin again; but now they are suffering uncomplainingly for "Holy Russia." He, too, sees Russia growing stronger as the days go on. The man of the court sees the munitions growing, the organization bettered, the discipline improved. The revolutionist sees that inner Russia more firmly welded together against the German.

"In the Japanese war we were wrong," said the revolutionist, "and most of us wanted to see Russia defeated. There is no such feeling among us now."

EFFICIENCY AT BRITISH BASES

A staggering mass of detail goes to make up the development of the huge bases Great Britain has established for her army in France, since the outbreak of the war, says a correspondent of the New York Times.

With their army fighting on French soil the British had to put up immense depots for stores in France, together with stations where her fighting machinery could be repaired without grave loss of time, and where a thousand other exigencies could be quickly handled.

I went through one of these gigantic bases and was impressed by the minute detail in which the enormous work has been carried on. There is no muddling at these army bases—nothing but precise system. To look over one of these bases is to be convinced that Great Britain is seriously in the game of pushing the war to a decisive end.

FILLED WITH FOOD.

In one part of the base block after block of very high one storey buildings—many of them especially put up for war purposes—are filled to the roof with food for the British army. Our party of American newspaper correspondents counted hundreds of rows of cases of tinned goods, vegetables, soups "bully" beef, all manner of things, stacked up hundreds deep, and they keep coming in daily. It is no exaggeration to say that we saw millions of cases of these goods piled up. The British soldier has butter served to him in the trenches, jam, pickled walnuts, wafery tea, biscuits, chocolate, tinned puddings, cheese—everything the appetite might crave. He is not in any way neglected, so far as food goes.

"I might say that this is the best fed war ever fought," observed the captain in command.

The American cars keep coming over in lots of hundreds—even thousands—as fast as they can be turned out. All the parts for repairing them are kept in stock ready to be shipped to the front when wanted.

Other features of these bases are the repair shops for clothes worn by the soldiers. Tons of stuff come in from the front daily—shoes, undergarments, uniforms, worn after long usage o torn in battle. Each piece of clothing is carefully gone over, and if not too far worn is made over like new—first having been put through a washing and disinfecting process. The shoes are put through a process of oiling that softens the leather while new soles with hob nails are put on.

MIGHT BE WORSE.

Everybody is complaining of the weather, and a great many people have had their furnaces going. Things, however, might be worse, for an old resident tells a tale of driving through a snow storm from Guelph to Elora on his wedding trip on the 1st of July, 41 years ago. The newly married couple had to wear mitts and hide their wedding finery behind winter overcoats. The snow was of the real January brand, and lay on the ground for some time before melting.

Will Never See Soldiers Want Says Sir H. Ames

Ottawa, June 21.—Sir Herbert Ames was the speaker at to-day's recruiting meeting on Connaught Sq. Sir Herbert is the head of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. He touched upon the adequacy of the fund to look after the wives and the children of the men who have gone forth to fight for the country and promised that the country would never see them in want or distress as long as the fund could be maintained.

Sir Herbert said that he was not going to call every man a slacker who could be seen in civilian clothes for the reason that there are hundreds of thousands of men in Canada to-day who would give a lot to pass the doctor's examination. The men who had enlisted had not all been actuated by mercenary reasons, for he knew of hundreds of thousands of fine young fellows who had given up fine positions paying from $5,00 to $10,000 a year in order to get to the front. Theirs was a service of duty.

When the history of the war came to be written, said the speaker, there would be two classes of men in the country, those who answered the call, and did their duty and those who could have gone but who shirked. Many women were responsible for keeping the men back, said Sir Herbert, and he deplored the fact. However, the women of Canada were measuring up to their task. He would like to see a regiment of women raised if only to set an example to backward men. Some men's motto at the present time seemed to be "Safety First!"

MEXICO ARMS PLANT BUSY.

Feeling at High Pitch, American Consuls Report.

LAREDO, Tex., June 22.—Approximately 17,000,000 rounds of ammunition has been taken in charge by Carranza authorities throughout Mexico, and the Government factory is working 24 hours daily to augment this supply, according to an American refugee from Mexico City, arriving here to-day. The output of the Government factory is approximately 30,000 rounds of cartridges daily, he said.

BELIEVES SIGNS POINT TO END THIS YEAR

London Times Correspondent Sees Fall of Teutons.

LONDON, June 22.—The Times military correspondent in France writes that the opinion on the British front is most optimistic that the war will be brought to a successful conclusion during the year 1916. The feeling of optimism, he said, is based largely on the following factors: "Continually growing numbers of men and quantities of munitions on the entente front; the extraordinary successes of the Russian army; the arresting of the Austrian offensive in Trentino; the silencing of the German navy through the sea battle off Jutland; the exhaustion of the German reserve as indicated by the calling out of 17-year-old youths and the use of prisoners in German munitions factories.

"The task before us," the correspondent adds, "remains a hard one, but conditions are favourable to us, and it only remains for generalship and hard fighting to take advantage of them."

CURE YOUR BAD COUGH BY BREATHING "CATARRHOZONE"

You may dislike taking medicine, but coughs are best cured without medicine. The modern treatment is "Catarrhozone" — it isn't a drug—it's a healing vapor full of pine essences and healing balsams. It spreads over the surfaces that are weak and sore from coughing. Every spot that is congested is healed—irritation is soothed away, phlegm and secretions are cleaned out, and all symptoms of cold and Catarrh are cured. Nothing so quick, so sure, so pleasant as Catarrhozone. Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size which lasts two months, price, $1.00; small size, 50c; sample size, 25c.

Gutta percha clothes lines are much stronger and last longer than cord. They are not affected by the wet and can be kept absolutely clean with a damp cloth.

IGNATIUS LINCOLN PLEADS GUILTY TO FORGERY CHARGE

London, June 22.—After a preliminary hearing on the charge of forgery, at the conclusion of which he was committed for trial, Ignatius T. Lincoln yesterday pleaded guilty. He expressed the hope to the court that justice would be tempered with mercy.

At the conclusion of the preliminary hearing, before he decided to plead guilty Lincoln made a statement to the court summing up his case, in which he defied the government to proceed with the trial. He contended that no evidence had been put before the court to prove the forged signatures had been written by him, and declared the prosecution had been undertaken by a vengeful and vindictive government.

If he cared to fight the case, Lincoln declared that the government would not have an easy conviction. He asserted the proceeding represented an attempt to punish him, not for forgery, but for a political offence, and that under the treaty between the United States and Great Britain the case could not proceed. Furthermore he said, the British government should have honored and rewarded him, instead of seeking vengeance upon him. He defied the government to proceed with the case in the face of the treaty, saying the Secretary of State at Washington would demand his immediate surrender because the courts of the United States had been deliberately deceived.

Lincoln proceeded to tell the story of his life, mentioning the fact that he was born in Hungary, of Jewish parents. He spoke with emotion, and both the prisoner and Mrs. Lincoln wept repeatedly.

Lincoln addressed the court for two hours. Towards the close of his address, he said:

"I was driven on by ambition, lured by the deceptive prizes of life. Having lost nearly all my money I did forge those documents."

He added that while he was in the employ of the British government he devised a plan to destroy the German navy, but that Great Britain had declined to adopt his idea because it would involve disclosure of the whereabouts of the British navy.

Describing the manner in which, he said, he obtained valuable information about the German system of espionage, which he placed at the service of the British government, Lincoln said it was a "devilish lie" to accuse him of treason. On the contrary, he had betrayed Germany. He concluded his address with an expression of hope for mercy.

The Magistrate remarked that he had only two legal points to decide, and was against Lincoln on both of them. Accordingly he committed him to await the action of the higher court at the next session.

Lincoln established the fact that it was the British Admiralty which indirectly was responsible for his extradition from the United States. Lincoln, who is conducting his own defence, brought this out in cross-examining Seeholm Rowntree, whose name the prisoner is charged with having forged. He asked the witness whether he was not surprised that the Admiralty, which ordinarily has nothing to do with criminal prosecutions, had interested itself in this matter. Rowntree replied in the negative, adding:

"They thought that if these charges were pushed and you were punished for forgery you would no longer be a danger to the British Empire."

Lincoln questioned Rowntree regarding what he was told at the Admiralty concerning Lincoln's transactions. The witness replied that he had been informed Lincoln had told the Admiralty he had been at Rotterdam, where he had obtained by purchase certain information which might be valuable, and that Lincoln had made extravagant demands for payment for the information.

At this point in the testimony Lincoln cried out, "It is a lie."

Rowntree continued that the Admiralty considered Lincoln's general conduct suspicious.

During the proceedings the magistrate, Sir John Dickinson, said to Lincoln:

"The preliminary examination is being made to determine whether you should go for trial on the charge of forgery. Political matters have nothing to do with the hearing of this case. If you choose to go into them I am not going to prevent you if you think it in any way advantageous to your case."

SAYS EMPEROR WILLIAM HAS PARDONED LONSDALE

Englishman First Sentenced to Death for Attack on Guard.

AMSTERDAM, via London, June 22.—The Frankfurter Zeitung says that the German emperor has pardoned William Lonsdale, an English prisoner of war, who recently was sentenced to death by court-martial, the sentence being later commuted to fifteen years' imprisonment.

Lonsdale was condemned by court-martial for an attack on a German guard at Doberitz prison camp. The American ambassador to Germany and the American minister at The Hague used their good offices in behalf of Lonsdale.

LONDON WOMEN MINGLE WORK WITH PLEASURE

(By Lady Mary)

LONDON, June 22.—I am told by all my feminine friends and acquaintances who are not war nursing or munition making, or filling places in government offices that the special inducement that will be held out for holiday making this summer is the fact that we will all be doing something "on the land".

Haymaking in particular seems to be the special stunt that will give an excuse for amusement mixed with usefulness.

SUNBONNETS ARE SMART THING

It is toward this summer time and possibly that one sees impressive exhibits of sunbonnets in all the smart shops devoted chiefly to hats or lingerie. Print sunbonnets, almost exact replicas of those worn by country women two or three generations ago, are becoming a special feature of English summer fashions in the west end of London.

They are made of gingham or fine linen, or colored cambric, and are in all sorts of old world colorings and designs, and they are corded, ganged an finished with long strings to tie under the chin just as in the days when the milkmaids and shepherdesses were supposed to be specially ornamental features of a bucolic English landscape.

COURT HEARS STORY OF HOW MANITOBA SQUANDERED FUNDS

Horwood Gives Evidence at Trial of Kelly

Thousands of Dollars Added to Estimates to Accommodate Contractor.

WINNIPEG, June 22.—From the construction of caissons through the series of extra contracts granted the parliament buildings contractor, down to the disappearance of William Salt, the story of Victor Horwood, former provincial architect, was continued in the trial of Thomas Kelly, before Mr. Justice Prendergast and a jury. His story will be resumed to-day.

The series of supplementary contracts given to Kelly began with one of $240,100 for the substitution of steel for reinforced concrete in the north wing. Horwood said the contractor should not have been allowed more than one-quarter of this sum for the substitution. He stated that Dr. R. M. Simpson had furnished him with an amount which he was to add to his estimates. The sum of $35,199 was paid to Kelly as an extra for brick foundations, to take the place of stone. This was given because Kelly owned a lot of brick, he said. A contract for steel grillage for the south wing and dome section was granted at $215,000 and for alterations in the roof at $52,000.

Another $802,000.

The famous dome contract at $802,000 was signed and then cancelled. It substituted steel for reinforced concrete — a change which Hopwood thought should not have cost the province five cents more.

The witness told of sending Salt, who had been inspector of caissons, south on a trip, and of the negotiations over plans for his return. He told of M. G. Hook taking to salt $10,000 which, he said, he secured from George R. Coldwell and James H. Howden; of Hook's return with the story that he had been robbed of the whole sum in Omaha and of acquainting Messrs. Caldwell and Howden with this news. Later another $10,000 was sent to Salt.

TERRIBLE STORY TOLD BY GIRL AT HAMILTON

Declares She Was Taken From Montreal by a White Slaver.

HAMILTON, June 22.—Laurentie Doel, 21 years old, a French-Canadian girl from Montreal, told Magistrate Jelfs a sensational white slave story. She and Alfred Moxon, also of Montreal, were held on a nominal charge of vagrancy. The girl swore that Joseph Seratto, an Italian, who met her in Montreal, forced her to accompany him to Welland, where he held her for immoral purposes. Later he brought her to a house here. When her health broke down he cast her loose, giving her only $2, although she had made $60 a day for him. When she attempted several times to escape she said the man beat her insensible.

Moxon swore that when he tried to rescue the girl Seratto attacked him with a knife. The prisoners were liberated and the police are now looking for Seratto.

MOTOR CYCLE IN AN ACCIDENT

Yesterday afternoon about five o'clock a motor cycle, while coming down George street, attempted to pass too close in front of an automobile when the driver of the car, fearing a collision, ran his car into the curb, destroying two of the wheels.

Social and Presentation

Rev. J. R. Butler and Mrs. Butler Presented With Cut Glass and Fountain Pen by the Ladies' Aid of Cavanville Methodist Church

MILLBROOK, June 22.—The Ladies' Aid Society of the Cavanville Methodist Church met in the basement of the church to enjoy a social evening. A very pleasant time was spent by everyone present in the enjoyment of social intercourse and music and later on in the evening the meeting was called to order by the President, who requested the Rev. J. R. Butler and Mrs. Butler to come to the platform, when they were presented with mementoes to carry away with them from Cavanville Ladies' Aid Society Mrs. Butler's gift being cut glass, while the Rev. Mr. Butler became the possessor of a beautiful self-filling fountain pen. The following was read by Mrs. A. B. Kennedy and the presentation was made by Mrs. W. H. Staples.

Although completely taken by surprise, Mr. and Mrs. Butler each made a suitable reply, giving expression to the kindly relations which had always existed during the last four years between the congregation and themselves.

A Direct Result Of Advertising

Local Firm Installs New Lighting System For Display Window

A direct result of advertising is to be seen in the Grafton store, where a fine new lighting system has lately been installed. Mr. Conway, the manager, read the advertising of the new "Brascolite" in one of the big magazines, and became interested. Correspondence with the company led to Messrs. Grant and Thorne being appointed as local agents, with the Grafton & Co. contract as their first order. The lights have now been installed and consist of nine fixtures, each equipped with a three hundred watt light. The new light is a diffused and reflected combination, and besides being a handsome part of the store fittings, gives a strong natural light that makes Grafton's one of the best lighted places of business in the city.

Grand Piano Prestige

A Demonstration of What Canada Is Doing in High-Grade Pianofortes

The artistic temperament is not easily satisfied, especially in pianos; but the progress which some Canadian builders have made in the production of high-grade instruments, leaves little room for failure in this respect.

The Nordheimer Co. of Toronto have given worthy evidence of this fact. They have won pre-eminence for their instruments by reason of their intrinsic merit. Their progress has been marked, not only in the stamp of beauty and excellence of construction which they have developed, but in the purity of tone, and easy, light, agreeable action which so agreeably pleases professionals.

A very fine speciman of this firm's "Baby Grand" pianos is at present exhibited in the attractive show window at the end of the Arcade, in the Cressman store. This instrument has been sold to one of our citizens, and has attracted much attention. What a gift it would make to some happy bride!

FLIPS HIS CIGARETTE AWAY; IT BURNS BABY CARRIAGE

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 22.—Mike Reizzitori apologized for the inaccuracy of his cigarette throwing aim by blaming his wife for carelessness as firemen sprayed their chemicals in an industrious attempt to save the Reizzitori baby carriage from destruction.

When the firemen withdrew, however, only the chassis of the perambulator stood in the centre of the front room at 3031 St. Ann street.

"I was lying on a couch in the front room," explained Reizzitori to the firemen, "and as I had consumed the cigaret to useless length, I merely flicked it out of my hand toward a grate.

THERE'S A BATTLE TO FIGHT

The following poem, which was written specially for the "Canadian Golfer," has apart from its poetic and patriotic merit a special interest to our readers. The writer, Elsie Hammond, is the wife of Lieut. Douglas Hammond of the 77th Brantford Battalion, an old Peterborough boy, and brother of Dr. Hammond of this city. A critic speaking of the poem, says "There's a Battle to Fight; Will You Fight It," is considered one of the best recruiting poems yet published. It has a tremendously fine ring and swing to it."

There's a battle to fight! Will you fight it?
There's a debt to be paid! Will you pay?
There are grave wrongs to right! Will you right them?
Take your place as a man in the fray!

There's a cry of an outraged Belgium,
And above that the voice of our slain,
Those men who have died for our freedom—
Will you let all their striving be vain?

There's a grave that lies out near St. Julien,
That is filled with Canadian dead;
There are fields one "Somewhere in Flanders"
With Canadian blood running red.

Yet by some the call passes unheeded,
You let other men go while you stay;
Don't you knew it is you who are needed
To help make "The Day" Britain's Day?

Let the slacker hang back if he wants to,
But, if manhood's not dead, you will go
To the aid of a country who needs you;
Help vanquish a crime-ridden foe.

There's a battle to fight! Will you fight it?
There's a debt to be paid! Will you pay?
There are grave wrongs to right! Will you right them?
Then enlist for your country to-day!

THE ANSWER OF THE SEA.

(By John Langdon Heaton.)

One day I saw a ship upon the sands
Careened upon the beam ends, her tilted deck
Swept clear of rubbish of a long past wreck,
Her colours struck, but not by human hands;
Her masts the driftwood of what distant strands!
Her frowning ports where, at the Admiral's beck,
Grim, scowling cannon held the foe in check,
Gaped for the frolic of the minnow bands.
The seaweed banners of her fo'c'sle waved;
A turtle basked upon her capstan head;
Her cabin's pomp the clownish sculpin braved,
And on her prow, where the lost figurehead
Once scorned the bink, a name forgot was graved—
It was "The Irresistible" I read.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Being one of a number of men who was rejected for overseas service and who was anxious to serve the Empire in some capacity, I volunteered my services to the Army Service Corps on the distinct understanding from Lieutenant Lennox that my wife would receive the same remuneration and consideration as the wives of the men of the 93rd Battalion, but to my amazement I find she is to be allowed 45 cents per day separation allowance, and twenty-five dollars a month assigned pay, and must not expect any money from the Patriotic Fund. Summing up the whole thing my wife would be paid the princely sum of about 33 dollars month to keep herself and five children. I have resigned a good position and my successor has been appointed, and Lieutenant Lennox has been unheard of since. An explanation from Lieutenant Lennox of the Army Service Corps will be appreciated by more than myself.

Yours in sympathy with Canada and the Empire, but not with this method of enlistment,

A. HOPE,

CARETAKER FOUND DEAD; TWO ARE UNDER ARREST

TORONTO, June 22.—Mystery surrounds the death of Thomas Donahue, 40 years of age, caretaker of the old mill boathouse, whose body was taken from the water about a mile from the mouth of the Humber River. His custom was to canoe down to hand in his returns at the mouth of the river. When he did not return a search was made, and a canoe was found hauled up on the bank about halfway between the boathouse and the lake. His coat and paddles were in the canoe. Twenty feet north his body was found in deep water. Roy G. Wilcox, 12 Alhambra avenue, and Charles Storry, 1512 King street west, were arrested and held as material witnesses.

Boys' Camp Only Ten Days Away

Saturday morning, weather permitting, the big war canoe will leave Rye's boat house at 9.30 for a trip down the river. This will be a good chance for the boys who are going to the Y.M.C.A. camp to have an outing in the big boat and experience the fun that they will have at the boys' camp with this boys' favourite. The boys' camp is now only ten days away. Some of the boys are getting their equipment together already. Those boys are wise and will have very little to bother them when Monday, July 3rd comes. It is earnestly requested that the parents will have the names of their boys in by Saturday night, as the camp management will have to know how many to provide for.

County Council Increases Grant to Patriotic Fund from $1,650 a Month to $2,000

The County Council yesterday afternoon unanimously decided to increase its monthly contribution to the Patriotic Fund from $1,650 to $2,000. This is an increase of $350 a month or $2,100 for the remaining half year. This is the county's givings to the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund for the present year aggregate $21,500, plus $600 interest, making a total expenditure of $22,100.

A deputation from the Patriotic Fund composed of Ald. Dobbin, R. R. Hall, F. D. Kerr, Judge Huycke, Jos. Wearing, J. A. Aylmer, and Adjt. McElheney. Mr. Dobbin referred to the increase demands on the Fund, and the need of maintaining it. The dependents of soldiers from Peterborough city and county are now receiving about $8,000 a month, and it was because of the growing demands that the County Council was asked to make a slight increase in its monthly contribution.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, referred briefly to the assistance the Fund has been to so many families. He mentioned one case that had come to his attention. The husband had enlisted and was recently killed.

Now the wife was left with three small children and had gone to work in one of the local factories. This woman had not been paid too much, in fact her sacrifice could not be compensated. Mr. Kerr, also drew attention to the fact that the war had come very close to Canada, mentioning members of the County Council who have relatives under arms.

ASSIST RECRUITING.

Mr. Hall spoke of the assistance the Patriotic Fund had been to recruiting throughout Canada. Men, especially those who were married, were freed of worry about their families. But it was just as necessary now, Mr. Hall said, to maintain the fund as ever, in fact it would be most lamentable if the funds fell short.

Mr. Aylmer stated that he and Mr. T. F. Matthews were auditors of the Patriotic Fund in Peterborough and he could vouch that all the accounts were correct and were carefully expended.

DUTY OF TRUSTEES.

Judge Huycke stated that his particular duty in waiting on the Council was to invite the Warden and members on behalf of Mrs. Huycke and members of the Daughters of the Empire to the garden fete at his home on Thursday afternoon and evening. Speaking of the request that had been presented to the Council His Honour reminded the County representatives that although they were trustees of the County for the handling of the people's money they were also trustees of their general interest and welfare. Hence they must realise at this time that they must give of the people's money to protect the people's money. The people must be protected. Should the enemy prevail there would be no County Council, but the overlordship of Germans to whom the Canadian people would be mere vassals.

INSPIRATION TO BRAVERY.

That the wonderful patriotism of the Canadian soldier had been largely inspired by the splendid support of the people at home was one of the points emphasized by Mr. Wearing. Adjt. McElheney said he could speak for the careful expenditure of the Patriot Fund in Peterborough and of the relief it had been to many families.

Warden Darling assured the delegation that the Council would seriously consider the request from the Patriotic Society and felt that their request would be readily acceded to.

When the visitors had retired Reeve Squire of Norwood moved, seconded by Deputy Reeve Northy of Smith that the Council increase its grant to $2,000 monthly for the next six months. Carried.

Reeve Anderson commented that the surprising feature of the deputation's request was that they had asked for a comparatively small sum. He had expected from the remarks that they would ask for a much larger sum.

Another Big List of Local Casualties

whose name appears in to-day's official casualty list. Pte. Baldock, who is twenty-two years of age, was born in England, but had lived in Canada for some time. He was one of the first to enlist with the 7th quota in what was then called the 1st contingent, joining on Dec. 30th, 1914, the day on which recruiting for the 39th Battalion commenced. Pte. Baldock, whose relatives live in England, lived on Patterson street, while in Peterborough.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Mr. E. Swardfager of Ops, has received the sad intelligence that his son, Fred, had been killed in action on June 2nd or 3rd. The deceased, who was only 23 years of age, enlisted at Peterborough with B Squadron, Canadian Mounted Rifles, and had figured in several big battles.

The news of his death was a sad blow to his relatives who will have the sincere sympathy of the entire community. The late Fred Swardfager was very popular with his associates in Peterborough and had a splendid record at the front. He is survived by his father, three sisters, Mrs. Ed. McElroy, Rainy River, Ontario; Mrs. W. A. Wilson, East Ops, Margaret, attending L. C. I.; also three brothers, Edward of Winnipeg, Neil of Toronto, and Lawrence of Ops.

Pte. Swardfager made many friends in Peterborough, who will learn with regret of his death.

GOLDEN WEDDING

On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. George Brooks, of Lindsay, celebrated their golden wedding and the occasion was graced by the presence of a goodly number of their friends and relatives who extended congratulations to the honoured couple on living to see the fourth generation of the Brooks family. They were also recipients of many useful presents.

Mr. George Brooks and Mrs. Brooks (nee Eliza Massaw, daughter of late Mr. John Massaw) were married in Lindsay, June 17th, 1866, where they have resided ever since. To the union were born seven children, four of whom are living. They are: the eldest, T. J. Brooks, with Matthews Blackwell Co., Peterboro and formerly in the butcher business, Kent street, Lindsay; Mrs. W. H. Stone, Lindsay; the late Mrs. Geo. Fountain, Coboconk; the late Mr. Geo. Brooks jr., Lindsay; Mr. Fred Brooks, Lindsay; Mrs. H. Campbell, Peterboro.

During the day the following address was read by Mrs. T. J. Brooks: To Mr. and Mrs. George Brooks, on their Golden Wedding Day, Lindsay, Ont.

Saturday, June 17, 1916

Dearest Mother and Father,—It is with exceeding great joy that we, your children, relatives and friends, assemble here to-day to celebrate your Golden Wedding and pray that God will spare you both many happy years, together, and to us, your grateful children, grand-children and great grand-children. On this very rare occasion we cannot but show the high esteem and love in which we hold you and we ask you to accept these presents as a token, which, we hope, will ever remind you of your loving care and kindness to us at all times.

Signed on behalf of family and friends,

C. H. MARSH.

Rector St. Paul's Church, Lindsay, and a friend and pastor.

SUSTAINED A SEVERE INJURY

Accident to Employee of Peterboro' Planing Mills

This morning, while operating a machine at the Peterborough Planing Mills, an employee by the name of William Bolton, sustained a severe injury to his left arm. He was hurriedly removed to the office of Dr. J. A. Morgan, 498 George street, where the injury was attended to, after which the unfortunate man was removed to his home.

Young Men's Club For St. Andrew's

A meeting of the Young Men of St. Andrew's church was held on Tuesday evening with a gratifying attendance, the object of the gathering was to make plans for fall and winter work. It was decided to form a club for the study of Christianity in its relation to community problems. A committee was appointed to carry out the suggestions of the meeting and to present in every simple constitution and programme at a meeting to be called in the near future. The thought was expressed that if all the churches of the city could be induced to form like organizations, co-ordination and co-operation would make them a real power in Peterborough.

Miss Killmaster's Pupils Provide An Interesting Recital

One of the series of closing recitals at the Conservatory of Music was given last night by the pianoforte pupils of Miss Killmaster. There was a large attendance of parents and friends of the pupils, and they were, with good reason, highly pleased with the finished performance of Miss Killmaster's pupils, which was characteristic of the results from the application of her method and manner of teaching. Question of County Constable's Fees

County Constable A. R. Moore presented a bill for $42 to the County Council yesterday afternoon in connection with the arrest of the Lindseys. Mr. G. W. Hatton informed the Council of the facts of the case, stating that the Attorney-General's department had refused to pay this sum, because it was not provided for in the tariff. The rest of the bill had been paid. Mr. Moore had made the arrests upon the instructions of the Crown and Mr. Hatton felt that Mr. Moore should not suffer the loss of the money he paid out as expenses of hunting up the Lindseys and witnesses.

After discussing the features of the situation as outlined, the Council held that Mr. Cochrane, who received a salary of $225 a year, might be first consulted, since Mr. Moore had performed the duties of High County Constable. Mr. Walsh moved, seconded by Mr. Fetchen, that the Warden and Mr. McIntosh interview Mr. Cochrane.

Celebrated His 94th Birthday

MILLBROOK, June 22.—Mr. Wm. Henry Wood, sr., passed his ninety-fourth birthday on the 10th, and although feeling fit and able to make his annual pilgrimage to Millbrook on the occasion, the weather being unfavourable it was thought unwise to attempt it. He is not so sure on his pins as of yore, but his mind is clear and his appetite good.

BOYS APPRECIATE THE TOBACCO

Dr. and Mrs. Burnham Receive Interesting Letter from the Front.

Dr. and Mrs. George Burnham have received the following letter from Trooper Norman Trafford, 3rd Canadian Division, B.E.F.:

"Many thanks for the cigarettes I received to-day and if you could only see the boys when they received their cigarettes from subscribers all over Eastern Canada it would do your heart good.

I have just this minute come in from seeing the boys off up the line and handing out shell dressings to those who had forgotten theirs, as there always seems to be one or two.

We are the 3rd Canadian Division, Cavalry Squadron from Saskatchewan as are one of the few units who have horses. Up until to-night we have always ridden up the line on our horses to a somewhat sheltered spot and then match the rest of the way. But to-night, for some reason, they were dismounted. The writer happens to be a despatch bearer and is on duty in billets to-day, so had to stay behind.

We have just heard the awful news about Lord Kitchener and can hardly realize it yet. I was formerly of London, England and have seen most of those big people some time or other.

Air Scouts.

As I am writing the aeroplanes are coming in for the night after having a last scout around up and down the lines. I guess I could count ten if I went out. We get used to the planes and can tell by the hum what type they are, as the infantry can tell what kind of a shell is coming.

Cavalry can't do very much out here, so we do a lot of patrolling, picquets, guard escorting, etc. We always have to be ready in case we are needed. We are living in billets, which means we are paying for a certain bit of the ground on a certain farm. We have our own cook, field kitchens, etc. The stables are built of sack cloth with roofs daubed with yellow, black, green and brown all in zig-zag streaks, so that the enemy air scouts cannot distinguish them as they could plain khaki. Lorry covers etc., are dealt with in the same manner. If I could tell you the different runes you would be surprised, but it would be censored.

PRESENTATION TO MR. CHAS. COLEMAN

The officers and friends of the Peterborough Choral Society met last night at the studio of its musical director, Mr. John Allan, Brock Street and presented a farewell address and fountain pen, suitably engraved to Mr. Charles Coleman who is leaving shortly for England. Mr. Coleman is a past president of the society and been actively interested in all its affairs and undertakings. Mr. Coleman made a deeply appreciative reply. Mr. and Mrs. Allan proved most hospitable and a very pleasant evening was spent. Refreshments were served and short programme of music enjoyed.

AUTO LAUNDRY.

FAMOUS HOCKEY STARS WHO HAVE HEARD THE CALL OF THE EMPIRE

Toronto News: The announcement in yesterday's papers that Sergt Steve Vair had been reported wounded reminds one that the professional hockey players are doing their share in the big struggle across the pond as well as the amateur boys. Vair is a well-known player, having often appeared at the Mutual Street arena and was a big favourite with every one on account of his clean, gentle manly playing at all times.

All the hockey fans will remember big, good-natured Alan Davidson the Kingston boy, who was probably the best hockey player in the N. H. A. ranks. He was killed in action over a year ago, and was one of the first to volunteer for overseas service Game as they are made he was nearly half of the great organization that won the championship under the colors of the Toronto hockey club three winters ago.

Last fall, when the chances of making big money for their services were right in line in the hockey world two of the Ottawa champion team, "Punch" Broadbent and Alex Graham, turned down a large salary to go as privates in answer to the call. They were two of the best and most popular players of the Capital sextette.

Lieut. 'Teddy' Oke, of the 180th Sportsmen, was another boy well liked in professional hockey circles While never a star he always was ready and willing to do his share and answered to the call when it was put up to him to "do his bit" in the big game.

Since last winter several of the best known players have enlisted and the 228, of North Bay, can boast of one of the best hockey teams in their ranks. They have about twenty first-class hockey players already signed up.

George and Harold McNamara, two of the famous brothers, are with the 228th, and George, who played with Toronto, a year ago, is a lieutenant while brother Harold is in the ranks They have been popular players in Toronto ever since the Arena was opened.

Gordon Keats, the sensation of the N.H.A. last winter, is also with the 228th. Keats made a name for himself last year, and was probably the star forward of the league. He played with the Torontos and enlisted at his home in North Bay.

'Goldie' Prodgers, the big defence man of the Canadiens last year, and who also played with Quebec and Wanderers, is another of the stalwarts with the 228th, along with Art Ionor, the crack O.H.A. junior who did so well his first year with the Candien champions.

Jack Walker, the boy who made the 'poke check' famous, and who played with Seattle last winter, after two years with the Torontos, in the N. H. A., is the latest addition to the ranks. Jack Brown and Harry Meeking, two of the youngest players in the N.H.A., are also doing their bit and if the war is not over before next winter a lot of these boys will be too busy to play much hockey.

RESULTS OF THE LAWN BOWLING

Scotch	36
Others	38

BARRIEFIELD, June 21.—The various battalions at Barriefield have advanced so satisfactorily with their organization and training, that Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, General Staff Officer, has decided to issue the complete set of machine guns to each unit. Up to the present four Lewis guns have been the complement of each, but the nine battalions will now have a total of twice that many for their work. The 109th battalion's section is the only one using Colts.

The Kingston Whig says: It is reported from England that the 80th Battalion has been broken up for reinforcements for the existing battalions at the front.

The 80th Battalion went overseas a short time ago and while here created an excellent physique of the men and the organization.

The Kingston Whig says: The musketry course on the ranges is taking up all the available time of the 93rd Battalion. Being the senior battalion, and therefore billed for the front before the others the General Staff Officer is making every effort to increase their already high standard of proficiency on the ranges and they are doing splendid work at every opportunity. A few fine days and this work would go ahead by leaps and bounds, and another battalion then could take advantage of the ranges work under Capt. W. E. Swain and Capt. Kirkconnell.

There will likely be some of the officers of this Military District Instructional Cadre go with the soldiers to Valcartier as the reputation of the men on the staff has spread to the other camps and good men are difficult to secure. Major R. E. Potter, who has been acting as brigade major for the training of No. 3 Brigade at the camp may go in the same capacity and others will likely be asked for by General Wilson.

Mrs. C. Rutherford, 328 London street has received the following letter from Capt. W. H. Blanchard of Peterborough, who is in France with the No. 1 Veterinary Hospital, B.E.F.:

My Dear Madam,—Delighted to find in one if the pairs of socks a very short little note informing me to whom I am indebted for such kindness. It really is a very good and pleasant idea as we know that some one in Canada is thinking about the boys—old and young. You may be sure that they are received with the thanks of those who have the pleasure of wearing them and they do come in very useful for a change from wet to dry. Please express to the ladies of the West End Knitting Club my sincere thanks, in which I assure you includes your worthy self. I am enclosing a photo taken in the city near here. I should be very much pleased if you will accept the same. It is a memo of France if not good to look at. I am writing this rather late as I cannot go to my billet until 1 p.m. Wishing you and the ladies of your club the best of health. I am well myself. Bruce is on the way to rapid recovery. George is in Ypres and in good health."

OTTAWA, June 21.—The current number of The Census and Statistics Monthly, issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce, contains an interesting article on the number of male persons of military age in Canada, namely, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, according to the figures of the last census. The article divides the population into Canadian-born, British-born and foreign-born, for each of the Provinces, and for the Dominion as a whole. For the whole of Canada the total population of military age is given as 1,720,070; Canadian-born total 1,109,385; British-born, 306,377, and foreign-born 304,310. In the Maritime Provinces the native-born are more than 90 per cent. of the whole population. In Quebec the native born represent 81.44 per cent.; in Ontario 70.57 per cent. In all the Western Provinces the native-born constitute less than one-half of the male persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years. In British Columbia the percentage of native-born is only 26.23 per cent. The foreign-born males constitute the largest proportion of males between eighteen and forty-five years in Alberta and British Columbia, the percentage of foreign-born in these two Provinces being respectively 43.54 per cent. and 39.20 per cent.

The classification by Provinces gives the following figures:

	Canadian born.	British born.	Foreign born.
Alberta	37,445	31,954	53,318
Prince E. I.	16,592	167	119
Nova Scotia	35,909	6,437	4,147
New Brunswick	24,178	2,371	2,151
Quebec	341,783	23,066	26,049
Ontario	410,898	106,997	64,359
Manitoba	49,988	30,806	33,080
Saskatchewan	61,126	38,971	58,943
British Col.	41,569	54,716	62,046

These figures are of especial interest in comparison with the number of enlistments from each Province.

OFFICERS TO TRAIN.

OTTAWA, June 21.—The number of officers now in Canada who have qualified in training, but are yet unattached is given as 3,732 by the Militia Department. The intention is to call these officers out this summer for a period of further training at the various camps in order to keep them in readiness for service. They will be provided so far as posible, either as non-commissioned officers, or, if they desire it, in battalions of their own. The heavy wastage of officers at the front in ecent fighting, reaching already to between four and five hundred men, will, of course, provide room for some of those not now attached.

Mrs. Darrah of this city has received the following interesting letter from Private George Butcher, who, together with Mrs. Darrah's son, Private David Darrah, and Private Norman Darling, left here with the 8th Mounted Rifles. Private Norman Darling was reported killed in action some weeks ago. The letter follows:

"I received your welcome letter of August 28th, and must say I was very pleased to hear from you even though we have not met personally, but just through hearing of each other through your son. David Darrah, Norman Darling, Dave and I were the only three from Peterborough in the 1st Canadian Mounted Rifles, but now that poor Norman Darling has been killed there are only two of us left. Dave and I often talk over old times whenever we have a chance, which is very often, as we are both in the same gun company. I heard about "Scotty" Rogers being killed. I also read in the paper about Gordon Carveth. He was a cousin of Norman Darling's and was killed in April. As far as Dave is concerned he is looking fine, and, I believe he is enjoying the best of health. He is getting real fat and if he keeps it up I don't know what we will do with him. Ever since I have known him I have not seen him looking so well as he does at the present time. Of course the winter is past and with the warm weather and all the mud gone a person can enjoy himself a little better, which all helps. The three of us from Peterborough used to enjoy ourselves by helping each other with his parcels, and whenever one of us received one it was always kept until we could get together again. Around Christmas time all three of us received lots of parcels and we lived high as long as they lasted. If the senders of the parcels only knew how we watch for them I think they would feel repaid for all their trouble in getting them ready. At present we are enjoying a week's rest from the trenches, but expect to go back in again in a few days. However, with the weather better it is not quite so bad as it was in the winter when it was wet.

Well, Mrs. Darrah, I will have to stop now, but must first thank you for writing me, and hope that I will hear from you again. I remain

Yours truly,
PTE. GEORGE BUTCHER,
Machine Gun Company,
8th Canadian Infantry Brigade.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Cuffe, Benson street have received a letter of condolence from Premier Borden and his ministers, expressing their sympathy in the death at the front of Pte. T. L. Cuffe.

Pte. F. W. Painter, No. 1 platoon, A company, 93rd Battalion, is home on leave from Barriefield.

Letters from two well known Peterborough officers appeared in the Toronto Telegram last night in reference to the death of Lieut. Malone, goal keeper of the Varsity Junior O. H. A. team.

Lieut. Wilfred Stratton who was with other friends of the late Lieut. Malone at the last scene in his earthly career, and shed a tributary tear at his graveside, is serving with the Divisional Supply Column. Writing to Mrs. Malone he states: "His brother officer told me Maurice led his men over the parapet towards the Germans. It was in the charge at the hill that he was shot in the breast with a bullet from a German machine gun and he fell. Some of his men stopped to aid him, but with a worthy spirit he ordered them to go on, saying he was all right. A short time afterwards he died in the middle of the battle among his fighting men. His body was brought back by one of his men, and yesterday he was buried with full military honours. I am having flowers put on his grave and will see that it is properly looked after."

Captain "Pete" G. Campbell also wrote on June 6th to Mr. Malone, expressing his sympathy, and in his letter he says: "It was really a cruel task, the counter-attack they had to make, but they made it well, along with the other units. We were enjoying a nice rest in corps reserve when the line wavered and our brigade was thrown into the breach. I am on the staff and saw the Battalion in position. Major Forbes, second in command, who was rather badly wounded, told me in the dressing station that 'Mike' was absolutely splendid and that he was going to write to the officer commanding the battalion to have 'Mike' mentioned for a medal. This was before we heard that 'Mike' had been killed. Forbes says he was all over the line when he was wounded. The acting O. C. was sending to 'Mike' for information regarding the position and situation. The tough part about it as being in corps reserve. Old 'Mike' going on leave in five days. 'Bud' Brown was going Thursday, and put off his leave a week in order to go with 'Mike' his chum.

Although I am now with the staff I am still as much a 48th. man as I ever sorrow sorry wtg casual 48th. B ever was."

FARM AND GARDEN.

Lambs will begin to eat grain when about two weeks old.

Put the tools in the dry as soon as through using them.

In large dogs the pulse beat per minute is 70; in small ones 90.

Hang the scythes, not in the apple tree, as Daniel Webster did but under the shed.

Give the good old cow a little better care. Every calf that she gives you will more than repay for any extra care.

The sow while suckling her pigs should be kept as quiet as possible. She should not be expected to root for her living.

Give a variety of foods to all your stock. More rapid gains are made when the appetite is stimulated by careful changes and tempting additions to the ration.

HALF the comfort of a shirt is in the neckband. Isn't it strange then that men will go on struggling with shirts that pinch and bind at the neck when they might have ease and all the other things that go with a good shirt by simply asking for shirts bearing the "Red Label"?

WEDDING BELLS

HAFFEY—GIBSON.

The marriage took place at St. Mary's Church, Campbellford, on Tuesday morning of Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson, and Dr. Joseph Haffey, Toronto. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Father Whibbs, and during the nuptial mass Miss Ella Brady sang "Ave Maria." The bride wore white Georgette crepe over ivory satin, and a large pale pink hat. Miss Blanche Gibson was her sister's bridesmaid, and wore maise colored Georgette crepe and a large Leghorn hat. Dr. Vincent McDonough of Toronto was groomsman. Dr. and Mrs Haffey left for New York and Washington, the bride travelling in an African brown silk suit, with chin-chin sailor to match.

CORKERY—SOMERS.

A wedding of considerable local interest took place on Tuesday morning the 20th inst. at 9 o'clock in St. Bridget's church, Ottawa, when Miss Mary Gertrude Somers, daughter of Mrs. Catharine Somers and the late Wm. Somers became the bride of Mr. John F. Corkery, barrister of this city. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Wm. T. Kelly, of Toronto, a personal friend of the contracting parties, assisted by the pastor, Rev. Thos. P. Fay, Rev. Fathers Corkery and McGregor occupying seats in the sanctuary. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms and orange blossoms.

The young bride, who looked very beautiful, was accompanied to the altar by her brother, while from the organ loft pealed forth the sweet strains of Lohengrin's wedding march. Her gown was ivory Duchess satin trimmed with rose point lace. She wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms arranged in mob cap effect and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was the gift of the groom, a pearl and peridot pendant. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Mamie Somers, who looked very attractive in a beautiful gown of shell pink charmeuse, trimmed with Irish lace and pearls and wore a shepherdess hat caught under the chin with black velvet streamers. She carried a large bouquet of pink roses. The groom's brother, Mr. Vincent Corkery, of the Bank of Ottawa, Parry Sound, was best man. The choir for the occasion was composed of former pupils of the Gloucester street convent, of which institution the bride is a graduate, and during the nuptial mass the sweet voice of Miss Bessie Boyle was heard in three beautiful solos.

After the ceremony, breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother, only immediate relatives being invited. In the afternoon the party drove to the G.T.R. station, where the happy couple left for Quebec and Saguenay. They will reside in Peterborough.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl and onyx pendant, and to the groomsman a pearl tie pin.

SALLS—ALLISON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at noon to-day, when Olive, second daughter of the late David and Mrs. Allison was united in marriage to Mr. Guy Preston Salls, son of Mr. S. E. Salls of Toronto. Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. officiated.

The bride was beautifully gowned in Ivory crepe-de-chine trimmed with chantilly lace and orange blossoms, and carried a shower boquet of Lillies of the Valley and roses. The bridesmaid who was Miss Ethel Stockwell of Toronto, wore a handsome gown of embroidered net with touches of pink and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses. The groom was supported by Mr. A. Roberts also of Toronto. Miss Helen Grieves of this city played the wedding march, and during the signing of the register Mr. Douglas Carlisle sang very acceptably "O Promise Me".

The happy couple left on the 3.25 train, the bride travelling in a suit of Taup Pean-De-soi with hat to match. They will reside in Toronto.

The out of town guests were, Mr and Mrs. S. E. Salls, Dr. C. B. Wilson, Miss Mooney, and Mr. Ross Allison of Toronto, Dr. and Mrs. Butler and Miss Cora Butler of Newcastle, Miss Brown and Miss Hollis Brown of Chicago.

HALL BEDROOM FOR CROWN ATTORNEY

County Council Will Provide a "Third Floor Back," the Only Vacant Room at Court House, for Mr. Hatton

The County Council renewed its grants to the Agricultural Societies of the County, as follows: $175 each to the Norwood and Peterborough Fairs; $75.00 each to Keene, Lakefield and Galway.

INCREASE THIS GRANT.

The grant to the Children's Aid Society was increased from $250 to $300.

ROOM AT COURT HOUSE FOR MR. HATTON.

The Council decided to provide office facilities in the Court House for Crown Attorney Hatton, who in a communication had called attention to the fact that the County was required to make this provision or pay his rent, light, heat, etc., which he had estimated at $350. The Council had a room to spare upstairs, at the south west end of the courthouse and are willing to set this apart for Mr. Hatton's accommodation.

INVESTIGATION COST $91.45.

The Grand Jury that Mr. Justice Mulock commissioned to investigate the conditions in northeast parts of the county, presented an expense account for $91.45, of which $52 represented Mrs. F. H. Dobbin's charge for preparing the report, a copy of which was sent to Justice Mulock. The account was passed with the best grace that could be mustered, but members did not hesitate to express their opinions of the entire account. Some complained that the jury had merely jaunted to Havelock and did not go into the country at all. "For which we should probably be thankful" said Reeve Squire, "the bill for that might have been $1,000." The report, said Mr. Coben, was merely a compilation of letters from reeves and citizens of the county.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

Following is the report of the committee appointed to deal with the Warden's address:

To Warden Darling,

Your Committee beg to submit as follows:

1. That we, your colleagues, most heartily endorse and join in your sentiments as expressed by you referring to the loss of life and property as a result of the war.

2. We concur with you in as much as in the past the sun will shine on our Canadian land, thereby producing, where such prospects cannot be looked forward to for years to come in the devastated war zone.

3. We, with you, hope for a speedy and satisfactory conclusion of hostilities.

4. It has been, as stated, the Councillors' endeavour to economize as much as possible this year consistent with actual necessity.

5. We congratulate the County on having the dignity of the Council and County maintained as a result of your integrity and fair-dealing as Warden, and assure you that harmony and progress will be the watchword for the balance of the year.

Respectfully submitted.

B. W. SQUIRE,
Chairman.

Alex. MacGregor Resigns To Offer Services Overseas

Mr. Alex. R. MacGregor, telegraph operator at the C.P.R. up-town telegraph office, has resigned his position to enlist in one of the Overseas units. It was learned to-day. It is understood that he expects to go to Ottawa early in July and will probably join a corps of signallers in which service his skill as a telegrapher should be best employed. In the meantime Mr. McGregor is taking a holiday of a week or two before reporting. He is being succeeded at the C.P.R. office by Miss Flemming of Sarnia.

Plans For Huge War Craft

Special to The Examiner

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Chairman Tillman to-day urged the Senate sub-committee drafting plans for an enlarged American navy, to authorize a ship of 60,000 tons, 950 feet in length, armed with fifteen 18 guns and with a speed of 35 knots, to cost $30,000,000. The ship would have approximately twice the power of any vessel afloat. It would be the largest craft that could pass through the Panama canal.

"It could whip a whole fleet of ordinary battleships," said Tillman. Naval experts have told Tillman, he said, the ship is entirely feasible. If Tillman's ship is approved it will be counted as two battleships.

Red ink can be easily made at home. Take ten grains of pure carmine and dissolve in it 1 1-2 ounces of liquid ammonia. Then add ten grains of pure oxalic to the mixture.

BAND CONCERT BY TWO BANDS

57th and 93rd Bands Will March to Victoria Park To-morrow Night

Bandsmen of the 57th and 93rd are asked to meet at the Conservatory Hall to-morrow night (Friday) at 7.45 p.m. to march to Victoria Park, where a concert will be given by the combined bands, numbering seventy musicians. The programme will be published to-morrow.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, June 22.—The stock market stood the shock overnight Mexican developments remarkably well to-day. While declines were general, they were for the most part fractional losses. Mexican Petroleum sold off 1 3-8 points at 96 3-4, United States Steel was down 1-8 of a point at 83 5-8. Reading sold off 7-8 of a point at 101 1-8.

Prices improved slowly during the afternoon in a dull market. Marine Preferred was quoted at 92 7-8 against 91 1-3 earlier in the day. Mexican Petroleum sold at 97 1-4.

Prices moved on narrow margin later in day. Trading was moderately active. New Haven showed strength and Marine issues climbed upward, after slumping during the first half hour. Steel sold as low as 83 3-8, but had recovered to 83 3-4 at noon.

Ultimatum To Can. Power Co.

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, June 22.— The equivalent of an ultimatum has been served upon the Canadian Niagara Power Co. to the effect that it must choose between selling all the power generated at its plant at Niagara Falls, Ont. to the Hydro Electric Commission, or risk the danger of having its license to export power into the United States cancelled.

Guards Secrets of The Greatest Fleet

Writing in the New York American, Augustus F. Beach says:

There is probably no more efficient officer in all of Great Britain than the man chosen by wise Admiralty heads to combat the German system of espionage and to penetrate at the same time the German espionage armor. He is Captain William R. Hall, at the outbreak of the war commander of the cruiser Queen Mary, destroyed in the fight of Jutland, and one of the first British commanders actually to sink a German man-of-war. This he did in the first Heligoland battle.

Hall is a new fighter of the finest type, a sailor with the salt of the seven seas in his veins and hatred for no man in his heart. They made him chief of the intelligence division of the navy because he knew men as well as ships, and the rest of the world as well as Britain. I have known his encouraging smile to batter down spy disguises, where the usual third degree methods would be futile. It takes a strong man to talk an hour with Hall and not reveal himself.

FELT FOR THE ENEMY.

I never think of Hall as a secret service director without recalling an incident that occurred on the bridge of the good ship Queen Mary as she raced in to the death after scoring a fatal hit on a German cruiser in that first tussle in Heligoland Bight.

Hall is a religious man. Also like the ablest sea fighters everywhere, he could face death himself with a hundredfold less feeling than would reach his heart at the sight of an enemy bound to the regions of Davy Jones.

Hall first found the Germans with a shell at seven or eight miles. A broadside from the Queen Mary tilted the enemy and Hall rushed in at full speed. Through his glasses he could see the Germans turning up on end, and her men crowding aft to stay out of the water as long as possible.

"I'm a bit religious, you know," Hall said to me, "and I don't like to see the poor beggars going down just that way. I naturally took off my cap and said a little prayer for them. I hadn't got very far with what I had to say though, when I sort of felt that all was not well, and I cast my off eye seaward.

DODGING A TORPEDO.

"Nothing but a torpedo coming dead on amidship! I quit praying right here long enough to throw the ship's course over, so as to parallel the course over, so as to parallel the I took off my cap again and said a prayer for my own crew. We paralleled her all right, and she went skimming by."

This is Hall, the man who guards the secrets of the world's greatest fleet, and seeks the secrets of the next greatest. He believes that you should love your enemies—and shoot straight.

Asked to name a prototype to Hall, I should at once point out Major Nicolli, chief of the espionage division of the German army. The two great differences between the two men are the first and obvious ones—one is a German and the other English. One is a soldier and the other a sailor. But they are exceedingly alike.

VON MOLTKE DIED PRAISING FRIEND

STRICKEN WHILE PRONOUNCING EULOGY TO THE MEMORY OF FIELD MARSHAL VON DER GOLTZ.

London, June 22.—The death of Lt.-General Count Von Moltke at the memorial service to Field Marshal von der Goltz occurred just after he had delivered a eulogy of the distinguished soldier, according to the despatches from Berlin forwarded by the Copenhagen correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

General von Moltke had pronounced Field Marshal von der Goltz one of the world's greatest organizers in beginning his address, when he became ill. He was able to finish his speech, but fell to the floor and expired five minutes later while the Turkish ambassador was speaking.

The German Emperor, in a telegram of condolence from main headquarters to Count von Moltke's widow, according to a Reuter Amsterdam despatch, said:

"Words fail me to give expression to my feelings.....The Fatherland will not forget his great services. So long as I live I shall gratefully remember what this upright, wise man, with a character of gold and a warm, loyal heart, was to me and my army.....I have lost a true friend in him."

Heavy Fighting Continues On The Western Front French Recapture Trenches

Germans Entered British Trench North of the La Bassee Canal But Were Immediately Driven Out With Heavy Losses---Furious Bombardment Continues Around Hill 321 on the Verdun Front.

A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

PARIS, June 23.—Heavy fighting continued last night on both banks of the Meuse. The French recaptured trenches taken on Wednesday night.

AERIAL COMBATS ON THE WEST.

PARIS, June 23.—About a dozen German aeroplanes were brought down yesterday in aerial combats.

GERMANS WERE DRIVEN OUT.

LONDON, June 23.—Following a violent explosion north of La Bassee Canal yesterday the Germans entered the British trenches but were immediately driven out with heavy losses.

FURIOUS BOMBARDMENT CONTINUES.

PARIS, June 23.—Late despatches from the Verdun front say that the furious bombardment around Hill 321 continues.

RESOLUTION OF CONFIDENCE.

PARIS, June 23.—After seven days' secret session the Chamber of Deputies adopted a resolution of confidence in the Government by a vote of 453 to 89.

GERMAN BATTLESHIP BADLY DAMAGED.

COPENHAGEN, June 23.—The German battleship Koenig, badly damaged in the North Sea battle, is said to have been docked at Kiel.

Censor Makes It Known Germany is Now Ready to Forego Annexation Plans

BERLIN, June 23.—That the imperial chancellor is opposed to the annexation of Belgium and other far-reaching plans of the pan-German expansionists—a fact which has often been referred to by intimation in these despatches, although the censorship restrictions forbade open discussion of this subject—was flatly announced by the Socialist, Philipp Scheidemann, in a speech at Breslau Tuesday night. Herr Scheidemann's statement was based on the Chancellor's own declarations to the Socialist leaders, and it was made before a great Socialist meeting, which had been assembled to receive an account and explanation of the attitude of the majority of the Socialists in the Reichstag.

SOCIALISTS MAKE PROTEST.

Referring to a recent publication by the Belgian Minister of State, Emile Vandervelde, in which the imperial chancellor's policy was described as aiming at the anexation of Belgium and all the occupied French districts, Herr Scheidemann declared:

"Those ascribing to the imperial chancellor such intentions do him a great wrong. I know he has no thought of such plans. When the pan-German expansionists presented to the chancellor their plans I and several party friends visited the chancellor and made protest against the plans. We heard from the chancellor's own mouth that he wished to have nothing to do with such plans. He rejected them decisively, and most firmly disapproved of them, like all similar plans."

Big Offensive Is Coming On Western Front

So Claim Two American Surgeons Who Have Been Doing Red Cross Work in France

VAST STORES

NEW YORK, June 23.—An offensive movement on a greater magnitude than anything heretofore attempted is under preparation by the British and French along the entire western front, according to Drs. John S. O'Malley and F. C. Jacobs of Chicago, recently connected with an American hospital corps in France, who arrived here to-day on the steamship Noordam from Falmouth.

According to the physicians, this offensive was planned to begin in April, but was forestalled by the unexpected efforts of the Germans before Verdun. Evidence that the offensive movement is yet to take place, they said, is the vast quantities of munitions that are being gathered and stored in convenient localities and the establishment of numerous hospital bases, fully equipped, back of the lines.

"The boys in the trenches were stunned by the news of Kitchener's death," Dr. O'Malley said. "Later, however, the feeling became one of gratitude that K. of K. had been spared to complete his great work—the building of the tremendous army which Great Britain has offered to the allied cause."

HAS TONS OF BRITISH GOLD.

More Than $10,000,000 in Coin Has Reached Philaddiphia Mint.

Philadelphia, June 23. — Tons of British sovereigns have been shipped across the Atlantic during the past six months, and much of this minted gold has been melted at the Philadelphia and other mints into bars and stacked in the Sub-treasury and the mints. Approximately $10,000,000 in coin has arrived at the local mint in the last few days from Canada, $2,000,000 arriving yesterday from Ottawa.

The stacks of gold in the mint consist of 16,500 bars, each one being worth about $7,000.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION

Business Men in Mexico City Do Not Believe That the United States Will Risk Destroying Relations With Latin-American Countries By War With Mexico

WILL RESIST INVASION

MEXICO CITY, June 23.—Salvador and Costa Rica have notified the Mexican government that they will join Mexico in opposing the invasion by the United States. It was delivered to-day. Mexico City business men interviewed by the United Press, expressed disbelief that the United States would risk destroying her friendly relations with the Latin-American countries after labouring so hard to establish them, by conflict with Mexico. They believe that the American government realizes that the invasion would arouse hostility against the United States throughout Central and South America, endangering, if not ruining, the trade connections of American merchants and manufacturers.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The United States government is understood to have asked Great Britain to take charge of American interests in Mexico should war occur between the two countries.

Young American Surgeons Made Experts By the War

Paris, June 23.—A cold blooded view of the war hospitals reveals the wonderful and otherwise unobtainable practice that young surgeons, of whom many are Americans, are obtaining. The young fellows who are going into that profession could not have chosen a better class for their graduation than 1914 or 1915. Those employed in France receive $42 a week and $3.00 a day expense money.

SURGEON SEES REMOVAL OF IS OWN APPENDIX

AKRON, O., June 22 — Showing what doctors agree was a remarkable exhibition of nerve, Dr. B. O. Miller, Akron surgeon, went on the operating table at People's Hospital and had his appendix removed without taking an anesthetic.

While Drs. H. H. Jacobs and R. H. McKay performed the operation Dr. Miller watched with keen interest and even made suggestions to them as to procedure. He will recover.

Trench Warfare Puts End To Use of Armoured Autos

Paris, June 23.— A year ago great things were expected of the armored automobile, and it certainly made a good record for a while; but as soon as both armies dug themselves in its usefulness was greatly discounted.

Where armies are engaged in active and rapid movements, not mere sorties from the trenches, the armored car is of great value, but at present it is being but little used in France. On the other hand the ammunition and supply cars that have to go up to the front are now frequently armored with advantage, although their means of offence, or rather defence, is limited to the rifles of the guards.

WAVES OF REFUGEES SWEEP OVER RUSSIA

Migration Problem Complicated by Arrival of Poles from Devastated Region and of Hosts of Prisoners.

PETROGRAD, June 23.—Since the beginning of the war, Petrograd and Moscow have been swept by successive invasions of refugees of various kinds. When war was declared there were in every large Russian city, but especially in Petrograd, Moscow and Odessa, large colonies of German and Austrian subjects, practically permanent residents of Russia, although without being naturalized citizens. They were engaged in almost every conceivable profession and trade, bankers, doctors, brokers, merchants, middlemen, salesmen, bookbinders, shoemakers, and everything else. They had brought their families with them, or had married Russian women, learned the language, and seemed permanently settled in their new homes.

The ease with which the Russian can be bested in shrewdness by foreigners and the comparative freedom from the many petty restrictions of life under German rule were in large measure responsible for this immigration which had been under way for several centuries, but had not increased to any alarming extent until within the last half century, or rather since the Franco-Prussian war. The few arrivals made good settlers and were not discouraged by the authorities of the cities into which they came in search of new homes. They speedily made themselves very much at home, spread and prospered to such an extent that they had become a serious problem to the industrial and commercial development of Russia.

All this was in addition to the thousands who had settled during the last centuries on the land in various rural districts of Russia, and under the general name of "colonists" had fixed themselves firmly to the soil.

All Changed by War.

The city dwellers were there, as I have said, in their thousands, and even hundreds of thousands, when the coming of war changed the Russians from more or less unwilling hosts to active enemies. Administrative measures were at once taken by the proper authorities to control all citizens or subjects belligerent nations found in the country, and for this purpose orders were issued that all German and Austrian men of military age must be ordered from the cities and sent to remote villages and localities in the more northern Governments or to some Siberian or Ural towns.

As in very many cases the women and children were also sent with the male members of their families, or preferred going voluntarily to share their fortunes rather than to remain behind alone, the movement soon assumed gigantic proportions.

The general procedure was that the administrative police officials would look through their records and send officers around to inform all persons with German or Austrian passports or residence permits that they would have to leave their homes by a certain specified time, sometimes not more than twenty-four hours ahead. In most cases they were not ordered to any special new place of abode, but could more or less choose their new homes. They were forced naturally to dispose of their business or homes on very short notice and, as a general thing, had to leave most of their belongings behind them in their flight. In the case of certain people, tickets or transportation were supplied and sometimes provision was made for feeding them while on the road.

Unfortunately, the railroads were greatly congested and disordered at this time by the mobilization and movements of army supplies from one place to another and passenger traffic in general and accommodation for refugees got on as best they could. Crowds could be seen at the different stations waiting for a train going in the general direction in which the fugitives were bound, and as many as possible would crowd on it and go as far as it went.

Some of the unfortunate people were on their journey for five or six weeks and landed unexpectedly, perhaps in the middle of Siberia, perhaps on the Volga, perhaps in the far north country. Usually no sleeping cars were available either for refugees or other passengers as all the effort of the railway officials had to be turned toward the increasing needs of the army, for as the recruits began to report they were assigned to their places and shipped off to their posts.

SECOND EXODUS STARTED.

Next, the military authorities gave orders to expel all Germans and Austrians who had been living in a zone a hundred versts (kilometers) wide along the western fronts from the Baltic to the South and this started another general exodus just as the first was beginning to subside. The population of Riga was so largely German that for weeks the refugees kept coming into Petrograd daily and stood in long lines before the hastily organized relief offices opened to help them on their way.

The hasty abandonment of their homes in Petrograd and Moscow was the cause of much confusion for a time, for naturally landlords did not know whether they would ever see their tenants again and were averse to holding their houses or apartments for them, especially as, regarding them as enemies, they did not have the kindliest feelings toward them. In many cases the quarters vacated were quickly taken over by other people who were called to the cities by one or another form of duty or by those Russians who decided to leave their homes in the war zones for the quieter atmosphere of the capital. Many of the questions regarding claims are not yet settled, and cannot be until the end of the war.

On the whole, there was as little confusion and trouble as such wholesale changes could occasion. At first there was uncertainty as to where to send the refugees, but as the military exigencies developed, it was found necessary to ship them off without waiting to place them. Many of the small country villages in the Governments of the north saw their population doubled or trebled within a few weeks. The police officials would send word how many available houses or rooms there were and then would be overwhelmed with a shipment of two or three times enough to take up all the free places. But it could not be helped, the pressure behind was too strong and places had to be found somewhere or temporary structures built.

The hardships of the trip, especially for the women and children, were great, and there were many deaths as the result of the unavoidable exposures and trials of the journey. Many of the people were too poor or had had no time to buy proper warm clothing, and even if they had the available supply would have been exhausted long before all had been provided for. Sooner or later places were found for all, but hardly had they commenced to get accustomed to their new surroundings when arrangements were perfected between the Austrian and German Governments on one side and the Russian Government on the other for the sending back to their native lands of any women and children who desired to go.

This arrangement was afterward extended to men who were not of military age or who could prove that they were not capable of being of any use for military service. This soon caused a backward wave of refugees through Petrograd and Moscow again to Germany across Finland, or to Austria through Roumania.

There are no accurate figures available as to the number of civil prisoners in Russia who were removed from their homes or concentrated in detention camps, but there must have been, at a rough estimate, well over a million Austrian and German women and children.

The relations of these people with their new neighbours, the Russian inhabitants of the towns and villages to which the refugees were sent strikingly exemplify the goodheartedness and humanity of the Russian peasant, and middle class. Although they were enemies and were putting the inhabitants to much inconvenience by crowding in, forcing up the price of supplies and food of all kinds there, were remarkably few complaints of any quarrels or trouble. The new arrivals were allotted in and suffered to live as best they could without insult or annoyance and with no active ill feeling.

SECOND GREAT WAVE OF REFUGEES.

The next great wave of fugitives which swept over the cities was during the summer of 1915, after the Russian retreats in Poland and the Baltic provinces. The refugees this time were not enemies, but Russian subjects driven from their home either by the German advance or by the devastation of the country by the Russian armies. This wave began pouring eastward by train, carriage horse, and foot. Poles, Letts, Esthonians, Russians and Jews were all included in the motley crowd. Some had all their worldly goods tied up in handkerchiefs; others were rich or well-to-do people, owners of great estates in Courland or Esthonia, whose houses had been destroyed and whose cattle and crops taken by the invaders or driven away by the Russian forces so that they would not fall into the hands of the enemy.

Into Petrograd and Moscow they poured and did not stop coming until they had filled both cities to overflowing, taken up every house and room and so crowded the hotels that even to-day you have to put your name long in advance on the waiting list and are lucky if you get anything at all.

Many of them are poor beyond words and have to be helped by the committees and relief organizations which are striving to help all comers or by the special national or religious bodies which assist their own people but very many indeed seem to have plenty of money to take fine house and keep automobiles and other luxuries even in this time of high prices. The theatres and the three series of opera now going on are packed nightly, all the movies do a thriving business and the unfortunate resident of Petrograd is forced to see prices forced upward by the demands of the newcomers.

It is said that there are over six hundred thousand Russian refugees in Petrograd alone, while in Moscow there are supposed to be a million. About two and a half million more are scattered around in villages and in the country, along the western border of Russia. Many of these people will be available to take the place of men who have gone to the war when the Spring busy season comes to the farmers, when every additional hand will be a blessing.

In all of what I have said I have not included the war prisoners properly so called, that is, the soldiers captured by the Russians. They have been in the country in enormous numbers, and have formed separate problems managed in different ways from the civil prisoners or from the Russian refugees.

In one sense they have been luckier than the latter two classes of people for they were strong men, without women or children, and they knew what was before them. The other were caught through no fault of their own and enveloped in the war while peacefully living and carrying on their affairs and had no time to make preparations or take any steps to provide for their future. Their repatriation and the arrangements for resuming the broken threads of their lives must be one of the most important problems of reconstruction after the war.

MAY BALK AT COTTON ONES.

It is pointed out, however, that, although cotton sunbonnets are thus taking up much space in showrooms, it is not to be supposed that they will make their appearance on the heads of their owners in Mayfair or Belgravia. Nor even the most conscientious of war economists would, I fancy wear these strictly utilitarian head covering within the town's restricted area.

I daresay, however, it is likely that all the young ladies from the outer suburbs, seeing that sunbonnets are becoming a special feature in west end shop windows, will at once assume that they must be the right thing to wear at matinees or church parades, or other "towney" shows, and the news may be flashed across the Atlantic that "all the smart women in London are wearing sunbonnets in Hyde Park."

PERFECT HEALTH IS EVERY WOMAN'S BIRTHRIGHT.

A Prescription That From Girlhood to Old Age Has Been a Blessing to Womankind.

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, when a woman passes through middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe organic disturbances.

At these critical times women are best fortified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, an old remedy of proved worth that keeps the entire womanly system in excellent condition.

Mothers, if your daughters are weak, lack ambition, are troubled with headaches, lassitude and are pale and sickly, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just what they need to surely bring the bloom of health to their cheeks and make them strong and healthy.

For all ailing women Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just the right medicine. During the last fifty years it has banished from the lives of tens of thousands of women pain, misery and distress. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister, need help, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form from any medicine dealer to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

Every woman should be careful that the liver is active and the poisons are not allowed to clog the system—get rid of these poisons by taking Dr. Pierce's Pellets, which regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Keep the body clean inside as well as outside!

How to preserve health and beauty is told in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It is free. Send Doctor Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., fifty cents or stamps to cover wrapping and mailing only.

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Beware of hose of doubtful brand and quality. The market is overrun with inferior kinds. Usage and weather soon disintegrate them. That means leaks, kinks, lost pressure and wasted money.

We've selected this Goodyear Garden Hose after close comparison because it wipes out all excuse for hose trouble. One reason is this: Goodyear Nero Hose is made so the plies can't separate. The cover and the lining both are extra tough rubber, so Goodyear outwears the average. It's a "many season hose." Yet the prices are low—due to quantity output. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Case of Peter Grant

By ELLA WHEATON

Peter Grant emigrated to the plains when hundreds of thousands of buffaloes were tramping over them, and he went there to hunt them. His oldest boy, Oscar, was nearly grown, and the two together collected the buffalo hides that were tanned into robes, which at that time were largely used in winter in place of the present more expensive skins.

The father of the family, being a poor sleeper, was accustomed to sleep in a room built as an addition or wing of his house, where he would be undisturbed by any sound. Since he was accustomed to come and go at will the key to the door of his room was kept under the doorstep, that whenever he wished to go to bed he might do so without awakening the rest of the household.

The Grant domicile was located not far from the foothills of the Rockies near where now stands the city of Denver, which was then a village. The Indians inhabiting that region were the Utes and the Arapahoes. Both these tribes, especially the latter, were friendly to the whites, but were not very kindly disposed to each other. As late as 1868 the Utes sallied forth from their hunting grounds in the mountains on the warpath to fight their copper colored enemies.

One autumn Peter Grant went on a hunting expedition to get meat for the family use during the winter. He said that he would be gone not over a week, and his destination was that beautiful region since called the Garden of the Gods, in which Colorado City now stands. The week passed and every day the Grant family expected its head to reappear. But day after day passed, and nothing was heard from him.

When two weeks from the time of his appointed return had passed and he did not turn up his son started southward to look for him. Oscar traced his father to the foot of Pikes peak, where he lost track of him. But hearing from settlers that a tribe of Indians from New Mexico had guided that part of Colorado while his father was hunting there, the boy was forced to believe that his father had been captured. He went on southward as far as Pueblo and, hearing nothing of a captured white man, returned northward.

Oscar knew that it was the habit of the Indians on capturing a white man to torture him and then kill him, so he said nothing to his mother of what he had learned. He simply told her that he had heard nothing of his father and hoped that some day he would return to them.

The winter passed without Grant's reappearance. Oscar continued to hunt the buffalo. He desired to complete the amount of money his father had fixed upon before returning to the east, and his mother would not leave the place so long as there was any hope that her husband might be restored to her. A year passed, during which Oscar added considerably to the family assets by the sale of buffalo skins, and he suggested that they go back to the east. The children needed to be educated, and the older girls were now of an age when it was not best that they should remain on the frontier. But Mrs. Grant had faith that her husband would return, and she could not bear to think of his doing so to find his former home deserted. So she kept putting off her children from month to month, from season to season. Finally, when two years had gone by since Grant's departure and there was no news of him, her children persuaded her not to spend another winter on the plains.

The family were preparing for their departure when one day a tribe of Indians from the south came up on a foray. They were not hostile, had no revenge to take on the whites of the region and seemed bent only on appropriating to themselves what they could find. They encamped near the Grant home and stole everything that was not under lock and key, cleaning out all the outhouses, especially the smokehouse, in which hung considerable smoked game, consisting of antelope and venison.

The Indians remained but one day and night and then turned to retrace their steps to their southern camping grounds. During the night that they were about the place Mrs. Grant thought she heard a sound in the little wing of the house in which her husband used to sleep. The key to the door remained where it had always been kept, and she wondered if any of the prowling redskins had found it and gone into the room. If so, doubtless all the bedclothing and smaller articles would be appropriated. In the morning after the Indians had gone she looked for the key, but it was not there. She tried the door and found it locked. While she stood wondering at the meaning of this, she heard a voice say:

"Who's there?"

"Who's inside?"

"Have the Indians gone?"

"Yes."

The bolt was shot back and the door partly opened, revealing a man dressed and painted like an Indian. Mrs. Grant recoiled, but the man caught her in his arms. He was her husband.

He had been captured by this tribe, adopted and carried into New Mexico. When the tribe came north he came with them and found a convenient hiding place in his own room.

COULD NOT BEND DOWN

COULD NOT WALK STRAIGHT

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubinecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy —'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

"Doan's" are manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FOUR WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"For years I suffered so sometimes it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could hardly walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and stayed four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains.

A friend who is a nurse said for me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day for I was suffering a great deal. It has already done me more good than the hospital. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug-store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. BROWN, 1109 Auburn Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TOWNS BLOTTED OUT IN ARGONNE FIGHTING

Not Even Ruins are Left Where Once Hundreds of People Had Their Homes.

A terrific bombardment was in progress, and the crash of shells and whine of bullets echoed all along the front and on to the Verdun hills, where the battle was at its height. But for this terrific din there was no sign of movement or activity, no hurrying troops, no clash of battle lines—only a vast battlefield of green hills and devastated towns, with now and then a puff of smoke from some hidden battery, and the everlasting din of giant weapons racking the ears.

"That's a melanite shell," said General Hillouin, as a crash more terrible than the rest fairly rent the air.

The commanding general turned to M. Painleve, a member of the Briand Ministry, and to The Associated Press representative, who was privileged to accompany this notable party.

"Come up here," said the General, "and get a good survey of the scene." And climbing to this point of vantage, the party looked out on one point after another designated by General Hellouin as those on which the ravages of war had fallen heaviest.

"See that sandy hill," said the General, pointing to a barren crest of yellow sand. "Who would ever think that was the site of a good-sized town only a short time ago? It has solid stone houses and a stone church with double towers of stone and 700 people living a peaceful and prosperous village life. And look at it—not a thing remains, not even ruins. No, it is blotted out of existence. First the houses and church were bombarded into ruins; then the ruins were bombarded into bits, and then the bits were bombarded into dust till—well, look at it, as fit as the desert of Sahara, and not a mound to indicate that hundreds of people lived there only recently."

The party were grouped around the General, speaking in whispers, for just over there were the German gunners a few hundred feet away on the alert for any voice or movement giving them opportunity for a shot. Carefully the General and M. Painleve looked through the foliage screening the high parapet, their heads protected by steel helmets.

Apparently the Germans had divined the presence of a party or had heard the low voices. For suddenly the line of clay trenches immediately opposite, which had been silent until now, burst into a sheet of white smoke as the guns were trained on the point where the party stood. General Hellouin was undisturbed amid the whiz of shells, until two [illegible] risking the risk of his exposed position, induced him and M. Painleve to seek the security of the trench.

General Hellouin wanted the party to see everything — the real living condition of the men—so down one of the black holes of the trenches the guests went. Soon the daylight disappeared and there was darkness of a tunnel and the damp, earthy smell of being under ground. There was a call for caution, and then suddenly this cavern was brightly illuminated as the electric current was turned on for the General and his party. Now the men could be seen plainly—some in the narrow bunks ranged against the clay walls, others at a table with a lantern. At the further end was a small separate hole in the earth—the quarters of the officer commanding the trench. He had put up photographs on the clay sides, one of them a picture of General Joffre, and his little table had several books and trinkets.

"It is not so bad," he said, with pride, as he showed his things, "and it is very practical, and even comfortable, when you get used to it."

A telephone stood handy to the commander of the section, and the telephone wire, incased in a rubber-wound rubber hose, could be seen leading off to all the ramifications of the trench, permitting the commander to communicate with any part of his section. It was a fighting position, and the commander pointed out his position coming and going to the guns. Two hours in the allotted time for a man to work the guns under fire. Then another man takes his place, and then another, with as much regularity as the force and exigencies of the fighting permit.

A squad of these men, in a trench battery, were immediately using their guns so as to get a good aim. The opening through which the muzzle of the gun projected was only five inches wide, sweeping the field east and west. Shell rails had been used for the protective armor, and the muzzle of the gun swung between an upper and lower rail of steel. The pit was low, requiring the men to bend double, and increasing the weariness of their task. There were hundreds of these guns at intervals, each giving off its bark and adding to the carnage and devastation ahead.

Returning the party passed the headquarters of General Humbert, and M. Painleve paused to call on the commander of the Third Army Corps. General Humbert is installed in a vast park, for his reserves are further back from the fighting front. The General has the student-like face of a Malthe, with spare, thin build. He talk turned on the splendid condition of the men, as M. Painleve and [illegible] observed them.

"Yes," said General Humbert "and let me give you an instance showing the morale of the men. There was an exposed position where it was necessary to send a man. Volunteers were called for as the place was swept by enemy fire, and it meant sure death. A man stepped forward immediately. He pushed forward to the exposed point and was shot dead. Then his companion stepped forward, and he, too, was shot dead. And then a third took his turn and fell, and a fourth, and then a fifth. Yes; five men, one after another, seeking just what had happened and knowing it meant certain death, each took their turn with absolute calmness. That is only a passing instance, but it shows the everlasting purpose of our men."

General Humbert's tribute only confirmed the impression made on every member of the party by this trip of inspection, covering several days, over hundreds of miles, to three army corps with the corps commanders leading the way to the very front looking out on Immortal Verdun back to the preparatory works and reserves. Everywhere the French Army was ready, abundant in men, ammunition and supplies, and with enormous resources still uncalled upon.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. E. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

WIT AND HUMOR

There is always room at the top, but the only elevator thither is toil and self-effort.

Marriage is indeed a failure when love grows cold before the bride gets all the rice out of her hair.

Auntie—"Are you getting marks at school, Freddie?" Freddie—"Yes, auntie, only I can't show 'em to you."

She—"So many men marry for money. You wouldn't marry me for money, would you, dearest?" He (absently)—"No, darling; I would not marry you for all the money in the world."

Snobby—"I had to give up me seat in the car to a vulgar Irish woman today, ye know." Colby—"Horrible! How was that?" Snobby—"She remarked to a friend that she did not expect a seat because all the fellows in the car were hard working men. I couldn't stand the imputation ye know."

"DER HERO."

(The following verses are taken from the Erin Echo, the monthly journal published by the men of the battleship Erin. Their breezy character suggests the work of a sailor.)

Hans Heilberg was braver more
Dan any man der vas;
All by himself he burn a church.
Undt gets der Iron Cross.

Some vimmen undt some children too,
Anoder day he shot,
Undt so, for making frightfulness,
Vunce more der Cross he got.

He flew to England von dark night,
Anoder cross to vin,
Undt killed some vimmen mit a bomb

System Was Full of Poison; Pains in Side and Back

Had Constipation For Many Years, But Was Entirely Cured by Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

The most common ailment and the greatest cause of disease and suffering to-day is constipation. Artificial food and sedentary indoor life combine to induce torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. As a result poisonous waste matter remains in the system and gives rise to pains and aches and affords a starting point for serious disease.

Infectious and contagious diseases are little known to persons whose liver, kidneys and bowels are kept in healthful activity, for there are no suitable conditions for disease germs to thrive in. Even common colds usually take their start when they find the system in a constipated, poisoned condition.

Mrs. Ed. Miller, West Flamboro, Ont., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have cured me of constipation. I suffered with constipation almost over since I can remember, and for four years had pains at the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit and rest. That, I think, was terrible for a woman of twenty years. The condition of my blood was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much from pains and stiffness in the back, I am sure my system was full of poison. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have entirely cured me, and I feel better than I have felt for many years."

As a cure for constipation Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills stand alone, for by their action on the liver they awaken the activity of this organ, cause a good flow of bile, and hence remove the cause of indigestion, for bile is nature's cathartic. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S ONE PIECE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

One of exacting taste will not find it difficult to become interested in this skirt, which, for all its attractive features, may be reproduced with just a modest demand upon one's time and energy. The pattern is so clear and accurate that "skill" does not enter into the matter, for the model is one really unaffected lines. This garment, No. 7795, is in one piece, made with a front and back yoke. At each side across the tops the skirt has three rows of shirring, one inch apart. If one prefers to have the fulness at this point unshirred, the shirring may be omitted and the under edge of the garment gathered instead. At each side of the front a backward turning plait is made and at each side of the back a fogward turning plait. These are features that aid in giving grace of line, the panel suggestion to the front and back being the result. The width of the lower edge is three yards.

You may obtain the pattern by sending coupon to the office of this publication.

The pattern is cut in sizes 24 to 30 inches waist measure. To make in size 26 will require 5½ yards of 36 inch material, with ¼ yard of 36 inch material for the yoke lining.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size or pattern required, and age of a child.

BOOTS AND SHOES PRETTY BUT COSTLY

Shoes and boots are unusually expensive this spring. Even an ordinary and unobtrusive pair of black or brown boots in good quality is quite likely to cost $10, and the salesman to whom one makes one's wail of protest smiles cheerfully and says: "Oh, yes, leather's going up on the jump. If the war lasts another year you'll be paying $14 for those boots."

But this matter of expense does not seem to enter into feminine calculations. If footwear is more expensive than usual it is also more attractive than usual, and womankind, from errand girl to heiress, is buying unpractical boots and shoes with a glad abandon that reeks not of a to-morrow. The errand girl does not pay $10 or $15 or $20 for her high top boots, but she chooses white boots or pearl boots or ivory boots just as the heiress does.

"THEY" ARE WEARING THEM

How is a girl to remember that light boots not immaculately fresh, shapely, perfect fitted on feet that will bear scrutiny are an offense against the laws of good taste? They are wearing light boots. That settles the question. The girl buys light boots and bids dull wisdom go hang.

One cannot blame her. They are so charming, those dainty boots and shoes and pumps with which the show cases and the windows of the shoe shops are filled. To be sure, the procession of feet, clad in such delicate gear and filing past the windows and in and out of the shops, is not quite so stimulating as the display under glass, but it's a strong minded woman who recognizes the short comings of her own feet and ankles.

There were white boots and shoes a-plenty before the spring, and other light coloured leathers have previously been used by the boot makers; but we have not had such variety in colour until now, and the makers have been extremely successful in their handling and combining of the new colours. The modish shoes of high quality are not, as a rule, bizarre unless one is to consider all departures from sober lines bizarre, but are really beautiful in colour and detail.

WHITE FIRST FAVOURITE

White is, of course, first favourite. It has for a long time been accepted for summer wear, and this past year has seen it sanctioned for winter wear as well and for association with dark street frocks as with light summer frocks. The good taste of this last innovation is debatable, but the thing is done and there's no denying that many of the white shoes of to-day are beautiful.

There are the old standbys, cotton and buckskin, and with them ranks a wash white leather that, like the others, is easily cleaned. Pumps, low shoes and boots are offered in all these materials and in varying degrees of dressings from the rubber-soled heelless sport shoe to the French heeled, thin soled dress boot or shoe.

Less practical than these, but more elegant, are boots, shoes and pumps of the finest white leather, almost as soft and flexible as glove kid. Handled by an artist such leather makes wonderful boots and shoes, but they are an extravagance not only because of their initial cost, but also because they stretch and lose shape readily and are with difficulty kept fresh.

Still they are ideal in their way and there are many boots and shoes in leather of the same sort, but in other colours that are quite as likeable. Ivory and pearl gray are exceedingly popular. So is burnt ivory, which is a lovely soft tone, dark enough to give better service than the ivory and pearl and white, yet soft and dainty.

One of the most successful colours of the season is the field mouse grey which is greatly used both alone and in combination with white. It is a medium grey with a greenish tone and a dash of brown in it, showing soil easily, inconspicuous, yet distinctly chic.

Shapes are much as they have been except that some of the most exclusive shoe houses are using very moderate heels on most of their walking shoes, heels considerably lower than the ordinary Cuban and in many cases are giving walking and sports shoes and boots genuine mannish heels.

The English cut is provided for women who want it, but so long have women worn absurd heels that change to a heelless sports shoe or even to a mannish heel and low arch often causes serious foot trouble breaking down of arches, etc. To meet this situation, which last summer's fad of low-heeled and heelless shoes made acute, some of the best makers have experimented with models which, while offering a rational low heel that will not throw the foot forward into the toes of the shoe still provide a fair arch, and some of these models are both shapely and comfortable.

ONE LEATHER BEST

Sports shoes of white buckskin trimmed in narrow lines of field mouse gray. African brown or other colour are good looking, particularly the grey and white combinations, and successful things are done also in white and colour throughout the dress shoes and boots, but the most elegant of the high boots are unquestionably those entirely in one leather and exquisite of quality, colour shaping and finish.

Patent leather (black) is much used in combination with white and colour, and the russet and tan leathers are also cleverly combined with white, though the most attractive of the tan shoes are in one tone, with buckles of metal coloured to match the leather and picked out with gold. These russet brown enamel and gold buckles are new and immensely smart, but buckles of all kinds seem to be in favour for low shoes; the pumps are often left quite plain save for some clever cutting and shaping of the leather, by which uppers and vamps met at the front, or some narrow line of trimming in contrasting colour along the seams and emphasized in front.

The shoe with three little buckled straps in front, a model introduced last season, is popularized this season. One sees few eccentricities in lacing the high boots. The handsomest boot laces in front or buttons and the side and back lacings seem to have gone with yesterday.

Ques.: "What does your pay-roll amount to?"

Ans.: "Oh, say $10,000 a month."

Ques.: "Quite a wad. Of course you insure it?"

Ans.: "Insure it? What's the idea Frank?"

Ques.: "Well—you see, you're paying out $120,000 a year. Now you insure your building, equipment, stock, etc., why not insure your pay-roll against loss—to you."

Ans.: "Ask me something easy. What's the point and what's the cost?"

Ques.: "The point is that your pay-roll represents your purchase of the greatest of all raw materials—WORKING TIME. Its subject to loss every day—four times a day—or every time your employees come in and go out of your plant."

Ans.: "Yes, but I employ a time-keeper."

Ques.: "Of course you do. But he's human. Who checks your time-keeper? And who checks the man who checks him? You need a cold-blooded machine for that job—as there will be no favorites or no mistakes."

Ans.: "There isn't any such machine."

Ques.: "Isn't there? Probably your keenest competitor to-day is using it and is just that much ahead of you. And it will cost you perhaps $3 a month to use it. I mean the International Time Recorder. It's the cheapest and best pay-roll insurance you can buy. Gives you printed, unchangeable, records, made under lock and key, that become your weekly pay-sheets. If you want real, inside facts and figures on the system exactly suited to your business write International Time Recording Co., corner McGill and Notre Dame streets, Montreal, or to their Head Office, Anderson Street, Toronto, for latest folders and prices."

FARM AND GARDEN.

The greatest feeding value in skim milk is always found in feeding it to young animals.

A good rule is always to keep the calf a little hungry. This will keep the appetite keen.

Soft shelled eggs are often caused by fowls being confined, becoming overfat and from lack of mineral matter.

It pays well to look after the colts. Those who have but a few head of young stock are not in shape to lose one, and those who have a good deal of money tied up in them should be very careful as to their well being.

A teaspoonful of nitrate of soda applied around cabbage, cauliflower, tomato or lettuce soon after the plants are set is universally regarded as a good practice, unless the soil is well provided with nitrogen.

Damson plums and plum butter are two old fashioned country products, but the great drawback to the old-fashioned damson is that the fruits are so small it takes a long time to pick a bushel. For that reason the Shropshire damson has become popular because the fruits are much larger.

To fasten loose handles in cheats of drawers apply some powdered alum warmed in an iron spoon.

If silk handkerchiefs and ribbons are washed in salt water and ironed wet the best results will be obtained.

Review: The Philippian Christians. Reading Lesson; Philippians 1:11; 4:1-2.

Golden Text: Finally, brethren whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. Phil. 4:8.

The following questions may be used as an original lesson or as a review of the twelve preceding lessons.

April 2. Conversion of Saul, Acts 9:1-31.

Golden Text. Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners of whom I am chief.—1. Tim. 1-15.

1. Verses 17, 18. Did Saul at this time receive the Holy Spirit or at the times of his conversion, and when do Christians generally receive Him?

April 9. Aeneas and Dorcas. Acts 9:32-43.

2. Verses 33, 34. What reason is there to believe that some people are sick by the special dispensation of God?

April 16. Peter and Cornelius. Acts 10:1-23.

Golden Text: There is no distinction between Jew and Greek; for the same Lord is lord of all, and is rich unto all that call upon Him.—Rom. 10:12.

3. Verses 1, 2. Can you give any reason why God to-day is not as well pleased with a God-fearing Roman Catholic as He is with a God-fearing Protestant? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

April 23. Easter Lesson, The Risen Christ. I. Cor. 15:1-28.

Golden Text. Now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the first fruit of them that are asleep. I. Cor. 15:20.

4. Verse 7. What proof did Jesus give at His various appearances after his resurrection that it was really Himself that they saw?—Acts 15:1-35.

April 30.—Peter delivered from Prison. Acts 12:1-19.

Golden Text, The angel of Jehovah encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them. Psalm 34:7.

them. Psalm 34:7.

5. Verses 6-10. Would you say or not, and why, that a miraculous deliverance such as that of Peter, is possible now?

May 7. The Missionaries of Antioch. Acts 11:19:30; 12:25; 13:12.

6. Verses 19-21. If all preachers now were filled with the Holy Spirit would the same results follow their ministry as in those days? Give your reasons.

May 14. Lo, we turn to the Gentiles. Acts 13:13-52.

Golden Text. I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 13:47.

7. Verse 15. Why is it that so many of our present day church services are so stiff and formal, compared to the services in this synagogue?

May 21. The Cripple of Lystra. Acts 14.

Golden Text: He giveth power to the faint, and to him that hath no might He increaseth strength. Isa. 40:29.

8. Verse 8. To what extent may parents be blamed for the physical or the moral defects of their children?

May 28. The Council at Jerusalem.—Acts 15:1-35.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

"Women's feet," it is asserted, "are growing every day." This may be Providence's kindly method of preventing the ladies from becoming top-heavy.

A Tasty Summer "Snack"

for the warm days when the appetite craves "something different" for luncheon, for picnics or any kind of outdoor excursion is Triscuit, the Shredded Whole Wheat Wafer. It is made of the whole wheat steam-cooked, shredded and baked. Toast it in the oven to restore its crispness and spread over it butter, soft cheese or marmalade. Its snappy, tasty aroma is a delight to the palate, supplying the greatest amount of nutriment in smallest bulk. A deliciously wholesome toast. It is ready-cooked, easily carried, is strengthening and satisfying.

French Take The Offensive In The Fighting Around Verdun

Berlin Report This Afternoon States That Three French Attacks Were Repulsed--Violent Fighting Has Been Resumed on All Sectors of the Verdun Front---German Attacks at a Number of Points Were Completely Stopped By the French.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (French Official), June 23.—Violent fighting on all sectors of the Verdun front continued throughout last night, the War Office announced to-day.

The Germans attacked with great violence west and south of Fort Vaux, using as asphyxiating shells. West of the Meuse they renewed the attack on Hill 304, the dominating height northwest of Verdun.

Two German attacks on Hill 304, led by grenade detachments were speedily checked by French quick-firers. Lively infantry engagements also occurred around Avocourt and Dead Man's Hill. East of the Meuse the activity extended from the river bank to Moulainville.

In the Champagne region desperate fighting with bayonets occurred. Near Mount Tetu the Germans attacked three times, but each time were repulsed in bayonet and grenade fighting. Near Eparges a feeble German attack failed.

BERLIN, June 23.—Repulse of three French attacks west of Fort Vaux was reported by the War Office this afternoon.

This indicates the French are on the offensive near Verdun.

PTE. STEPHEN CURTIS, a local member of the 8th C.M.R., who had a narrow escape at Zillibeke.

CORP. WM. ALLEN, a Peterborough boy who left here with the 39th Battalion, and is officially reported admitted to hospital suffering from shell shock.

Allies On Offensive At Several Points

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, June 23.—Berlin official statements to-day indicate that the Allies have assumed minor offensive operations at several points on the western front, notably at Ypres, where the Canadians are, and at various parts of the Champagne, Vosges, and near Verdun.

Berlin maintains that all attacks on the German positions were repulsed, but the fact that the Allies were able to take the initiative possibly indicates the commencement of an offensive by the Allies, that will take the advantage of the tremendous influence of the Russian successes.

200 Lives Lost In Sinking of Mercury

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 23.—More than 200 lives were lost in the sinking of the Russian steamer Mercury by a mine in the Black Sea, according to Petrograd despatches to-day. The vessel went down in a few minutes. The few boats launched were overturned in a choppy sea.

Ammunition For Allies Requisitioned For U. S.

Examiner Special:

SHAMOKIN, Pa., June 23.—Sixteen carloads of ammunition consigned to a New York port for the Allies was requisitioned in Northumberland yards to-day by army officers of the United States. The cars were immediately rerouted to Buffalo, where they will be sent to the arsenal at Fort Worth, Texas.

Germans Were Driven Out By Fusiliers

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 22.—The Germans succeeded in entering some British trenches near Givenchy, but were driven out by the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, who inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. The official report says:

"Early this morning (Thursday) the enemy exploded an exceptionally large mine in the neighbourhood of Givenchy, just north of La Bassee Canal. The explosion was followed by a hostile bombardment of our trenches, under cover of which the enemy entered our trenches on a narrow front. Troops of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers immediately delivered a very gallant and successful counter-attack, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and driving him completely out of our positions. Considering the size of the mine and the intensity of the fire, our total casualties were comparatively light. Since then the situation in this neighbourhood has been quiet.

"Farther south duroing the night (Wednesday) we exploded a mine in the neighbourhood of the Hohenzollern redoubt and occupied the lip of the crater.

"To-day (Thursday) passed quietly everywhere. Southeast of Armentieres our artillery was successful in silencing enemy guns which were shelling behind our lines near the Ploegsteert wood.

"Yesterday (Wednesday) in the air there was a marked decrease in activity by the enemy, while our machines carried out a great deal of successful work in co-operation with the artillery."

GARDEN FETE AT "ENGLEBURN" WAS A FINE SUCCESS

The garden fete at "Engleburn," the home of Judge Huycke, Ashburnham, yesterday afternoon and evening proved a delightful social and financial success. The grounds were beautifully decorated and illuminated affording a splendid setting which hundreds of young people and their parents and friends enlivened in a graceful effort to add a few comforts for the men of the 93rd Battalion. The affair was arranged and carried out by the members of Otonabee chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, of which Mrs. Huycke is regent. She and Judge Huycke threw open their home with its expanse of lawn and with an eagerness to assist, that accounted largely for the evening's success. The proceeds aggregate about $200, and Mrs. J. A Aylmer, treasurer of Otonabee chapter, said this afternoon that the expenses had not been heavy, as most of the work had been contributed and the articles were for the most part donated. Bridge and afternoon tea, a very pleasing Maypole dance performed by a number of girls who had been coached by Miss English, games, "fish pond," "gypsy encampment" and many bazaar features all added to the variety of the entertainment that interested the guests. Among them were members of the County Council, who accepted the invitation that Judge Huycke had personally conveyed. With so many assistants it is scarcely necessary to mention those who made this fete the success it was, but the generous and gracious hospitality of Judge and Mrs. Huycke may properly be mentioned, and with the fruitful labours of the members of Otonabee chapter will be deeply appreciated by the 93rd Battalion.

REFUGEES GIVEN A BATH.

Steamer Brings 1,700 Who Fled From Serbia, Albania and Armenia.

New York, June 22.— For seven hours the quarantine officials on Tuesday wrestled with the problem of separating the unclean from the still less clean on board the steamship Dante Alighieri, of the Transatlantica Italiana Line, which arrived here from Naples, and did not allow the steamship to proceed to her pier in Jersey City until 130 of the 1,700 immigrants had been taken off and sent to Hoffman Island for observation and a general cleaning up. Not one of them, the health officer said, was suffering from any real ailment other than filthiness.

Of the 1,700 steerage passengers 800 were refugees from Serbia, Albania, Greece, Syria and Armenia, and it was from their number that the candidates for Hoffman Island were recruited.

THE U. S. MITITIA BEING HURRIED TO THE BORDER

As Fast as They can be Equipped National Guard is Being Sent South—Chairman Hays Begins His Fight in the House.

REPUBLICANS CRITICIZE

WASHINGTON, June 23. — Secretary of War Baker this afternoon issued orders to every department commander to send his militia forces to the border as rapidly as he can equip them.

Washington, June 23.—With the Republicans, led by Republican Mann, demanding explicit expression from the President, as to his reasons for sending the militia to the border with power to order them into Mexico, Chairman Hay of the House Military Affairs Committee, this afternoon, began his fight to make the national guard actually a Federal force.

Declaring the action would not constitute a declaration of war, nor an admission that a state of war exists, Hay brought up the matter immediately on the convening of the House. He asked the House to consent to changes in the resolution in effect, placing on Congress the responsibility for drafting the militia.

Committee On Roads And Bridges Report

List of Items to Be Attended to During Rest of Summer

The report of the Roads and Bridges Committee was presented to the County Council this morning by Reeve Walsh of Douro and adopted as follows:

That the County Treasurer be authorised to pay to the Township of Otonabee one-half of the cost of rebuilding Taylor's Bridge, upon a statement being furnished by the Township of such expenditure.

That the recommends set out in the report of the Chairman re Monaghan Bridges be carried into effect.

'CASTLE KEHOE' FOOLED 'EM.

How Ottawa Prisoner of War Told Truth Despite Censor.

Ottawa, June 23. — "We are used fine here — as well as we would be at Castle Kehoe." The foregoing, written by an Ottawa soldier in a German internment camp, probably got by the Kaiser's censors as a boost for prison conditions. It is a clever evasion, however, for Castle Kehoe is the local name for the Ottawa Jail.

WHAT THEY FAILED TO TELL COL. WILLIAMS

Lt-Col. Williams came to Peterborough last night to get suggestions in regard to recruiting and looking back at the meeting in the Council Chamber one is struck by the fact that some of the speakers have not been keeping very closely in touch with current events. These gentlemen said in effect that recruiting was at a standstill in Peterborough, that all the men that could be secured by voluntary enlistment had been obtained. Surely the speakers who made such statements have been neglecting their daily newspapers, and it is unfortunate that Colonel Williams should be allowed to go away, thinking that Peterborough has thrown up her hands in the matter of recruiting. Do these gentlemen know that in the past three weeks over one hundred citizens of Peterborough have offered their services to the Empire? Do they know that since the 93rd Battalion left Peterborough twenty recruits have been secured for that battalion, fifteen for the Queen's Field Ambulance, and fifteen for the 74th Field Battery? Do they know that in the same period fifteen Peterborough men have joined the 235th at Bowmanville, and ten more the two drafts of the Cobourg Heavy Battery? Do they know that twenty Peterborough men have joined the Army Service Corps, and that fifteen more are awaiting instructions in regard to that unit? And do they realize that all this was accomplished without a single meeting being held, without a solitary speech being made, without advertising, without anything but the services of a few men in khaki? Why in the face of such a fine showing in a period when recruiting has slackened throughout the division, citizens who should be in touch with the situation should make such statements is hard to understand. Why any one should calmly say that voluntary enlistment has come to an end in Peterborough when over 100 men have offered their services in three weeks without any special effort being made is a mystery to The Examiner.

And why in the name of common sense, with Colonel Williams, the chief recruiting officer for the Dominion here to receive suggestions, not one man at the meeting advised the authorization of another battalion for Peterborough is an even deeper mystery. The success of the 93rd Battalion has been glorious. In no other way could Peterborough County have raised in the same time anything like the number of men that were secured for that unit. But not a speaker suggested to Colonel Williams the advisability of the continuance of the scheme that has proved so successful by authorizing another battalion.

Voluntary enlistment is not dead in Peterborough. This city can hold her head up with any in the Dominion from a recruiting standpoint. The valor of her sons is proven daily, sadly but gloriously by the casualty lists. Many other gallant lads are on their way to the field of honour. Many more yet in mufti will follow them.

The Examiner would like to say to Colonel Williams on behalf of Peterborough what last night's speakers failed to say, "Authorize another battalion for Peterborough. We have raised the 93rd and we're proud of it, officers and men. Give us a chance to duplicate this fine battalion. We'll organize the county like the political parties do at election times. Every polling sub-division in the city and county will have its committee working under the central body. We'll hold meetings everywhere and often, and We'll follow them up industriously. We'll get in behind the battalion in city and county, and we'll use every available means to secure men. We are willing to try. Will you see that we get the chance?"

That's what last night's meeting should have told Colonel Williams.

THE 93rd BATTALION SOCCER TEAM HAS YET TO BE BEATEN

Peterboro' Soldiers Cleaned Up 109th of Lindsay 6 to 0 and Also Whitewashed the School of Infantry--Five Straight Wins For the 93rd---Army Service Corps Recruits Asked to Report To-morrow Morning---Barrielield Items and To-day's General Military News.

BARRIEFIELD, June 23.—With one-sided victories over the 130th of credit and having rolled up a score Smith's Falls, the 146 of Kingston and the 156 of Brockville to their credit and having rolled up a score of 26 goals to nil in three games the 93rd Battalion soccer team added to their laurels last night when they administered a scientific trimming to the 109th at Lindsay, beating Sir Sam Hughe's fellow townsmen by six goals to nil.

The 93rd losing the toss Shackleford set the ball in motion for the 109th, rushing toward the other end. Marsh cleared, Williams getting possession run the ball over the line. The corner was well placed by J. Williams. West shot in, Gledall clearing. Hartshorn got away along the wing and centered, the ball being returned by Yates. King next took a shot at goal, the ball going wide. Stockdale receiving a pass from Hartshorn, handed on to West, that player hitting the bar. A rush by the 109th was well stopped by Hardie. Robinson cleared finely from Birchall. King and Scott both missed a fine opportunity to score, from a pass by Stockdale. Marsh in clearing his own line put the ball over conceding a corner, which was well placed by Coulton. Williams getting away was pulled up by Yates, 109th rushing down the field West rebound with a long kick, after Williams shooting over, King headed into goal which was cleared by Williams at the expense of a corner. Shaw taking the kick placed nicely into goal. Hartshorn shooting outside. McDermid taking a crack at goal shot wide. From a pass by West Hartshorn centered. King headed in a beauty, drawing first blood for the 93rd.

From the kick off. 109th made traces towards the other end, Robinson returning, passing out to Williams for that player to centre, Hartshorn putting the ball through for No. 2. Robinson clearing a rush, passed on to Williams who centred to Hartshorn, the ball passing in front of goal, King and Shaw both missing the goal from close in. Shaw shot wide from a centre by Stockdale. From the throw in Hardie headed into goal and had luck in not scoring, King taking a pass from West shot into goal Yates clearing. Hardie placing nicely into goal on a foul throw in by Laidlaw, King headed into goal the ball just missing the bar.

The 109th through Goggins made towards the other end. Marsh relieving the pressure, Stockdale passing out to King, result goal No. 3. West taking a free kick from a foul against the 109th placed the ball well into goal. Gledall clearing with a fine kick. Hardie after robbing his man, shot outside. Norman who was playing fine ball passed out to King who shot outside. West cleared in great shape when hard pressed, passed on to King who missed an open goal Soon after King getting the ball when close in, shot hard into goal, Williams clearing, Stockdale coming through ran the ball over the line, as the whistle blew for half time, with

TWO MORE LOCAL NAMES APPEAR ON HONOUR ROLL

Corp. Wm. Allen, Formerly of the 39th Battalion and Pte. Frank McKnight of the Mounted Rifles Are Officially Reported Wounded

LIST GROWS DAILY

Peterborough's roll of honour is steadily increasing. Two more casualties reported this morning, bring the total Peterborough list from the first of the month up to fifty names.

Mrs. Eva Allen, 174 Antrim street received a wire from Ottawa this morning, notifying her that her husband, Corp. Wm. Allen, has been admitted to hospital in Aberdeen, Scotland, suffering from shell shock as the result of the recent big fight. Corp. Allen, who is a son of Mr. Herbert Allen, Morrow Street, is a well-known Peterborough boy who enlisted here early in 1915 with the 39th Battalion. Like Gunner Fred Lebar, reported in yesterday's list, Corp Allen was, before the war, a member of the Bugle Band of the 57th Regiment. When the 39th went overseas he was transferred to the 25th Battalion, with eleven other boys from Peterborough, six of which have already appeared on the casualty list. Corp. Allen was born in Peterborough and has a wide circle of friends who will wish him a speedy recovery.

PTE. McKNIGHT.

Mrs Sarah McKnight, 804 Concession Street, was officially notified this morning that No. 110311, Pte. Frank McKnight, Canadian Mounted Rifles, is reported admitted to No. 4 Field Ambulance on June 3, suffering from contusion and abrasion of the head and face. Pte. McKnight, who was born in Canada, enlisted here with D Squadron, 8th C.M.R., early last year and went overseas with that unit.

MASSED BANDS AT VICTORIA PARK

To-night's Concert Should Be Most Enjoyable Event

The concert by the massed bands of the 57th Regiment and the 93rd Battalion in Victoria Park to-night under the direction of Lieut. Gliddon and Bandmaster Hughes promises to be one of the most enjoyable events of the year. The bands will meet at the park instead of at the Conservatory of Music as announced yesterday and all members of the 57th Regiment Band are asked to bring music stands with them. The massed bands will render the following programme:

The National Anthem
March—"Triumphal."
Overture—"Raymond."
Cornet solo—"Sing Me to Sleep."
Bandmaster Hughes
Selection—"The Gaiety Girl."
Selection—"H.M.S. Pinafore."
Vocal Waltz—"Eileen Alannah."
March—"Selected."

Will Hold Round Table Conference

Net Result of the Special Meeting That Was Held Last Evening in the Council Chamber—Lieut.-Col. Williams Presides—A Galaxy of Local Speakers.

QUEBEC AN ISSUE

Lieut.-Col. C. G. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for the Dominion of Canada, was the chief speaker at a special meeting that was held last evening in the City Council chamber. Col. Williams did not emphasize registration or conscription. He came to ascertain the feeling of the community and obtain suggestions relative to recruiting all of which will be embodied in a report that will subsequently find its way to the Militia Department and at a later date will form the subject of a round table conference that will be held in Kingston. Representatives from the city and country will be present and an effort will be made to arrive at some plan that will stimulate recruiting. Col. Williams commented upon the apparent discrepancy respecting enlistment in the rural sections as compared with that of the urban centres. He based his observations on the results as shown by the attestation papers. Several speakers attempted to answer this question. Many of those present were of the opinion that Quebec constituted an issue in the present recruiting scheme. "Why do not the Canadian born respond as freely as the British Born?" was one of the questions asked by Col. Williams.

There was a large representation of local and county interests, including a delegation from the County Council.

His Worship Mayor Duffus was nominated to the position of chairman while Mr. Basil Hall was appointed secretary.

THE BEST DIVISION.

Lieut.-Col Cecil G. Williams who was the first speaker, said that as Chief Recruiting Officer for the Dominion, he was commissioned to go from province to province and discuss recruiting problems. The division best equipped to-day and the one that had turned out the most men was the 2nd military division. This was due to organization.

"We are all agreed upon the nature of the struggle and the only issue that can take place," said Col Williams. A few things stand out in relief. When the Germans retreated with such precipitate haste from the gates of Paris we lacked sufficient men and munitions to keep them on the run. The same can be said of the Gallipoli and other campaigns inaugurated since the outbreak of the present war. In listening to our manufacturers who were in conference the other day, I find that it is only now that we are able to compete with the Germans. Present day events go to show that the Germans to-day are magnificently equipped. Roughly speaking the population of the Dominion is estimated at eight million people. The exclusion of Quebec would leave six million people. Men of all nationalities of a military age is estimated at one and a half millions. The Canadian lists alone represent a population of 670,000 men of military age and out of this number only 74,000 have joined the colours. With the population of the Dominion about equally divided between the city and country we have only twenty-five thousand enlistments in the country as against three hundred and ten thousand in the city. Scan the casualty list and in the majority of cases you will find that the next of kin is to be found in England, Ireland or Scotland. This situation is changing to-day but not to the extent that you would think.

A LONG STRUGGLE

"The struggle will be a long one, admonished the speaker. The mothers of Germany are sending out the sons in defence of the Fatherland just as the mothers of this Empire are doing and with the same confidence. For one thing I do not think the farmers thoroughly understand the situation. I attended a Synod meeting the other day and was struck with an address delivered by Rev. Dr Haslam of India. The people in India realize that this is a war of right against wrong despite the fact that the country has been flooded with German literature

THE MEXICAN TROUBLE.

If war, as seems imminent, breaks out between the United States and Mexico, it will be a triumph for German intrigue, and an evidence of the futility of President Wilson's policy of inaction. It has long been an open secret that German agents here been busy in Mexico in the endeavour to stir up a war between that country and the United States, and so tying the hands of the most powerful of the "neutral sympathizers" with the Entente Allies, and preventing the continuous supply of munitions of war to the allied forces.

One would think that the war would not amount to much; it should not be a serious matter for a country of 100 millions of highly civilized and industrially well organized people to overcome a people of 15 millions of low standard of civilization, whose enterprise is of the "to-morrow" kind, and who have for years been weakened and torn asunder by civil war. But there is fear that history may repeat itself. The Boer war, against a handful of Boers, perhaps fewer than a million, proved more serious than a rout; it kept the whole power of the British Empire busy for three years, and it is not probable that the defeat of Mexico, which must be the outcome, will be a light or a short bit of work for Uncle Sam. The United States newspapers, which at the opening of the Boer war, when "I regret to report" was the regular opening of the reports of officers at the front to the war office, made merry over the initial reverses of the British arms at the hands of the Boers, may now have a demonstration that a brave and fighting people, on their own soil, can put up a mighty stiff defence for a time.

The war with Mexico will not likely arouse a great deal of popular enthusiasm in the United States, for the country, except at the border, will not be seriously menaced. The war, however, may influence the presidential election; may have an effect on President Wilson's chances. He will be held by many, as perhaps he should be held, responsible for the war. He could not have been ignorant that Germany was active in creating trouble in Mexico; he might have dealt with firm hand with both Germany and Mexico. He took the course that would naturally bring the factions of Mexico together against a common enemy. By sending troops to Mexico without leave to hunt down Villa, President Wilson precipitated the present situation. Whether his action in this regard was the proper one to pursue will be for the electors of the United States to judge at the pending election.

It is to be sincerely hoped that the war will be averted, that the efforts of the Entente Allies to prevent formal hostilities, will be successful. The United States is our good neighbour and its people are largely of our blood, and our ideals of civilization and humanity. Both will be polluted if a war, which must be largely of a guerilla character, affording opportunity for the atrocities which the Mexican bandits will be capable of committing.

PREMATURE CHICKEN CENSUS

It may be a contiguance of the Gotham bravado that has been employed since the war began, or it may be talking to the German gallery—the starved and starving people of Germany. We read in despatches that certain German interests are distributing the spoil, as they think it should be done after the war. They are counting their chickens before they are hatched. Even the German Chancellor, Bethman-Hollweg, is declaring himself utterly opposed to the annexation of Belgium by Germany. He should know that Germany will not have a word to say about Belgium after the war. Premier Asquith has laid down, in very plain words, the decision of Britain and all her allies in regard to Belgium. His memorable words cannot be too often quoted and read. They form the basis of the solidly-united action of the Entente Allies. They have the inspiration of every fighting unit and every fighting man in the growing armies of the Entente Allies, and voice the demand of all the peoples composing the Entente Allies. They form the foreground of every outlook upon peace terms of settlement of the Entente Allies. These are the words of Premier Asquith:

> "We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed."

In reference to Germany's say in making peace, the last words of this pronouncement come first—"until the military despotism of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed." When Germany's power for evil is wholly and finally destroyed, as it will be before the Entente Allies sheathe the sword, Germany's wishes and demands, in moulding the terms of peace will be as the idle winds that pass unheeded.

The German Chancellor may talk of the fate of Belgium and of the loving kindness of Germany. He and his kind may discuss the disposition of Alsace and Lorraine, at the end of the war. These idle vapourings are certainly founded on no hope of German success; they form part of the play to hearten the discouraged people of Germany; to feed them with ideas that Germany is going to conquer in this war, and be in a position to dictate the terms of peace, and the division of the spoil.

This scheme is adopted with the hope of reconciling the German people to their sufferings from the growing fact and menace of starvation; to allay the popular discontent that has long been seething below the surface, and will before long, break bounds. The ruling despots will not be able to long conceal the real truth from the German people—the truth that Prussian militarism is doomed; that the power to override weaker nations, the power to oppress her own people, will be broken like a potter's vessel. That's what the Entente Allies are fighting for. They are in reality fighting for the liberty of the German people; for their freedom from the oppression of a despotic militarism. The German people will have never been so fortunate and happy as they will be when the Entente Allies shall so weaken or overthrow the militarism of Germany that it will be too weak, too broken, to resist the people's demand for the people's rights.

This condition is rapidly drawing nigh; its arrival will depend upon the mighty efforts that the Entente Allies must make to end the war in the interests of world-wide justice and right; in the interests of freedom and of the principles of God's Christianity. The Entente Allies have large armies, but the intensive struggle that will mark the end will create great wastage of men, and we must all provide others to fill the ranks. Canadians must act as if their forces were the only forces available for waging the fight. If we do our share, as others are doing their share, Canada will have a voice in deciding the conditions of the peace her brave soldiers will have helped to win.

THE REACTION OF CANADIAN OPINION.

The splendid showing of the Liberal party in the Nova Scotia election this week is a reminder of the remarkable strength which the party as a whole is showing throughout the Dominion. Provincial elections are held to be a pretty good index of the political feeling in the various parts of the Dominion, and every provincial election which has been held since the present federal Government went into power on a flag-flapping issue is evidence of a reaction of public opinion.

When the present Premier took up office there were four province out of nine with Liberal Governments — Quebec, Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan and Alberta. In each of these provinces the Liberal majority has since been augmented. In Manitoba, where the Conservatives considered themselves impregnably entrenched, the administration has passed by an overwhelming majority to the Liberals. There are signs that some, if not all of the other provinces will follow suit.

For instance, in British Columbia, where the Legislature was solidly Conservative, the reaction in public opinion has been such that the Premier has gone out of office, and his disorganized forces, when they held by-elections, had two of their Ministers beaten by Liberals. This is only a preliminary. In Prince Edward Island the Liberals have reduced the Conservative majority of four. In New Brunswick the Conservative Premier has been forced to resign at the demand of Liberals indignant at the kind of administration that was given, and only lately, when the Government tried the pulse of the people with an election in Westmoreland, a Conservative stronghold, their Minister was defeated. In Ontario the Liberals have likewise gained in by-elections. In fact, if present signs go for anything the Liberal party, at the next Federal election, will be in the ascendancy in eight out of nine of the provinces.—Montreal Herald.

THE PETTICOAT MEN IN RELATION TO THE RECRUITING PROBLEM

Recruiting is the most important thing before the public to-day. It is not only a moral question, and a social question, and a political question, and an economic question, and a lot of other questions, but it is a life and death question, and the strange part of the whole problem is that, like the people before the flood, when Noah kept on warning, while he constructed the ark, the people pay not the slightest attention.

They do not seem to understand that the passing of a conscription bill in Great Britain means that every available man is needed for service, and that the last measures are necessary to obtain the last man. The men of Canada are needed just as much as the men of Great Britain. If there be any foundation to the boasts of empire and patriotism which were so lavishly uttered in time of peace, those words stand now as lurid reproach against all who use them, who do not make them good in acts. Nor are they less a reproach to the whole country.

We are not concerned with any part of the country but Ontario at present, otherwise much might be said which it is to be desired might be left unsaid, but here in Ontario we must leave nothing undone to complete our fair share of the task laid upon us. Statistics of the census returns indicate that the military population of Canada of military age is 1,720,070. That less than one-third of those could be called upon to take service in the cause of liberty and humanity, when every man in Great Britain is lined up with the flag, is not laying too heavy a burden upon us.

Ontario has 582,246 of these, or had at the last census. Between 1911 and 1914 there had been a considerable increase in Toronto's residents. At any rate there is no reason why the quota required to complete the battalions now recruiting should not be supplied immediately. An effort is being made to do this before the end of the month. Is it asking too much of the big business establishments of the city to get the matter before their eligible employees? Many of them have done more than well and have by precept and example shown their men what they should do. But there are still many which have not done much and some have done nothing.

We appealed to the women yesterday. We appeal to the men to-day, who have the opportunity and the authority, to make it possible to let the women who are capable and willing take the place of men who ought to be in the ranks. Any man who is filling a woman's place should be informed of the fact, and he should be given to understand that he is supplanting a petticoat.

These petticoat men are not bad fellows if they only understood. They do not seem to be alive to the tremendous responsibility which they share. One large banking institution in the city has 600 men in the ranks, and many women have been taken on to assist in the work. Other institutions could do a great deal in this way, and such occupations as can be carried on by women should be barred to men in this most critical time.

There will be another year of the war, and during that time if we cannot muster all the necessary reserves, there is no guarantee that we shall not be defeated by some new development in the ever-shifting phases of human destiny. Even on our own continent the clouds are none too gilded, and they may be black and lowering before a year's end.

In time of the greatest war in the world's history we need every man who can pass the doctor. Those who do not take their places in the ranks of that first duty of a loyal citizen, the protection of his country, his women folk and children, are but poor citizens.—Toronto World.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

"The Rules for Canada" is a revision of the Boy Scout Booklet: "Policy, Organization and Rules" to suit Canadian Boy Scouts Association and has the approval of the Committee of the Headquarter's Council, London, England. Copies are being distributed throughout each province. One of the outstanding features of the new rules is that the minimum age limit for boys joining the Boy Scouts Association is raised from eleven to twelve years. This change had been advocated by many leaders for some years, but those in authority have been reluctant about putting it into effect until some provision had been made for the younger boys. The complete adoption of the Wolf Club movement for Canada however, overcomes the difficulty. The Wolf Club are boys between the ages of nine and twelve years.

A new section which every Schoolmaster will no doubt appreciate is the inclusion in the rule book of the ceremonial for the investure of a tenderfoot Scout. This is illustrated by drawing and is quite complete. Under the qualifications for second class Scouts, the old rule requiring a Scout to have twenty-five cents in a saving bank has been dispensed with. A first-class Scout must now have one dollar to his credit in a savings bank. A new rule with reference to proficiency badges reads: "Candidates should be first-class Scouts, but second class Scouts may qualify for, and wear not more than six proficiency badges." It is obvious that the rule has been made in order to stimulate interest in Scouts for the first-class badges. The "health and sanitation" paragraph in the old ambulance test has been transferred to the test for the Missioner badge. The rules respecting the Forestry, Surveyor's and Prospector's badges have been entirely reconstructed. A provision has been put in the "Boatman's" badge rule for proficiency in canoeing. Entirely new tests are laid down for the Basket Workers, Blacksmith and Carpenter badges, and minor changes and additions have been made in the requirements for the Clerk, Cook, Dairyman, Fireman, Friend to Animals, Horseman, Interpreter, Laundryman, Marksman, Pioneer and Plumber badges.

Lieut.-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell, in the last number of the Boy Scout Headquarters Gazette, makes an interesting contribution to the discussion which is now proceeding in England, of proposals looking to the more general development of military cadet training among boys. Under the caption: A Step That is Of Greater Importance Than Cadet Training, he is quoted as saying:

"In my own mind the boys of the country have a very definite place in the war—in the war that comes after this war—namely, in the struggle for industrial and commercial success which is going to raise our country out of the havoc brought about by the existing crisis, and which will consolidate for us to-morrow the results of victories won by our men in the field to-day, and will compensate for our losses.

"That war will be going on for the next ten or twenty years and will be won by the country whose citizens are then the best equipped in spirit and ability for their great work.

"To this end all our energies should be concentrated on training the rising generation to the fullest possible extent in individual character, technical efficiency, physical health. With this foundation they will make efficient citizens and equally, if need be, the most efficient soldiers.

"But to dress them up in khaki and to teach them to play as soldiers under the allurement of the existing war fever is, to my mind, to trifle with a very serious situation and with a very big national opportunity."

The Canadian Boy Scouts, apart from their useful services in aid of the war cause throughout the Dominion are doing their own bit in Flanders through the erection of a recreation hut in the Canadian Army Corps area. A fund of $1,000 is being raised in ten cent contributions towards this worthy cause. A very attractive acknowledgment card is being sent from the Headquarters Council in Ottawa to all contributing troops in the form of a sketch of the Boy Scouts' hut and ambulance behind the firing line, and bearing also the following: "With Cordial Thanks For What You Have Done for The Boy Scouts Hut and Ambulance Fund". Lieut.-Col. (Rev. Canon) Almon has accepted the general charge of the Canadian Boy Scout hut which provides recreation, good cheer and entertainment for the men fighting our cause overseas.

From a patriotic point of view it behooves us, if we are to hold our own in the future with those around us, that we should not waste a single man but that all should be efficient."

The foregoing words which recently fell from the lips of Lord Rosebery, the eminent British statesman, proclaim the very sentiments which are set forth in the aims and objects of the Boy Scout movement. Efficiency is the keynote of Boy Scout training. The boy is taught through Scouting to become a useful member of the community; by instruction in the various handicrafts he is helped to make a career for himself, and as a Boy Scout he becomes a member of an organized body which is trained to be of public service when required.

Lord Rosebery declares that the success of a nation depends not so much upon its armament as upon the character of its citizens. He says that our worst enemies are not foreigners outside, but the inefficients inside our own country. One of the principal objects of the Boy Scout movement is to try to prevent the present human wastage in the next generation, and to make every single boy an asset to the nation.

Speaking further along these lines, Lord Rosebery says: "If I were to form the highest ideal for my country it would be this—that it should be a nation of which the manhood was exclusively composed of men who had been or who were Boy Scouts and who were trained in the Boy Scouts theory. Such nation would be the honour of mankind. It would be the greatest moral force the world have ever known."

MUST BEAT FRANCE FIRST; THEN 'DEAL WITH ENGLAND'

LONDON, June 22.—The Berliner Tageblatt, in a recent issue, sets forth a new theory in regard to the Entente's refusal to discuss peace on the basis of the German terms. The Tageblatt says:

"So far as we are concerned our conscience is clear. We have repeatedly made offers of peace to our enemies. They have been obstinately refused by France in particular, the others merely following suit.

"The fact is that France is the dominating power of the Entente, the head and soul of the resistance. We must, therefore, beat France first of all and finally.

"That done, our hands will be free to deal with England, for there can be no end to the struggle until the soil of England herself, also, is saturated in the lifeblood of its people."

Minister of Agriculture Is Pleased

Present Brand of Weather Is Just What Is Needed Now, He Said

TORONTO, June 23.—Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, was "smiling all over" to-day, seeming to regard the present brand of sunshine and wind as a personal favour to him on the part of the Weather Man.

"We couldn't have had better weather if we had arranged it ourselves," was his way of expressing complete and unqualified approval of it. He approved not only of what has been served to-day, but also of that on the menu for to-morrow.

"We don't want it too hot at first," he remarked. "The present temperature, gradually getting warmer, is the thing. No frost, of course—warm nights are what we need; but not too warm until the present excess of moisture has gone, so that the ground will not get sour, nor bake too hard. Nor do we want it continually dry for any lengthy period. A little rain now and then for a while is necessary.

"Up north, I am told, they are in need of rain even now. Some sections of the Province have not been flooded as we have down here. Mr. Charles Bowman (M.P.P. for West Bruce), tells me that all through Grey and Bruce Counties the crops are in splendid condition."

"Did the change in the weather come soon enough to save the day?" Mr. Duff asked.

"Generally speaking, yes," said the Minister. "In some sections, I believe, it has come too late, but over the greater part of the Province a couple of weeks of fine weather now will make things all right."

GARDEN PARTY TRANSFERRED TO ARMOURIES

Norwood Register: The garden party under the auspices of the I.O.D.E., which was to have taken place at "Cessnock," the home of Mr. John Roxburgh, was transferred to the Armouries, owing to the unfavourable conditions of the weather. A very substantial supper was served at six o'clock, and, notwithstanding the weather, a great many turned out. The I.O.D.E. felt amply repaid for their efforts, as the results far exceeded their expectations, considering that on account of the change, there was missing the attraction of the band, also the delightful surroundings, which all would have enjoyed at "Cessnock."

After supper a very pleasing programme followed, consisting of patriotic songs, rendered by the school children, also flag drills and folk dances, which were all enthusiastically applauded.

The proceeds amounted to about $87.00 and the I.O.D.E. wish to heartily thank those who contributed so generously toward the supper, also those who assisted at the supper and evening's entertainment. The ready response was certainly appreciated, and the co-operation of all encourages them to further endeavours.

Patent Chicken Feed Is Mostly Ashes

CHATHAM, June 23.—High Constable George Peters has received numerous complaints from residents of Dover Township that a person is selling a chicken feed in that vicinity which on analysis has been found to be mostly ashes.

FRUIT CROP PROSPECTS

OTTAWA, June 22.—The following information received by telegram at the office of the Fruit Commissioner, this morning, outlines the present apple situation in Ontario and Nova Scotia:

Ontario: In the Georgian Bay district, apple trees are in good condition. The fruit has set well and the weather is favourable. There is some danger of the trees being overloaded, and the fruit consequently small. This danger may be offset by a heavy "drop" in the near future. Very little spraying is being done.

In Western Ontario considerable scab is showing and there is a prospect of much damage from this source. The crop will be good where spraying has been thorough, but it is generally feared that there will be a great deal of worthless and low-grade fruit. A heavy drop is now taking place in unsprayed and insufficiently sprayed orchards. In Prince Edward County there is more spraying than usual and the fruit is apparently setting well.

In the McIntosh and Fameuse section of Eastern Ontario scab is developing to a remarkable degree and has caused considerable dropping. No positive estimate of total crop can yet be made.

Between Toronto and Hamilton there will not be more than a fifty per cent. crop. Baldwins give best promise; Spies and Greenings light. Scab is prevalent. Some well-drained orchards promise a fair crop.

Nova Scotia: Conditions are generally favourable in the Annapolis Valley. Apples are setting well and promise a larger crop than was expected a few weeks ago. Weather conditions are good and there is practically no fungus showing as yet. It is estimated that there will be 70 per cent. of a full crop or slightly more than one million barrels. Gravensteins and Nonpareils are heavy. Baldwins and Kings medium. Starks and Bienheims light.

AUTOMOBILE CHASE PROVIDES USE FOR TUXEDO CALABOOSE

Capture of Two Young Men Who Stole a Car Stirs Curiosity of Colony

TUXEDO PARK, N.Y., June 23. — Many persons socially prominent and residents of the Tuxedo colony called at the local lockup to see two young men who had been arrested in a stolen automobile at the point of shotguns and after a chase of several miles over the mountain roads by G. O. Bush, wealthy volunteer chief of police. It is the first time there has been use for the calaboose in a long time, and for that reason the prisoners were as much of a curiosity as for having been caught in an exciting manner.

The young men engaged a new touring automobile at Paterson this morning to take them to Passaic. Half way there and in a lonely spot they threatened the driver, Philip Stone, with pistols, and made him alight. Then the two robbers drove away.

Stone ran half a mile to the nearest telephone and notified the Paterson police. Captain John Tracey, of the Paterson Detective Bureau, telephoned to the police of all places within thirty miles of Paterson to watch for the stolen automobile.

Chief Bush was receiving the message here when, through a window, he saw approaching a new automobile. Dropping the telephone he tossed two loaded shotguns into his own high power roadster and with Policemen Garrick Jones started in pursuit.

The chase continued over several miles of the Ramapo Mountains, and by intimate knowledge of the roads Chief Bush was able to take a short cut and intercept the fugitives. When the two men in the stolen automobile went about a curve in the main road, they found the Chief's roadster blocking the way and the Chief and Jones standing up and aiming their shotguns at them.

The two young men threw up their hands. When Chief Rush had relieved them two heavy pistols, he sat in the tonneau of the stolen automobile with a pistol at the back of each prisoner in the front seat and made them drive back to Tuxedo Park, while Policeman Jones brought up the rear with the Chief's automobile.

Most of the colony turned out to see the prisoners when they were arraigned before the local Justice of the Peace. The prisoners said they were William Fennore, of Newport, R.I., and Frank Simmons of New York city. Neither would give any information and they were held for thirty days, pending extradition by the New Jersey authorities.

No Real Scarcity of Movie Operators

R. C. Newman, provincial moving picture theatres inspector, is unwilling to grant the request of the moving picture men that he send a memorandum to the provincial treasurer asking that the period of probation for operators should be reduced from one year, as provided in the act, to a period of "sufficient to satisfy the inspector." The appeal was made on the grounds that enlistment was reducing the number of operators in the province so seriously that unless some such action were taken theatres would have to close down for lack of qualified operators for their machines. Since June 1, however, 425 already qualified operators have renewed their licenses and 17 new ones have been granted. This makes a total of 425 licensed operators in the province for 315 theatres, not a great many of which employ more than one operator.

Rabies Outbreak In Elgin County

ST. THOMAS, June 23.—The serious outbreak of rabies in Southwold Township, Elgin County, appears to be spreading, and up to the present time, the source of the trouble has not been traced. George Dynes, a blacksmith, who has developed the disease, was rushed to Toronto to the Pasteur Institute to be treated. Mr. Campbell, a farmer of the district, has lost a valuable mare and a colt, and a number of other animals which had been bitten, it is believed by a mad dog. The farmers are alarmed and are asking the authorities to have all dogs in the township destroyed.

German Forces Flee In East Africa

HAVRE, June 23.—Further successes for the Belgian columns invading German East Africa are claimed in an official statement issued by the Belgian War Office. The statement follows:

"General Tombeur telegraphs that after beating the enemy on June 6, at Kiwitawe, our advance guard again caught up with the Germans on June 12, and forced an engagement with them on the road from Kiwitawe to Kitega, east of the River Ngolsoma. The enemy was routed and retreated, abandoning the killed on the field. The pursuit continues."

Good Manners and What They Express

"Manners," someone says, "are the minor morals." Say rather they are the outside symptoms of good morals. For good manners rise from consideration for others; they are the testimony to our recognition of the principle that no man liveth to himself.

So a little thing as not interrupting another person is our acceptance of everyone's right to that same privilege we challenge for ourselves of being heard. A green youth overcome by his own sapience, making himself heard loudly and listening little, is set down not merely as deficient in training and etiquette, but as lacking in common sense. And anyone "whom the music of his own vain tongue doth ravish like enchanting harmony" exhibits a rarely poor judgment of the relative importance of things. Mayhap it doesn't seem closely allied to morality that a man rises when a lady enters the room, but it is. Among savages they don't do that sort of thing—force alone compels respect. The homage of civilized man to other qualities is the reflection of his truer sense of values.

The other day we saw a young girl, seventeen or eighteen perhaps, listening quietly and attentively while her father told a story she had heard often. One sees so much of inattention and smirking deprecation of father's or mother's hobbies, that it was a pleasant thing. We credit that little lady with far more than mere good training—with the right kind of heart. For truly good manners mean more than technic; they bespeak the true man, and the true woman, too.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

COUNTY REPRESENTED ON THE PATRIOTIC FUND COMMITTEE

Establish a Closer Connection With Fund to Which it is Generously Contributing—High County Constable's Position Discussed.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE REPORT

The County Council decided this morning to take a more active interest in the affairs of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund when four members were nominated to represent the county as members of the local fund committee. Mr. Bert Squire of Norwood introduced this subject stating that Ald. Dobbin had suggested the advisability of a representation from the County and he moved, seconded by Deputy Reeve Robson of North Monaghan that Warden Darling and Councillors McIntosh, Northey and Squire be appointed to attend the Thursday evening meetings of the Fund committee whenever they can do so.

MR. E. M. ELLIOTT APPOINTED

Mr. F. C. McCrae, District representative of the Department of Agriculture at Norwood addressed the Council on Thursday afternoon, requesting the appointment of an official as required by the Government in connection with the expenditure of the $500 appropriation for expenses in connection with the Department's work in this district. The cheques for incidental expenses, signed by Mr. McCrae must be countersigned by the County Council's appointee. County Clerg Elliott was selected for this duty.

RE COUNTY CONSTABLE

Reeve McIntosh of North Monaghan reported that he and Warden Darling had interviewed High County Constable Cochrane regarding his physical lability to perform the duties of his office. Mr. Cochrane stated that his physician had advised him to spend the next month or two at Stoney Lake in the hope that the muscles of his legs would be sufficiently strengthened to enable him to walk more easily.

Mr. Cochrane believed he would be able to resume his duties by that time. He did not wish to resign yet.

A discussion followed the report in which Councillors expressed the opinion that if Mr. C. R. Moore, County Constable received a salary he would not have to ask the Council to pay expenses that were not provided for in the tariff of Constable's fees. Mr. Cochrane was High County Constable and as much received a salary of $225 a year, but Mr. Moore had in the arrest of the Lindsays, performed the duties of High County Constable, had necessarily exceeded the sum allowed by the Attorney General's department. Reeve Anderson of Otonabee said he did not wish to dismiss Mr. Cochrane but the existing situation was unjust to Mr. Moore and unfair to the people of the County. Had Mr. Cochrane offered to pay Mr. Moore the $42 expense bill it would have been different he said. While other members were ready to adopt an immediate change Mr. Anderson, Mr. McIntosh and Mr. Fennell urged that the honourable and fair step would be to ask Mr. Cochrane to meet the Council on Saturday morning. Mr. McIntosh reminded the members that Mr. Cochrane had given the County 38 years of faithful service and was entitled to consideration. He was authorized to invite Mr. Cochrane to the session to-morrow morning.

A CHANGE IN GALWAY

Reeve Coben reported that Damon Peters, County constable in Galway with the 109th regiment and that had enlisted with the 109th regiment and that Mr. McGee had been recommended as his successor.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE

Mr. F. McKee presented the Property Committee's report as follows:

That the treasurer by authorised to pay to the Assignee of the Peterborough Typewriter Co., the sum of $9 for desk for Sheriff's Office.

That the Chairman and Warden and Mr. Fennell be authorised to equip an office for the Clerk of the Peace and Crown Attorney in the County Buildings.

Woman Pours Lye Over Husband's Face

Sherman, Texas, June 23.—Because she regarded her husband as too attractive, Mrs. L. P. Gathright told the authorities she poured a quart of concentrated lye on his face and body while he slept, burning out both of his eyes and badly burning and disfiguring his body.

"I did not want to kill him, but I did want to put his eyes out and spoil his handsome face so that he would not be attractive to other women, so I poured the lye on him," is the statement the sheriff said she made to him.

Gathright who is 45, and who owns a restaurant here, it is said, will recover, but will be totally blind. He requested that his wife be not arrested.

Baron Wimborne No Longer Viceroy

LONDON, June 23.—Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons that the resignation of Baron Wimborne as lord lieutenant of Ireland, tendered shortly after the suppression of the recent Irish rebellion, has been accepted.

Says War Aviators Have One Chance In Four To Live

(By William G. Shepherd)

LONDON, June 10.—(By mail).—Life insurance in wartime is a difficult problem for the man who wants to be insured. Also for the insurance company.

Soldiers cannot get life insurance. No company will take the risk. But the life insurance companies of England are so game that the man carrying life insurance at the time he went to the front is assured that his widow and family will receive his insurance money, no matter how he may be killed.

All life insurance policies issued in the United Kingdom have always borne a clause that the companies would not pay for death caused by war. Nobody expected war; therefore nobody objected to the clause. But when war began and the men of England marched off to the front from their desks and offices, the directors of life insurance companies met and decided that in spite of the war clause they would pay for deaths in war on all outstanding policies, but would issue no new policies on the lives of men going to the front.

PAY OUT GREAT SUMS.

The life insurance companies have paid out for the deaths of men killed in battle a tremendous sum.

"Isn't it possible for a rich man, going to the front, to secure life insurance, if he is willing to pay enough for it?" an insurance man was asked.

"No. We've had all kinds of fancy offers, but we cannot make rates of any kind. The man who wished battlefield insurance would have to pay us much more money in premiums than we could pay his beneficiaries.

'An even bet we couldn't afford to take. He'd be betting us $100,000, say, that he would be killed and we would be betting the same amount that he would not. All the odds would be in his favour."

"Are there any special classes of soldiers whose lives are worth less than others?"

"Yes. Flying men. We figure the odds are four to one against them."

"But if a flying man was carrying life insurance before the war, would you pay for his death?"

"Yes, just as if he were an ordinary soldier. We've paid on the death of more than one man who was killed in the air."

TRIED TO PREPARE POLICY.

The insurance companies, early in the war, made an attempt to prepare a policy for soldiers and officers. At first, the policy holder was asked to pay a premium of $16 on every $100. The rate then went up to $18 and when the companies faced the choice of making a twenty per cent. rate or stopping soldier insurance, they chose the latter course.

The insurance of civilians against war risks, however, is being developed by London insurance companies, whose actuaries are working out such questions as:

What are the odds that any certain person will not be killed by Zeppelin bomba

What are the odds that Germany will not succeed in sending a great flock of Zeppelins over London and killing thousands?

One company, whose experts studied the air question at great length, now bets you $5,000 against $10 that you will not be killed by any missile that falls from the sky, whether it by an enemy bomb or a piece of British bomb fired at enemy aircraft.

This same company is also willing to bet 500 to 1 that you will not be killed by an enemy invasion.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT'S GERMAN ACTIVITIES

Professor Says He Was Regarded in Germany as the Official Irishman

Personal observations of the activity of Sir Roger Casement in Germany in his propaganda campaign for Irish freedom through German influence, were related recently by former Mayor George M. McClellan of New Jersey, at his home in Princeton.

Professor McClellan stated that he had met Sir Roger personally in Munich, were both were guests on several occasions of the American consul, T. St. John Gaffney, who was later recalled to this country for unneutral activities in behalf of Germany.

Professor McClelland, who stated that Sir Roger was permitted to go anywhere and everywhere within the German empire by special permission of the Imperial government, said:

"On Aug. 23, 1915, the day following my arrival in Munich, I went to the home of the American consul and was there introduced to Sir Roger. I met him again there the following day when we were both among the guests at what has been termed the 'celebrated luncheon,' at which Mr. Gaffney was the host. I left Munich on Aug. 26, but during the three intervening days I saw much of Casement and talked with him. Wherever I went, Casement was always a member of the official party, including a visit made to one of the large German war hospitals. Casement was unable to speak a word of German, but he seemed to make a great impression upon the officials and others with whom he came in contact during my brief visit.

"At that time he talked in a general way of his hopes for Irish freedom, but if he had any definite plans at that time he made no reference to them to me. I was a stranger to him, and he very seldom made a confidant of any one on short acquaintance. Casement did not mention or give a hint that he expected a revolt in Ireland, nor did he say anything that would indicate that he intended to lead a landing party there.

'He had gone to Germany from the United States, and before I left he said to me that he felt his place was back in America. Whether he meant to infer that his mission to Germany had not met his expectations I do not know. I have often wondered how Sir Roger obtained means for his support while in Germany. He had renounced his title and surrendered his pension from the British government. Casement lived somewhere outside of Munich, travelling back and forth daily.

"Sir Roger appeared to have strong mental vigor, but he impressed me as a dreamer and an idealist. That he had obtained some influence in Germany, however, may be seen by the fact that shortly after his arrival there the Kaiser issued his proclamation regarding Irish independence. Many attribute this to Casement's efforts. Certainly he was regarded as the official Irishman there, both as spokesman and representative, apparently, for he had a special passport, signed either by the Kaiser or the German chancellor, which read in part:

"'Sir Roger Casement, der Irelander.'"—Washington Star.

KINGSTON PROTESTS

Wants the 146th Frontenac Battalion Kept at Barriefield

IRISH REVOLT RUMORS WITHOUT FOUNDATION

No Truth in Reports Either that Britain is Suppressing Any News.

LONDON, June 23—There is not the slightest foundation for the reports spread in America that the Irish rebellion has been renewed and the British Government is suppressing the news. This information is obtained from the Government Department after exhaustive inquiries. It is confirmed from non-official quarters, where any news of the kind would be bound to be known, at least partially. American reports are probably exaggerated and an outgrowth of descriptions of scenes attending the recent funerals of the Sinn Fein victims of the rebellion. Meanwhile, though opposition to the projected settlement of the Irish question, which had developed within the Cabinet itself, came as an unpleasant surprise, there has been no really serious hitch in the negotiations, which is expected to be advanced an important stage by to-morrow's Nationalist conference in Belfast. If these hopes prove justified, it is considered that the reluctant attitude adopted by Lord Lansdowne, Walter Long and Lord Selborne will not be allowed to stand in the way of future progress, even should some changes in the Cabinet become necessary.

RETURNED SOLDIER DIES; WAS GASSED AT ST. JULIEN

TORONTO, June 23.—Martin Tobin, a returned soldier, aged fifty-two years, died suddenly just before midnight. Tobin and his wife had taken a room at 176 Queen Street, west, and about twenty minutes after they retired Mrs. Tobin came downstairs and said that her husband was dying. Dr. F. N. Walker, 101 Bay street, was called, but before he arrived the man had passed away.

Tobin, who was an Englishman by birth, but had lived several years in Toronto, and who enlisted here with the 48th Highlanders, was gassed at St. Julien some months ago, and it is thought that he died of heart failure, resulting from the weakening effect of the gas.

South Central School Tenders All Higher Than The Estimates

Property Committee Found Their $15,000 Was Considerably Short of the Contractors' Figures and Referred Matter Back to the Board of Education.

Tenders for the contract of renovating and repairing the South Central School opened at a meeting of the Property Committee of the Board of Education last night, were in every case considerably in excess of the estimates of the Board's architect, Mr. Blackwell. It was expected that the $15,000 obtained from the city would more than cover the cost of the work. But the tenders listed last night were $17,000 and higher. They were received for special branches of the work and the lowest total that could be figured fell a little short of $16,000. It is understood that the heating tenders were all very much higher than had been expected.

The committee with Mr. R. Denne presiding decided to take no action beyond turning the whole question back to the Board for discussion at a special meeting which will be called in a short time.

It was reported that some of the members were in favour of installing a new hot air heating system and confining the repairs to that work for the present, and that the idea of erecting an entire new school be considered.

Capital Sentence Reduced to Prison

OTTAWA, June 23.—The sentence of death imposed on Alidor Nyssens, a Belgian residing at Cypress River, Man., who killed a companion in a drunken brawl, has been commuted by the Governor-General-in-Council to life imprisonment. The accused claimed the shooting was accidental.

Enlisted to Obtain Five Shillings a Day

LONDON, June 23.—Francis Holmes, of the Canadian contingent, sentenced to three years for theft, has sixteen previous convictions. It was said at his trial that he had gone to Canada to enlist in order to get five shillings a day instead of one and twopence. His whole army time has been spent either in the hospital or absentee.

HUNDRED RECRUITS FOR R. M. C.

KINGSTON, June 22.—The Junior classes at the Royal Military College will be granted a vacation about July 1st for three weeks. Recruits, about one hundred in number, will enter on July 1st. Senior cadets are now in service at various Canadian camps.

OLD EDINBURGH

"It is one of the anomalies of Edinburgh that the city of John Knox and the sober predestinationists should within a generation have become a second Bohemia, a small, but complete and hearty, replica of the Latin Quarter. It was a genuine Bohemianism; none of your later London and Berlin imitations. Here was no make-believe, no assumption. People were not afraid of being themselves. Poverty was not yet even an inconvenience, and wealth was but an accident. It was a life in which learning and whiskey blended, where piquant witticisms made one famous at dinner-tables and clubs. Tavern life became the necessary complement of crowded flat life, just as the club and the restaurant, in our cities, have become the adjunct of the home. By the fireplace in the old 'howfs' and 'laichts' (oyster-cellars and taverns) a man at once found refuge from the uncongenial monotony of his crowded living room. Songs, high jinks, stories, poems and polemics filled the hours as the steam of punch-bowls and the smoke of the fireplace and pipes filled the air."—Samuel P. Orth, in the July Century.

WARRANT FOR ARREST ON A CHARGE OF MURDER

WELLAND, June 23.—Chief Laing has issued a warrant for the arrest of Mike Surbara, alias Mike Smith of Ontario road, charging him with the murder of Jim Gentile in Joe Marbito's restaurant, Muir street, on Saturday night last. Surbara, who runs a fruit store on Ontario road, was there on Sunday, the day after the killing, but had been missing since. He has been traced to Guelph, and from there to Toronto, and his arrest is expected at an early date unless he sooner surrenders himself to the authorities.

When the Chief And Adjutant Went Fishing

Here's something of a yarn about Adjutant McElhaney and Chief Howard. With the approach of the open season for fishing the Chief began to feel restive and imaginative, recalling past fishing exploits one of which was staged at Bobcaygeon in the halcyon days, and after many urging finally secured an ally in the Adjutant who spends all his waking hours fishing for souls and incidentally members of the Salvation Army. The Chief couldn't wait for the opening day, to perform record exploits with hook and line but talked them over with the Adjutant and of course they bubbled over among the men around town and finally became so cocksure that they were going to have a big day that they even promised half dozen men a real live fish. Well, the Chief is short handed a man and decided that Little Lake would have to do this year, so on the sixteenth he was around bright and early like a small boy out to meet the first circus train, landed the Adjutant out into the cool bracing air and away they went to fish. And they did. They fished, or went through the motions, until certain impressions reminded them that the breakfast hour was at hand and in disgust pulled for shore with nothing on the line but the stone anchor.

Of course they regarded the expedition a joke, but the Chief was just been enough angler to have wished that was trailing a couple of big fish up town. As for Adjutant he could turn to bigger game later on in the day and forget about it. Passing a corner grocery the Chief was seized with an idea, and going in purchased a couple of tins of sardines which were duly presented as the result of their morning's work while the rest of the town was asleep. But they couldn't square matters so easily with the men to whom they had promised fish and after many explanations about the poor quality of the bait, and the light and other contingent conditions they finally decided that the best plan was to count not the catch until it is caught.

to the contrary. Only a few weeks ago the natives were exhorted to make peace with Germany as the German army was on its way to India, the British navy had been defeated and London was in the hands of the enemy.

"Why is there such an appalling difference between the recruiting in the city and the recruiting in the country" was the question that was asked by Col. Williams at the close of his address.

A WEAK POINT

According to Mr. J. A. Aylmer the number recruited in the rural sections of Peterborough county equals twenty-five per cent. of the total number of men sent from Peterborough. The total number enlisted in Peterborough since the outbreak of war is approximately three thousand men.

"If Quebec is the weak point, said Mr. Aylmer, "I think the Government might leave Quebec out. Register the men in the provinces that have shown their loyalty to the British Empire and leave Quebec in the ditch if she wants to stay there."

The Rev. R. G. Peever, Rev. J. P. Wilson, and Rev. J. G. Lewis all favoured some form of registration and expressed their willingness to co-operate in any scheme that might be inaugurated to promote the cause.

UNATTACHED OFFICERS

Lieut.-Col. Arthur Stevenson did not think that the figures supplied by Col. Williams relative to the comparison between the rural and urban districts, applied to Peterborough County. "I don't think that the farmers in this county have given anything like as small a proportion as the figures quoted would indicate. I read the other day an item to the effect that there were three thousand five hundred unattached officers in the country. That is one source that might be called upon. They could be formed into three battalions.

Here Col. Williams interjected with the statement that the Militia Department had decided upon a date when these men would have to say whether or not they were going overseas.

Continuing Col. Stevenson told of a letter he had received from the front in which reference was made to the number of stalwat men employed in Army Transport Service and other branches of the service that were characterised as "safety first lines".

Col. Williams replied that the Army Transport Service was an important arm of the service and required stalwart and efficient men. The men employed in such units as referred to in the letter were required to take their turn in the trenches. As for commissions; it was a difficulty to obtain a commission to-day.

WE ALL AGREED.

"We have all been talking of compulsory service or registration, said City Clerk Armstrong, upon being invited to speak. We are all agreed on that point. Col Williams has given us information that for the time being, voluntary service will be continued. We should first obtain figures and see how many men are available for service and then take steps to see why they do not enlist. One officer recently returned from the front who is familiar with conditions in the rural districts made the statement that in some parts of the country not a single man is available. In other parts there were a number of men who could enlist."

"The farmer would be the first man to resist compulsory service yet he is one half of the population" said Col. Williams.

COUNTRY DEPOPULATED.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., said that one reason why the farmers were not sending more men to the front was because they did not have them. Long before the war broke out the rural districts were depopulated by reason of the abnormal industrial expansion that was taking place in the cities. A study of the figures relative to the importation and exportation of foodstuffs would reveal a big depreciation in exports. The population of the rural districts was depleted by fifty per cent. in many cases, before the war. Mr. Gillespie advocated registration and a continuation of the educational work that has been carried on among the farmers during the past few months. Team work and a regular system of organization was required from one end of the province to the other.

Col. Williams—"The figures upon which we base our statistics are from the census of 1911. In anything that I have said to-night nothing is personal to Peterborough. It takes in the whole of the Dominion."

THE FARMER'S SON.

Mr. R. J. Soden was of the opinion that the farmer's son has gone to war. In many cases he has been credited to Peterborough. A lot of them were employed in the city when the war broke out and subsequently enlisted. The rural sections have done well said Mr. Soden. So have the urban centres. We have any number of men in the city who ought to go. The Government will have to take the bit in their teeth and tell Quebec to do its bit or get out."

Mr. Anderson Reeve of Otonabee corroborated Mr. Gillespie. Three quarters of the boys who were born in Otonabee and have enlisted did not enlist in Otonabee but were credited to Peterborough or some other recruiting centre. Mr. Anderson cited the case of the Deputy Reeve of Otonabee who has a large farm and only himself to work it. "The figures are misleading" said Reeve Anderson.

"I am not here to create any false impressions said Col. Williams I am simply quoting facts as shown by the attestation papers."

Rev. Mr. Peever said that he could name at least fifteen families in the country and out of that number he only knew one man who was available and he believed that he was indispensible.

THE WASTAGE.

"Are we not deceiving ourselves as to the number of men available?" enquired Ald. F. H. Dobbin. Each day I get the discharge sheets as Executive Officer of the Patriotic Fund and the figures quoted are appalling. The last one I received a few days ago contained the names of three hundred and sixty men who had been discharged for various reasons chief among them being medical unfitness. Is it not a fact that we have turned back into civilian life something like one hundred and fifteen thousand men that had signed up. Had they remained we might have been up to the authorized number?"

"That is a very important point, said Col. Williams. The wastage in the Canadian army is about five per cent. I don't know how we are going to prevent that. The men are first attested as medically fit. Why do not Canadian born respond to the call? is a question I would like to put before this meeting" said Col. Williams.

WAR A PROFESSION

Mr. R. J. Soden—"There are some good reasons why Canadian born do not respond. In Europe and England, war for years has been a profession. Canadian boys have never been taught that. They have been taught that war is to be shunned and that one ideal in life is peace. They have always enjoyed peace. This war is taking place thirty-five hundred miles away. It is difficult to impress upon any boy nurtured on peace that he has an interest in this war. Many Canadian boys are two and three generations removed from the original stock that first settled in this country. The spirit of the thing is growing and each week Canadians are responding more freely to the call. If you want five hundred thousand men you want them quick. If you are going to get them you will have to make each province do its duty", said Mr. Soden.

Capt. B. Manning who accompanied Col. Williams to this city said that conscription or registration was not desirable if it could at all be avoided. He is Canadian born and is not by any means the sole representative of the family who has joined the colours.

COMPULSORY MEANS POSSIBLE

Mr. F. D. Kerr said that registration and conscription were possible if the country needed it. If political parties would submerge party advantage and the partisan spirit it would be better for the cause. Conscription under a world catastrophe was different from the voluntary system under ordinary conditions.

Mr. G. C. Gladman of the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company referred to the lack of co-ordination. He did not know of any manufacturers but what was short of men. He assured the meeting of his hearty co-operation.

Mr. A. E. Coulthard expressed a similiar opinion. He thought the manufacturers were putting up equally as good a fight as the farmers.

At this stage Col. Williams favoured the meeting with a generous eulogy of Major General Sir Sam Hughes.

Adjutant McElhaney was of the opinion that one of the reasons why there was such a rush to the colours at the outbreak of the war was because of the industrial depression that had settled over the land. He eulogized the men for the spirit of patriotism that had inspired them to enter the service. They were none the less deserving of the commendation of their fellow citizens", said Adjt. McElhaney. "The fighting spirit is not in the blood of the Canadian like that of the Britisher, said the Adjutant in explanation of the reason why Canadians do not enlist as freely as the British born.

THE NET RESULT.

On motion of Adjutant McElhaney and Ald. Dobbin it was moved, seconded and endorsed by the meeting that His Worship Mayor Duffus, Warden Darling the Reeves of the various townships, representatives of the Speakers' Patriotic League and any other local organization that might be interested be a committee to represent Peterborough County at a conference to be held in Kingston on or about July 15th when matters pertaining to recruiting in the 3rd military division, will be discussed. Col. Williams assured the meeting that every effort would be made to supply all the information that was necessary at the conference for the guidance of the representatives. Similar conferences will be held in each of the military divisions throughout the Dominion.

U-BOAT CARRIES LETTER TO SPAIN

Kaiser Sends Message to King Alfonso By Means of Submarine

CARTAGENA, Spain, June 23.—The German submarine U-35, commanded by Lieut. von Arnauld, arrived here today with a letter from Emperor William to King Alfonso. The lieutenant said the letter expressed the Emperor's thanks for the attention given by Spain to the refugees from the Kameruns.

The submarine first anchored alongside the interned German steamship Roma, but the port authorities requested her to move and take up anchorage near the Spanish cruiser Cataluna.

The secretary of the German Embassy arrived here on a special train late last night for the purpose of receiving the letter. Accompanied by the German Consul he went on board the submarine and visited the commander. A Spanish cruiser and a destroyer received orders to watch closely the movement of the submarine. Instructions were given to keep the entrances to the harbour lighted brightly with searchlights.

DONOHUE'S SWEATER COAT WRAPPED ABOUT HIS LEGS

Inquest Expected to Throw Light Upon This Feature of Humber Victim's Death.

TORONTO, June 23.—A feature of the drowning of Joseph Donohue in the Humber River last Monday night, upon which it is expected the inquest will throw some light, was the finding of the man's sweater coat wrapped about his legs. This way, to some extent, explain why Donohue, who was a powerful swimmer, could not save himself from drowning.

Death, according to the autopsy, was due to drowning, and not to injuries.

County Constable Simpson last night served the summonses upon the witnesses for the inquest next Monday night.

TWO-YEAR-OLD GIRL KILLED BY RUNAWAY HORSE

TORONTO, June 23.—While playing in front of her home at 398 King street west at noon yesterday two-year-old Mabel Clark was run down by a runaway horse, the property of the Sheddon Forwarding Co., and though rushed to the Western Hospital by her mother, Mrs. Margaret Clark, died half an hour afterwards. The police investigated the case, but no arrests were made. Driver Burleigh had unhitched one horse from his waggon in the company yards when the other horse became startled, and tore down the street. No blame is attached to the driver.

From the restart West got through with a fine shot, the goalkeeper saving well. Williams placing a corner kick in front of goal. Hardie took a shot which the backs got rid of in good style. Robinson in clearing a shot from Shackleford, kicked over the line. Stockdale getting away on the wing passed out to West for that player to shoot over. Soon after, West, after beating 2 or 3 opponents shot over the bar, the ball going at a terrible pace. From the goal kick King, while standing close in, kept the goalkeeper busy in trying to clear his lines, this he failed to do, the ball rolling through for the 4th goal.

The 109th from the kick made towards the goal, but the pressure did not last long, Norman passing into centre, King forced the goalkeeper to handle again the ball going out to Hardie for that player to take a long drive, the ball missing the post. The ball was constantly around the 109th goal. They did not appear to be able to relieve the pressure for very long together. West robbing Shackleford of the ball, took a terrible shot at goal the goalkeeper saving at the expense of a corner. J. Williams placing the ball well into goal from the corner kick King shot outside, the ball touching Gledall in transit, another corner resulting, Williams was entrusted with the corner, passed out to King, who missed when standing close in. West after beating his men, tried another shot at goal which went just wide of the mark, Griffin in saving a shot from Shackleford, kicked out to West, who made no mistake about scoring the 5th goal. From the kick off Stockdale missed when close in. Hartshorn getting away made good time centering to J. Williams who shot high over the bar. From a fine piece of combination work on the part of the 93rd forwards the ball was rushed towards the 109th goal, Yates conceded a corner is clearing his lines. Hartshorn taking the kick, shot hard into goal; Williams saving, West just missed the mark from a pass by Williams. The 93rd were having all the play, the occasional [illegible] dom dangerous, Griffin not having very much to do.

Stockdale scored the 6th goal from a centre by Hartshorn. The game at this time was very one-sided, 5 corners falling to the 93rd within a few minutes. After West took another shot from a corner, the whistle blew time with the score 6 goals to nil.

For the 93rd West, Norman, Hardie and Robinson were the stars while for the 109th Shackleford and Gledall were the best players.

This makes the Battalion's 4th successive win, shutting out their opponents without a goal being scored against them, having scored 32 goals to nil.

Q. M. S. King has scored 15 goals in the four matches.

The line up was as follows.

93rd—Goal, Pte. Griffin, R. Back, Pte. Robinson, L. Back, Pte. Marsh, R. Half, Lance-Corpl Hardie, C. Half, Pte. West, L. Half, Corpl. Norman, Forwards, Sergt. Maj. Hartshorn, Corpl. Stockdale, Q.M.S. King, Pte. Shaw, Q.M.S. Williams.

Referee—Pte. S. Kitchen.

CAMP NOTES.

Q. M. S. C. W. King returned to camp yesterday as an escort to Pte. McNaughton Walter and McIntosh of the Recruiting Staff, Ptes Quinlan and Corbett, new recruits also blew into camp. Sergt. King reported having a good time while in Peterborough.

Sergt. Maj. Miller and Sergt. Theobald took Sergts Payne and Lewiston into camp in a game of Whist last night, beating them 2 games to 1. There was certainly a doubt about the game owing to the absence of Sergt. Maj. Calladine, who is Sergt Maj. Miller's only partner.

The 130th Battalion stationed at Barriefield leave for Valcartier, Saturday, June 24th. No other Battalions leave camp before the early part of July.

BASEBALL ITEMS.

Wednesday evening was the time and the 93rd Parade grounds the scene of a thrilling baseball match between picked teams of the 93rd Officers and men in which the latter triumphed over their superiors to the tune of 9 runs to 3. The game was replete with startling plays and was witnessed by a large crowd of officers and men. Perhaps the feature of the game was Lieut Stuart's hair-raising dash from 1st to the plate, egged on by Coach Capt. Munro, only to be sent back to second by a heartless umpire.

Lieut. De Puyjalon's "big league" coaching on 1st proved very amusing to the crowd and Lieut. Ketchum on 3rd proved a good running mate for him. Pte. Beaver pitched a cool game, for the winners, and had the officers guessing most of their time.

Capt. Munro relieved Lieut. De Puyjalon in the box in the 3rd inning when the score read 6 runs against the officers, from then until the end of the game he certainly kept the N.C.O's guessing.

Lance-Corp. Saxby at the initial sack was a tower of strength and also clouted the pill very effectively in the pinches.

Lieut. Crisp taking Lieut. Dupuy's place had very little to do and did it well.

Pte. Rody made a brilliant play when caught between 3rd and the plate. By excellent dodging he succeeded in sliding into 3rd sack, eluding three officers who were trying to tag him.

It is understood that the officers are anxious to play a game with the Sergts and this match when played is sure to be watched by a large crowd. Lieut. Dupuy after a spectacular run caught a fly off his bootlaces and doubled the man at the home plate.

The boys are looking forward to the Excursion on Saturday. They are putting on a baseball and football match and hope to keep the visitors interested. If the weather is in a good humor, the success of the visit is insured.

The following will represent the 93rd Battalion Football team against the Provisional School of Infantry this evening at 6.30 p.m. on the Battalion's grounds.

Mrs. A. Richmond, of Norwood, received the sad word last week that her brother, Pte. Harman Simmons, had been killed in action on June 3rd. Pte. Simmons was an ex-pupil of the Norwood Public school and spent his boyhood days in that village. He enlisted in the 1st contingent. Deceased was only 20 years of age, being born in Norwood. He had been in the trenches about ten months and had been wounded twice. His young friends have learned of his death with deep regret.

OTTAWA, June 22.—The Government has adopted the recommendations of the Special Committee of Parliament, which last session considered the revision of the war pension regulations. The present Pensions Board of the Militia Department has been authorized to adopt the new scale, and to make it retroactive, applying to all pensions already granted since the outbreak of the war.

A permanent Pensions Board, appointed for a long period of years, and removed from all political influence, will be named later on, but meanwhile the present Military Board will apply the new regulations. The new scale is considerably higher in the case of privates and other ranks up to lieutenant than the scale adopted a year or so ago.

Already there are some 5,500 names in the pension list, and when all the casualties so far incurred have been dealt with by the Pensions Board, it is estimated the total number of pension awards will be up to the ten thousand mark. The aggregate of the annual pension bill is now over two million dollars. By the time the war ends it is estimated that the yearly bill for pensions will be fully $20,000,000.

Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

NOTICE.

With reference to the pamphlet "The Duties of an Officer, Knowledge and Character," which was distributed from this office on the 20th inst., it is the desire of the Camp Commandant that, as the original copy of this pamphlet emanated from the officer of Field Marshall, His Royal Highness the Governor-General sufficient copies be made, in Battalion Orderly Rooms to permit of every officer being given one.

Writing to his wife, 229 McGill street, Pte. Stephen Curtis, a local member of the Mounted Rifles, gives some details of the Zillibeke fighting. Pte. Curtis is a well known footballer, having been a member of the Nomads. He says in part:

I guess you have seen in the papers about the 4th C.M.R. being badly cut up, and I knew you would be worrying so I sent a card right away. I have to thank God that I am able to write and that I came out safe. On June 2nd we were shelled all day and lost pretty nearly all our men. I lay in a ditch half full of water for about nine hours and then had to make a dash for it across some fields. I can't say much, but you will have seen the papers before you get this letter. We are now back at our rest billet, which is in a barn, but believe me it's a treat to be in it. We are away back from the trenches and we may be here for two or three weeks may be longer, as we have to get some more men to fill up the ranks.

Ottawa, June 22.—Up to the 15th of June, 340,128 men have joined the colours in Canada. In the fortnight preceding this date, 254 enlisted in the London district, 1,602 in Toronto, 555 in Ottawa and Kingston, 561 in Montreal, 124 in Quebec, 262 in the Maritime Provinces, 1,300 in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 605 in British Columbia and 607 in Alberta.

The total enlistments divisionally since the start are: No. 1, London, 28,467; No. 2, Toronto, 76,971 (one unit to hear from); No. 3, Kingston, and Ottawa, 35,470; No. 4, (Montreal, 20,062; No. 5, Quebec, 6,526; No. 6, Maritime Provinces, 31,371; No. 10, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 70,188; No. 11, British Columbia, 31,399; No. 13, Alberta, 30,784; May, 16,000.

Cobourg, June 21. — Capt. Hugh McCullough, of the 40th Perth Regiment, has joined the new 235th Northumberland and Durham Battalion as company quartermaster-sergeant. Capt. McCullough is a veteran of the Northwest Rebellion, and was one of the first to leave from here for overseas upon the outbreak of the present war, going to England with the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F. Capt. McCullough was the Conservative candidate for the Ontario Legislature for West Northumberland in a recent election.

The Kingston Standard says: The 93rd and 109th battalions are pleased with the prospect of remaining in Barriefield camp until they are sent overseas. Both battalions are made up of real soldiers who are willing to go wherever they are sent, but it was felt that in view of the probability of early embarkment for overseas it would seriously interfere with the work of both battalions to give them three moves inside a few brief weeks. It has not yet been definitely settled whether the 146th battalion will remain, or go to Valcartier, and all are waiting for a final answer to the request that the local battalion be permitted to remain here until recruited to strength.

Lt.-Col. Johnston and Major Watt of the 93rd Battalion, are home from Barriefield camp. Lieut. J. A. McNab of B company is also on leave.

Sergt. Giles is among the 93rd noncoms who are in town on leave from Barriefield

Pte. A. Cripps of the 39th Battalion recently invalided home from England left this morning for the Muskoka Sanitarium where he will undergo a six months' treatment. Pte. Cripps friends will wish him a quick convalescence.

On the South window of Messrs. Trebilcock Bros., book store are displayed some most interesting photographs of Ypres showing buildings in the Belgian city before and after the war. These were sent home by Lieut. Claude H. Rogers of Peterborough to Mrs. Rogers.

All local men regretted as physically unfit for other units who want to join the Army Service Corps are asked to report to Capt. Birdsall at the recruiting office to-morrow, Saturday morning at 7.15 o'clock ready to go to Barriefield on the 8.10 train.

Golfing Tournament Has Been Postponed

The last battle around Ypres in which the Canadians were engaged has struck very heavily throughout golfing circles, and it has been decided to postpone the tournament which was to be held at Kirkfield Inn on June 23rd and 24th, at least tentatively until September.

It is understood that many of the golfers who would have participated in the Kirkfield Inn tournament have received news that friends or relatives have suffered in the recent fight, and there appears to be no disposition at the present time to go on with the tournament in the way it would have to be gone on with to ensure success.

William K. Dick, millionaire banker, clubman and newspaper publisher, who will be married to Madame Force Astor this week.

DEMOCRATS PLAN TO RAISE BIG FUND

CHICAGO, June 22.—A campaign fund of $1,700,000 will be raised by the Democratic party by popular subscription, according to an announcement made here by W. W. Marsh, of Iowa, treasurer of the Democratic National Committe

"The biggest fund the Democratic party ever has had in previous campaigns was $1,100,000," said Mr. Marsh. "Every member of the party will be expected to contribute something, and no sum will be too small."

Mr. Marsh is on the way to Washington to confer with President Wilson.

ENGLAND HEARS GUN BOOM; NOISE CARRIED 150 MILES

LONDON, June 22.—People on the shores of the English Channel can hear the roar of Candian heavy artillery at Ypres.

Your correspondent frequently heard the sound of the firing at the battlefront when in the vicinity of Shorncliffe Camp at different times. The Westminster Gazette to-day publishes an account of the paper read before the Royal Meteorological Society, proving that the sound of cannon carried on favorable winds from Ypres, Arras and Dixmude is heard faintly in England at places as far as 150 miles from Ypres.

Improvements to the Little Lake Cemetery

A meeting of the directorate of the Little Lake cemetery yesterday afternoon was held on the grounds and the premises were inspected as is customary every spring. It was decided to widen the steps leading from the fountain up eastward over the hill, making them twelve feet. They will be of concrete, with stone pillars. This will provide accommodation on occasions when large crowds are present. A new road will be opened up on the south side of the cemetery at the foot of the hill extending from the south east gate.

2,000,000 ARMENIANS SLAIN; 630,000 LEFT

PARIS, June 23.—A total of 2,000,000 Armenians have been massacred by the Turks since the beginning of the war, says Henry Darby, the correspondent of the Paris Journal, who has been investigating the atrocities at Erzerum.

The sole survivors of the race are 100,000 in Mesopotamia, 150,000 in the western part of Asia Minor, 180,000 in Constantinople and Smyrna, and 200,000 who have crossed the Caucasus border, 630,000 in all.

CANADIANS MUST PAY; AWAIT THE CONFERENCE

COMING TO SEIZE H.S. MARSHALL

Washington, D.C., June 23—Kenneth Romney, deputy Sergeant at arms of the House, will leave for New York, with a warrant for the arrest of H. Snowden Marshall, United States Attorney of the Southern District of New York, to answer to a charge of contempt, in publicly criticising the Carlin sub-committee, which was recently engaged in investigating Mr. Marshall's official conduct. The House voted yes to hale Mr. Marshall before the bar, and it was expected that the warrant would be issued to-day. However there was a delay in preparing it and those officials who are responsible for this work declare that they want to be sure they are right before they go ahead.

The warrant has not yet been signed by the Speaker but this will probably be attended to by to-morrow.

Mr. Marshall has been invited to appear before the Judiciary Committee on Friday to make a statement relative to the impeachment proceedings against him. These proceedings are entirely separte from the contempt proceedings, and it is understood that the committee will recommend that no impeachment be brought.

MR. MARSHALL PROBABLY WILL ASK WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

H. Snowden Marshalls' only comment yesterday on the report that he intended to fight removal to Washington was, "I have nothing to say now, but to-morrow I shall act."

One of his assistants asserted that Mr. Marshall "will not go to Washington in the custody of the House's sergeant at arms. There will be lively doings when the House's peace officer arrives to-morrow. Mr. Marshall can sue out a writ of habeas corpus, and in all probability will do so."

Ques.: "Have you any competitors?"
Ans.: "Of course."
Ques.: "Do you buy as carefully as they do?"
Ans.: "I guess so."
Ques.: "How about working time—do you buy that as cheaply as your competitors do?"
Ans.: "I don't know but I'd like to know very much."
Ques.: "Why not investigate? Ten to one you'll find your biggest, keenest competitor is using International Time Recorders. That's the way to get every cent of every minute of time you pay for. Then you are not handicapped by your competitors in the biggest raw material any of you buy—WORKING TIME. French Troops Recapture The Positions Lost In Yesterday's Violent Fighting

The Germans Were Thrown Out of the Edge of the Thiaumont Work Which They Took Yesterday---Steamer Captured By German Submarine---Italians Make Further Progress in the Trentino.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE CONTINUES

PARIS (French Official), June 24.—In an impetuous counter attack last night French troops recaptured a large part of the positions lost to the Germans in yesterday's violent fighting on the northeastern front of Verdun, the War Office announced to-day.

The large sector of the trenches surrendered to the Germans between Hills 321 and 320 was recaptured. The Germans were thrown out of the edge of the Thiaumont work, which they took in yesterday's fighting.

In the same attack the French recaptured all the trenches lost to the Germans on the night of June 21. Fresh reports from the Verdun front to-day indicate that the Crown Prince has resumed the drived on the fortress with powerful attacks almost equalling some of his earlier efforts.

STEAMER CAPTURED BY SUBMARINE.

LONDON, June 24.—A steamer believed to be the Great Eastern liner "Brussels," has been captured by a German submarine and taken into the German submarine base at Zeebrugge, according to a Lloyds despatch from Harwich to-day.

GERMANS RENEW ASSAULTS ON THE VERDUN FRONT

French First Line Bombarded Fiercely From Hill No. 304 to the Woevre, Second Line as Far as Esnes---Artillery Activity May Indicate Shift of Battle to the Lorraine Ridge.

PARIS, June 24.—After nearly two weeks of quiet, when even the artillery was subdued, the Germans resumed their attacks on Verdun with a violence exceeded but few times since their offensive began on February 21.

The lull along the Meuse had lasted so long and had been so pronounced in all arms that the people of France were coming to believe that the exhaustion of the Crown Prince's organization, combined with the Russian drive in the east, spelt abandonment of active operations against the city. The attacks, however, are evidence that the German command is not yet willing to admit the failure of the three months' effort. They began on Wednesday afternoon an intense bombardment of the French first line, all the way from Hill No. 304 to the Woevre, and on the west of the Meuse of the second line as far back as Esnes.

Late Thursday afternoon the guns opened from the Woevre plain and a duel of great violence continued through the night with the French artillery along the Lorraine ridge. This spread of the activity to the Woevre is regarded here as one of the most interesting of the recent developments on the Verdun front, and, with better conditions of terrain than prevailed in February and March, may indicate a German intention of pushing a flank attack against the ridge. The early attempts to reach the fortified plateau east of Verdun were stopped almost as soon as they were undertaken, because at that time the plain was a quagmire and gun and supply transport in the face of French fire from the hills was an impossibility.

DEFENSIVE POSTS RECAPTURED.

The Germans have pushed their way to the edge of the Fumin Woods, and their assaults were delivered on a line about three-quarters of a mile wide, from the woods to Chenois, near the entrance to the railway tunnel which runs under the main ridge. Defensive positions were captured early in the morning, but according to the War Office report, the greater part of these were recovered during the day by French counter attacks.

WHERE THE STYLES COME FROM

THE DOWNEYVILLE PICNIC WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Speeches Were Delivered by a Number of Clergymen From Peterboro' ---Ideal Weather Brought Out a Record Crowd

The weather man was kind to Rev. Father Galvin, parish priest of St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, on the occasion of his first picnic held in Herlihey's Grove. In fact the occasion ushered in what promises to be a season of ideal summer weather, and if the reverend gentleman is responsible for this blessed change he will have earned the gratitude of the whole countryside.

IDEAL WEATHER.

The day was a delightful one for an outing of this kind. Old Sol smiled generously at intervals with a warmth that softened the breezes which were in evidence, and made the day an ideal one for merry making.

RECORD ATTENDANCE.

The attendance was a record breaker in the history of picnics in Downeyville. The parish of Downeyville turned out en masse, while a big contingent was present from Lindsay, Peterborough and Bobcaygeon. There were also delegates from Victoria Road, Kinmount, Fenelon Falls, Galway, Norwood, and other points. All mingled together as one big family, and a happy family at that.

GOOD MANAGEMENT.

The picnic was splendidly handled by a splendid committee. Every detail that tended to make the event a success, and that tended to the comfort and enjoyment of the picnickers was in capable hands, and all worked with a zeal and loyalty that was most praiseworthy. Rev. Father Galvin, the popular pastor, was here, there and everywhere, welcoming the visitors, and seeing to it that nothing was omitted that would contribute to the day's pleasure. At an early hour in the morning the highways leading to the picnic grounds were alive with vehicles of all descriptions loaded down with merry picnickers, while the honk-honk of the autos with their human freight kept up until late in the afternoon.

DAY OF PLEASURE.

The scene on the picnic grounds was an animated one. Hundreds of young people flitted about the picnic grounds, enjoying themselves as only youngsters can. Those a little farther advanced in years congregated at the dancing platform and tripped the light 'antastic to really excellent music supplied by violin and organ, while others patronized the fish pond and took a swat at the Kaiser, the latter pastime proving a great drawing card. If the Kaiser gets as many crooks in the future as did his effigy on picnic day, he has a hard time ahead of him.

SPLENDID MEALS.

The piece de resistance at every picnic is, of course, the meals provided. The good ladies of Downyville have achieved a Dominion-wide reputation for the excellence of the meals provided, and they splendidly maintained that record on Thursday. There was an abundance of good things for both dinner and supper, the tables fairly groaning with choice edibles fit for a royal spread. The ladies were most obliging and attentive and none went away hungry. It was indeed an arduous task for the ladies, but to them it was a labour of love, and they are entitled to every praise for the excellent service provided.

CLERGY PRESENT.

The picnic was graced by the presence of a number of clergymen from different points in the diocese. These included His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Peterborough, Monsignor Casey, Lindsay; Very Rev. Dean McColl, rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, East City, Peterborough, Chancellor of the Diocese; Rev. Father McGuire, Ennismore; Rev. Father Guiry, Kinmount; Rev. Father John O'Brien, rector Church of the Sacred Heart, Peterborough; Rev. Father Meagher, Lakefield; Rev. Fathers Scott and Leonard, St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough, and Rev. Mr. Powers, St. Augustine Seminary, Toronto.

DEAN McCOLL.

Very Rev. Dean McColl of Peterborough, said all came to enjoy themselves and mingle with each other in social intercourse. The late pastor of St. Luke's had performed excellent work and his successor he felt sure, would continue the work. He congratulated the pastor and people on the day's success.

REV. FATHER O'BRIEN.

Rev. Father J. O'Brien of Peterborough, congratulated Rev. Father Galvin on the day's success. The success attained was due to both Rev. Father Galvin and the late pastor of St. Luke's. The latter had established the success while Rev. Father Galvin had continued the good work. The speaker expressed his pleasure at meeting the people, under such happy auspices.

REV. FATHER GALVIN THANKS.

Rev. Father Galvin thanked the people for their presence. The large attendance was evidence that he had many friends throughout the district. A portion of the credit for the day's success was due to the fact that they had good weather. It was no trouble to get up the picnic, as all were ready to assist and cooperate in making it a success. It was a pleasure to work under such conditions, and he was pleased that the event was a success both financially and successfully.

Rev. Father McGuire in bringing the proceedings to a close expressed the hope that before the people gathered at another picnic peace would prevail throughout the world. He then called for three cheers for the king and the allies, which were given with a vim.

Snow Avalanche Covers Railway Many Feet Deep

Traffic in British Columbia Tied Up—Columbia River Rising Rapidly.

REVELSTOKE, B.C., June 24.—A great slide came down Thursday and piled a mantle of snow and debris on the Arrowhead branch line of the C. P. R. many feet deep, closing the line to traffic. It was expected traffic would be resumed yesterday.

The water in the Columbia River here is within a few feet of the 1894 record, with prospects of a continual rise, owing to hot weather. No through trains from the west have arrived since Sunday. Passengers were taken east via the Arrow Lakes and Crow's Nest line Thursday. In the west flood conditions are somewhat better.

Girl A Nervous Wreck At Eleven Years of Age

Was Tired Out, Pale and Sallow—Would Tremble Till the Bed Would Shake—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured Her

In the school of to-day there is found an alarming proportion of weak, nervous children who have little chance of developing into healthy, useful men and women. Nature requires the assistance of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help them over a trying period and set them on their feet.

There would be fewer wearing glasses if the nerves were invigorated less irritation in the school and home, more robust health and a greater pleasure in the school tasks.

This letter bears a cheering message to parents whose children are weak, puny, and nervous. It shows you what may be expected from the use of this great restorative.

Mrs. Stephen Hartman, Italy Cross, Lunenburg Co., N S., writes:

"My little sister at eleven years of age became nervous, irritable and seemed all tired out. She had no appetite, was lifeless and drowsy, and her complexion grew pale, and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and had somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes improvement was noticeable, and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether, and they cured her. She got fat and rosy, and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50 all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Home Circle

Many of us miss the joys that might be ours by keeping our eyes fixed on those of other people. No one can enjoy his own opportunities for happiness while he is envious of another's. We lose a great deal of the joy of living by not cheerfully accepting the small pleasures that come to us every day.

* * *

Thousands of city people are now counting the hours when they can leave for some lake or river for an outing, where they can fight mosquitoes and bugs for a few days, and perhaps get drowned. It is a great thing and many of our ancestors lived and died not knowing what a vacation or outing meant.

* * *

The world is full of women who can amuse the ordinary man. Can sing, dance or recite for him; can paint, write or decorate in a manner most pleasing, but the poor man often goes begging for a woman who can sew on buttons or mend his clothes; who can cook his food with ceremony and flavour it to his taste.

* * *

The children whose horizon is a brick wall, who must play on cobble stones and go swimming in the canal and be chased by the police. If they do not grow up to be ideal citizens, shall we or holier memories sit in judgment upon them? Shall we not remember the weight they carry in the race of life and be thankful we live in this beautiful country of ours?

* * *

Some courage is needed to be natural and a higher kind of courage, too, than that which marches behind the safe end of a gun. That moral courage which is not intimidated by appearance nor cowed by custom is a finer article than the daring of the speculator, or the steady nerve of the soldier in physical peril. It takes bravery of the best stamp to be true to oneself.

* * *

How much happier we would all be if we would attempt to build instead of tearing down; how much sweeter our lives would be if we could encourage, by kind words those of our fellowmen and fellowwomen who have fallen by the wayside; extend a helping hand, whisper words of encouragement in their ear, and oh! how much brighter our lives and theirs would be. Give no heed to the tattler and gossiper, turn a deaf ear, and tell them that you are otherwise engaged, when you find them inclined to talk and very soon the tattlers will find their profession gone.

* * *

The school boy should really learn the lesson that the ripest, biggest cherries are at the top and that nine-tenths of ten of his fellows will be crowding for places to pick around the base of the tree where the small, wormy fruit grows. There is plenty of room at the top; there are plenty of cherries growing there. The luscious fruit is ready for the picking and ever smiles a welcome to the hustler to climb up and obtain possession. The best things in life require considerable effort to get, and that's why the strongest men and women have them.

* * *

It is not pleasant to record the truth that there are mothers, who have sacrificed motherhood to worldly ambition, and the most happy women on earth are those who have set aside filial ties in order to live lives of social frivolity, and the time comes to all such, when the bloom of youth forsake the cheek, and the fire of youth dies out of the eye. Such often turn to their homes for sympathy and love, only to find that they too, have vanished, and when it is too late the sad truth dawns upon them that they are unhonoured and unloved. The path of duty is the only safe path, let it be ever so thorny, and the only safe guide-board points to the Christian home.

* * *

There should live in the depths of every human heart one warm and sunny spot where nestle the images of earthly love and the sweet remembrances of childhood home. The memory of those first impressions made upon the baby's mind and heart will live forever. Oh, how fleeting are days of childhood. Dear mother, shall you permit yourselves to be so "cumbered about much serving" that the rich garden of your child's soul will lie neglected with foul weeds choking out all worthy and beautiful growth?

* * *

Our political speakers appeal only to partisan feelings and your pocket-book. You never hear them using their eloquence in an honest endeavor to better our homes which are the foundation stones upon which rest all our laws and institutions, both state and national. When the homes are right the entire country will be right. The questions that effect the morals and purity of our homes are the real and vital questions. The voters who go out from moral, pure homes, will place moral and pure men in office, they will give us honest and pure railroad and tariff regulations. All we need is moral and pure homes so as to supply us with a majority of the voters.

Last Voyage of the Sunbeam

FAREWELL TO A LITTLE WONDER SHIP—A YACHT THAT WENT ROUND THE WORLD

Fifty years ago a ship was built at Birkenhead which nearly brought us to war with America. Eight years later a ship came from the same yard which has always been a messenger of peace, and now anchors in distant British waters as a home of mercy for the wounded.

The first of these two vessels was the Alabama, a privateer sent out secretly to fight for the Confederates against the shipping of the Federals in the terrible American civil war. Her depredations, were so serious as almost to drive the United States to war with us, but happily the matter was compromised although this country had to pay over three million pounds for the damage done by this evil invention of a British shipbuilding yard.

The second vessel was a yacht, the Sunbeam, a sailing vessels with steam engines, and it was built for Lord Brassey. It has become perhaps the most famous yacht in history. It has been round the world and home again with Lord Brassey and his family; it has been to and from Australasia; it has been to Japan and Iceland, to America and Egypt. In every sea she has sailed, in rough weather and in smooth, and she has never met with a serious accident. She has been four hundred thousand miles, this little yacht of just over 500 tons.

During the war she has been a hospital ship plying between Mudros and Malta, and she has been a stationary hospital at Alexandria; and now she has finally cast anchor. Lord Brassey is eighty, and will sail no more, so he has given the Sunbeam to the government of India for use as a hospital ship. She floats in the harbor of Bombay, ready to receive the wounded and suffering, destined, we hope, to be as famous as a sanctuary of healing in port as she has been on the world's great ocean ways.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your over-stoutness is lack of oxygen-carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the harder tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the mal-assimilation and increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. To do this, go to any good druggist and get oil of orilene, only sold in original packages and in capsule form, and take one capsule after each meal and one at bedtime till your weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of oil of orilene in capsule form is remarkable as a weight reducer and it is perfectly safe.—E. J. T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

ONE BIG CIGAR CAUSES HIM TO LOSE TWO BRIDES

TOPEKA, Kan., June 23.—One big, black cigar cost Frank Smith of Wichita, Kan., two brides, one an heiress, $160, and six months in jail. But taught him a lesson in perseverance, and now C. K. Green is awaiting trial at Wichita on the charge of writing a worthless cheque.

Smith was a railroad employee at Newton last fall. He met a comely widow from Wichita, who was visiting friends there and made violent love to her. She accepted and the wedding day was set.

Smith obtained railroad passes for himself and bride to Colorado for a honeymoon and went to Wichita on the afternoon of his wedding day. He went to see his bride and then went downtown to get "dolled up" for the great event. He had a little over $300. He bought a brand new outfit, clothes, hat, shirts, under clothing, shoes, and all, and then strolled up the street "killing time" for the two hours remaining until he was due at the bride's home with the preacher.

MEETS A CASUAL FRIEND

Smith met a friend he had casually met at Newton and at Hutchinson. They talked awhile and finally the friend knowing so Smith as Corly Green, asked for help in cashing a cheque. Smith was willing and traded $160 in hard cash for the cheque. As a token of his appreciation Green gave Smith a big black cigar and departed.

Smith strolled along the streets and finally decided to smoke up. He smoked Green's cigar as he stood on a corner musing of the bright prospects in life. Each puff brought more contentment and finally there came slumber, deep sleep.

When he awoke Smith was in a strange room. He didn't have any bride and he did not know where he was. He walked out of the house and asked a man the name of the town. It was Jackson, Miss. He asked the date and it was three days after his wedding day. His bride was gone and he was 1,000 miles away. The money he had left when he cashed the cheque for Green was gone, as was also a watch.

ALL HIS MONEY IS GONE

Smith decided that as he had jilted his bride he would get a cool reception if he returned. Besides he had no money. So he went to work. He found employment with a rich planter and shortly after going to work began making love to the planter's daughter. She looked with favour upon him and an aunt had recently died leaving some $30,000 to the girl as a wedding present. Smith pressed his suit and they were married in December.

Smith then wrote to the bank at Wichita where he had deposited the cheque given by Green and asked for a draft for his money. In answer came the sheriff with a warrant for him for passing a worthless cheque. He was locked up and later taken to Wichita where the case against him was dismissed, but only after Smith had spent several months in jail. When he was released Smith found that his wife had obtained a divorce and told him not to come back to Mississippi.

LONG SOUGHT FIMEND FOUND

Then Smith started on the hunt for Green. He traced him through three states and found traces of him in forty towns, but was not able to catch up. One day Smith was in the Wichita union station to catch a train to renew his search, when who should come down the steps but his friend Green.

Smith called the police and Green was taken into custody and locked in jail on the charge of passing the worth less cheque. The county officials obtained samples of Green's handwriting and a comparison made with these and the worthless cheque Smith had cashed was sufficient to warrant holding Green under bond.

When Smith identified Green as the man who had defrauded him he also explained to the court that Green had been the cause of him losing two brides and being disgraced, and he has asked the court to give Green the legal limit of punishment to make up the suffering Smith has undergone.

COLD VEAL LOAF.

Line a square pan with three hard-boiled eggs sliced thin and add a layer of thin slices of boiled veal. Add a few chopped mixed pickles and two slices of bacon, chopped. Boil down the liquor that the veal was cooked in and pour it over the veal. Be sure that there is enough liquor to cover it. Chill it and turn it from the dish. If the veal liquor does not jelly a little gelatine dissolved in hot liquid, may be added.

Think of it—in a critical city like New York, where probably the most fastidious motor owners in the world assemble, nine men, as noted before, are kept busy doing nothing else but selling a tire made in Canada—and selling it at a higher price than the American has to pay for American-made tires.

And yet this Traction Tread Tire, which has "caught on" in New York City, and other parts of the United States, is identically the same tire which we have been offering to Canadians since 1911.

It is Undoubtedly the World's Greatest Anti-Skid.

"Not the Harness Meant.—"Can any boy tell what harness is?" asked the teacher. Not a single boy knew. "Well," she continued, "is there any boy here whose father works among horses?" One small boy stood up and answered, "Yes, teacher, "mine does." "Well," said the teacher, "what does your father put on the horses every morning?" "Please, teacher, every ha' penny he has got!"

POTATO STRAWS, SOMETIMES CALLED SHOESTRING POTATOES.

Cut peeled and sliced potatoes into matchlike pieces. Soak for an hour in cold water. Drain, dry thoroughly on a clean towel, then fry in a deep frying basket. Sweeten to taste.

CUCUMBER SOUP.

Materials—Six large cucumbers, 3 onions, 1 pint chicken or mutton stock, 1 pint cream sauce.

Utensils — Stewpan, sieve, cup, and spoon.

Directions—Cook cucumbers and onions in stock until very tender, then rub through a sieve. Return to the stewpan, thicken with a roux, add the cream sauce and season well. Serve with croutons.

BEETS PARISIENNE.

Boil large red beets until tender, taking care to keep them a good color. With a vegetable scoop carve out little balls of beet, pour over them a liberal sprinkling of melted butter and sprinkle with parsley, chopped fine. The trimmings of the beets will make a delicious salad. Chop fine and add hard boiled eggs, also chopped and dress with French dressing.

CUCUMBER SANDWICHES.

Select small cucumbers that the seeds may not be too large. Peel and slice very thin. Let stand in ice water, drain very dry and place between thin slices of bread which have been spread with mayonnaise dressing.

STRING BEANS WITH BACON.

Directions—Cook beans until tender; drain. Cut bacon into small bits, and fry with the onion, which should have been minced. Cut the beans in one inch pieces, add the bacon and heat altogether.

PUREE OF GREEN PEAS WITH RICE.

Materials—Two cups green peas, shelled, 1 pint stock, 1 onion, 1 cup boiled rice.

Directions—Boil the peas and onion in a little water, adding a small piece of soda. When tender put through a sieve; add the stock and the boiled rice. Season with salt, pepper and paprika.

NEW PEAS AND POTATOES IN CREAM.

Scrape new potatoes until all the skin is removed, then boil until tender. Cook fresh young peas, add to the potatoes and pour a thin cream sauce over all. Heat, season well and serve.

PEAS WITH MINT.

Boil young garden peas, adding plenty of butter and seasoning. Sprinkle fine with finely chopped mint. Very nice with spring lamb.

BOILED LETTUCE.

Materials—Four large heads of lettuce, 1 pint of white sauce, yolks of 2 eggs, pepper, salt and nutmeg.

Directions—Trim the leaves from the stalks, boil them for fifteen minutes in salted water, throw them in cold water, drain and chop. Put them in a stewpan with the white sauce. When hot draw the pan to one side and add the beaten yolks.

PORK AND PARSNIPS.

Wash the parsnips and boil until tender. Scrape and slice. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Fry a few slices of fresh pork, and put them in the parsnips and fry until a nice brown.

PEA SALAD IN TOMATO CUPS.

Directions—Remove the centres from tomatoes, and mix them with the peas, chopped cucumber, seasoning and a minced onion. Fill the tomatoes and put a spoonful of mayonnaise on top. Serve on leaf of lettuce.

STRING BEANS WITH GRAVY.

Boil string beans in salted water until tender. Drain and cool. Chop fine 1-2 bunch of parsley and 1 small onion and fry them in butter until brown. Moisten them with roast beef gravy, simmer for 20 minutes, add the beans and reheat. When ready to serve remove from the fire and add the beaten yolks of 2 eggs.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE FOR COTTAGE PUDDING.

Cream together one cup powdered sugar and 1-2 cup of butter. Add the whipped white of 1 egg and 1 cup of crushed strawberries. Heap on glass dish and place on ice several hours before using.

STUFFED CUCUMBER AND SARDINE SALAD.

Cut cucumbers in two lengthwise, scoop out the seeds and fill with a sardine salad made from the cucumber pulp, minced sardines, chopped nasturtium seeds and mayonnaise dressing. Sprinkle liberally with paprika. Arrange on bed of lettuce and garnish with nasturtiums.

CHANTILLY SOUP

Materials—One quart chicken broth, 2 cups shelled peas, 1 head lettuce, 1 onion, 2 sprigs mint, 1-4 lb. salt pork, 2 cups thick cream sauce.

Direction—Boil the peas, onion, lettuce and pork together 1-2 hour. Remove the pork and put the vegetables through a sieve. Add the cream sauce with pepper and salt if needed.

CUCUMBER SAUCE FOR FISH.

Grate two large cucumbers and boil until they are tender. Add 1 teaspoon tarragon vinegar and 1 cup stock. Thicken with 1 tablespoonful of flour and 1 of butter rubbed together.

GREEN PEAS WITH HAM

Directions—Cut the ham in dice, parboil and drain. Fry, then add the peas, onions, parsley and 1 cup water. Cook until the peas are tender, then serve.

BALLOON POTATOES.

Pare potatoes and cut them in rather thick slices. Fry in deep fat, then let them get perfectly cold. Heat the fat once more, put in the potatoes and they will quickly puff up into air. Serve hot.

To clean painted walls do not wash with soap but dissolve two ounces of borax in two quarts of water and add one teaspoonful of mixture to a pail of warm water. After washing the walls rub with dry cloths until clean.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

A blouse showing that thought upon thought was built up in producing it. Women who keep informed as to what fashion allows and stamps "stylish" will vote this an interesting waist and one wearable on any occasion. In plain and figured material, the effect will be such that it will remain with those who see the design, but all one material may be employed with excellent results. The large cape collar, finished with edging, extends almost to the waist line in back and in square outline. It has all the honor that the tie does not claim for giving unusual style note. The cuffs on the short sleeves are of the same material as the collar and finished with a frill to match. The long sleeves may be substituted and finished with a wristband cuff if preferred.

This pattern is cut in sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure. To make like the illustration will require 1¾ yards of figured material and ⅝ yard of plain material, with 2¾ yards of edging for size 36, the material to be 36 inches wide. If all one material is used, 2½ yards only will be needed.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 6 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Fighting, You Don't Realize That If You Are Killed You Are Dead

Captain Morton Webber, Twice Wounded in Three Campaigns With Allies, Discusses Psychology of Battle—Here to Recover From Injuries—Tells How He Outwit'ed Clever Woman Spy and Uncovered One Posing as a Doctor.

A man dressed in well cut clothes, limped into the Rocky Mountain Club. He was Captain Morton Webber, of the Royal Field Artillery, who eighteen months ago bade good-bye to his club friends when he went off to fight for the British Empire. Yesterday he was glad to be in a city of peace, but at the same time there appeared to be a trace of sorrow now and then in his demeanor caused perhaps through his being physically incapacitated and therefore for the time being unable to rejoin his regiment.

Captain Webber is the type of soldier who dislikes to talk about what he has seen. It was difficult to draw from him details of his experiences at the front. In fact it was only through a good friend of the British officer that in his enthusiasm for Great Britain he said something about the three campaigns in which he had fought. If Captain Webber had had his own way this story would have read:

"First, I got my commission. Then I went to France and afterwards to Alexandria, Gallipoli and the Balkans. Now, I am here."

Captain Webber is a consulting engineer, an expert on mine valuation. He gave up a comfortable income without an iota of regret to go to England.

THAT YPRES SALIENT.

"Ten days after I landed in England," said Captain Webber, "I received a commission in the Royal Field Artillery. Previous to that I had told them that I was accustomed to handling men, as I had been doing so for about twelve years. I said that I was giving up a good living and that if they did not want me I would stay for two weeks in Devonshire and then return to the United States.

"Then I went to France," he continued. "I was laid out there at Hill No. 60 on the Ypres salient."

Apparently this was final with Captain Webber, and I then said: "Tell me what happened."

"Oh, we practically got wiped out. It was a bloody fight. One of the notiable things about the fighting (and there is no secret in telling this, because I would not discuss anything of military value) was how much the operations were dependent on artillery control. An attack cannot be followed up without the guns. Artillery domination, has of course, long since been appreciated by both sides.

PSYCHOLOGY OF BATTLE.

"You see so much of the battlefield that you are absolutely detached from yourself, especially after you have lost half your men. You can't realize that if you are killed you are dead. Somehow or other you get to imagine you are immune but you always have the feeling after you see one man and then another drop that you want to take it out on the enemy. I was stupefied—laid out—and was taken off the battlefield. With able medical attendance it was not long before I recovered, and then I was sent to Alexandria, and from there to Gallipoli. I was at Gallipoli from June to September when our brigade was lent to a French general and we were sent on the original Balkan expedition. We drove the Bulgars across the Vardar to their own country, but owing to the collapse of the Serbian army, which exposed our flank, we were forced to fall back on Salonica, and in the rear guard actions our battery and another were sacrificed in order to get the infantry out of the passes. Then I was taken to the hospital, and here I am."

Again there was a finality to his tone.

"Tell us some more detail," said his listeners. There was a civil war veteran, a young college graduate and a Canadian financier in the room. All wanted something more out of Capt. Webber.

OUTWITTING A WOMAN.

"You are very exacting," he said. "But I do remember something about a German spy. The spy was a woman. She was a wonder as to looks and attire, and I was introduced to her one day in Alexandria. She was full of thought for the British army. She asked me to accept a lift in her automobile. I did. At that time I had our guns close to the yacht club to train on the breakwater. The yacht races were still going on every day near the club and fashionably dressed women with escorts frequented the place. This woman often asked me to take a ride in her automobile. She could drive well and fast. Then one day she surprised me.

"'Where is your observation station?' she asked.

"It was a question which would have been unusual from a man who was not in the army, and about the last thing for a woman to ask. As a matter of fact the observation station was in a lighthouse, but as I looked at her pretty eyes I lied and told her it was in the steeple of the English church. After that I found that she did not come around to the club and I had no more automobile rides. I was always waiting for a 4-inch submarine gun to biff that church.

"We were going to be interned, so the Greeks told us, if we retired within their gates. Perhaps we might have been except for the presence suddenly of ten British war ships. They cleared for action and after that there was no more talk about interning us.

AN IGNORANT "DOCTOR"

"It was in Salonica that I came across another German spy. I was accosted in a store by a man who wore a uniform of the Royal Army Medical Corps. He asked me where I had been wounded, and I gave him the medical name for the thigh bone. I soon saw that he did not know whether I had been hit in the head or the foot. He came from Yorkshire, he said—but he lacked the accent. I went to a cafe with him and sent an urgent request for the provost marshal, and soon the man was escorted away.

"On another occasion a spy in Salonica got within our lines and lighted a bonfire. This was against orders and at dawn we realized from the dropping of shells that the spy had given the enemy our position. The enemy guns were behind a ridge. We waited for them and worked out their position carefully, but could not exactly determine their position until an unexploded shell arrived. It was set for 4900 metres and marked by the Krupp firm. That night we waited until they were firing again and then suddenly knowing all their men were at the guns, we let them have three battery salvos of high explosive shells. We heard their ammunition boxes blow up and after that we heard nothing from that direction.

"You talk about fights and battles and ask what I remember. I'll tell you what impressed itself on my mind more than anything else. It was a giant Kiltie. He must have been champing at the bit before they let him out of the trenches by the way he went for the Germans. He was so strong that he drove part of the barrel of the gun, with the bayonet, into one of the enemy. He could not extricate his gun. I then saw this fleet reach down and pick up the German's weapon and with that he killed the man who was seeking to avenge the death of the first German.

"That time, too, the bayonet went in too far. Nothing loth, this brawny Kiltie grabbed a third man's gun. After that my attention was distracted by something near me.

A DISCORD OF FIGHTING

"We got a present of a piano for our mess in Gallipoli. We did not get much of a chance to try it out, because the first night it was tuned up for the evening a high explosive shell swung right into it and the next month we were continually picking up keys.

"It's hard to have any conception of the amount of lead, iron and copper that is being shot into the ground and which can't be recovered. An idea of this can be gathered when it is realized that solely through Allied buyings copper has risen from a normal thirteen and fourteen cents to twenty-eight cents. And lead, which has a normal price of three to four cents, now is up to eight and one-half cents. Remember that Germany requires just as much as the Allies, which she is unable to get because of the British fleet, and it's only a question of time before she begins to feel the pinch.

"I should say that the greatest strategical masterpiece of the war was that the Allies has not tried "a Verdun". There it is common knowledge that four Germans have been killed for every Frenchman. The Germans are bound to do something for a moral effect. We don't require that. It's merely a question of time before the German's waste of human element is going to beat him. The Kaiser is suffering enormous losses for purely spectacular reasons. Our public does not require to be buncoed.

"People don't realize what Great Britain has had to do. First she sent over an expeditionary force of 160,000, and while fighting she has simultaneously increased her army to 5,000,000 men to terminate the war. I have never yet met an officer of one of our Allies who has not told me that Great Britain would be keeping up her end on the sea alone and that she really was not counted upon for land fighting.

"As to the outcome of the conflict I have not the least doubt. My only fear is that we'll settle too cheaply. We should remember to keep studiously in mind the debt we owe to the fellows lying under the sod."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or exposure in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

GIVES RULES FOR CARE OF THE TIRE

Ruts and Car Tracks Do Damage

Tire care is an investment advised by experts as sure to yield a profitable return to the motorist.

"Makers exert every effort," says one expert, "to giving the motorist the ultimate of resistance in his tire. But besides the normal wear of the road the tire in most cases is handicapped by abuse on the part of the average driver, who wastes his money for want of simple precautions.

"Little effort is made to avoid running in ruts or street car tracks, yet there are few things that wear out a tire quicker. Few respect the injunction to go slow when turning corners.

SUDDEN STARTS BAD.

"Brakes are viciously jammed on when in many cases their use could be avoided. Sudden starts are as frequent as they are detrimental to the tire.

"When turns are being made cars often are allowed to grind against the curbstone, a kind of friction that directly yanks cash out of the owner's pocket.

"Although most owners know that wheels out of line drag and wear the tire, wobbly wheels are frequently permitted to continue in this condition, long after the discovery.

"Costly tire damage results from running a machine after a puncture. There should be an instant stop, as half a dozen revolutions may ruin the damaged tire past the possibility of repair.

ON SHARP STONES.

"Cuts and snags can be lessened by care in driving. When a car is coming up to loose crushed stones in the road its speed should be slightly hit up and the clutch depressed. It is better to coast over the sharp stones than to cause more traction by leaving the gears engaged.

"When traction is lost, spinning rear wheels can cause rapid damage to a tire. Backing and then starting forward will often give speedy traction. When this fails rope or chain can be placed on the rear wheels to permit a start, but no time should be lost in ending the grinding process.

"Sand, dirt and stones can readily be forced into a cut by the weight of the machine on the tire. Those lumps will often spread apart the cover and the fabric. Much of this trouble can be avoided by a frequent system of examination and the removal of all foreign matter.

"Oil and grease absorbed from the floor of a garage or working out on the tire via the differential housings, should be carefully cleaned off in order to avoid softening and decay of the rubber.

"Small punctures and cuts can be kept trivial in importance and easily repaired if dealt with promptly, otherwise they may involve the ruin of the tire.

"It is a good idea to shift to the front tires that have been showing any signs of wear when used on the rear.

"These suggestions are all practical. They come readily within the understanding and application of the average motorist. They mean money saved. They would apply to any other make of tire, as well as ours."

WORKS HIS OWN

Brockville, June 22.—North Augusta, a small village 15 miles from here, claims to have the oldest resident of Leeds and Grenville, if not of Ontario, in Rufus Avery, who has reached his hundred and eighth year. Mr Avery is still hale and hearty and continues to do his own work on his small farm.

Suffered From Nerves

Could Not Sleep

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pace the floor with nerves unhinged, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you to get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollas Knox, St. John, N.B. writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves, I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worked on my mind and bothered me. Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind, I would screech out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves. It was so terrible I would hold my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for nearly a quarter of a century, and are universally known as the best remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

—small—light—economical —your ideal car

Each season for a number of years the Overland organization has accomplished what no other automobile manufacturer has even attempted.

Each season it has built a car that would satisfy the demands of the most fastidious—one having all the up-to-date advantages, comforts and conveniences known to the automobile industry—to sell at a price so low as to defy comparison.

Overland organization; Overland experience and Overland factory facilities have accomplished what others have considered impossible.

This year Overland dominance is even more positive.

We have developed and built the ideal small, light, economical car—complete in every detail of construction and equipment—smart in appearance, of highest quality and finest finish—to sell for $850.

Only the economies possible with a production of 1,000 cars a day make possible such a complete car at such a price. This Overland was built to reach a new low level of operating and upkeep expense. It was designed to meet the demands of those who could not afford a big, expensive automobile, yet would not be content to own a little, unsightly, uncomfortable car.

But its success has been such that everyone—people of wealth and automobile experience, as well as those of modest means find in this economical $850 Overland their ideal light car.

It has beauty, finish, comforts and conveniences that everyone wants.

A look at the car will tell you that.

But you must ride in it to appreciate fully and completely its ample power, its smooth operation, its comfort, simplicity of control and remarkable easy riding qualities.

Yet it is not only inexpensive to buy, but very economical to operate.

You can own this Overland.

See the Overland dealer and let him give you a demonstration.

But do it now.

In spite of our output of 1,000 a day we are pressed to the utmost to meet the demands. For no other car at anywhere near the price compares with this small, light, economical Overland in beauty, finish, comfort and performance.

Do not delay action until it means a long wait for delivery.

Act today.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Saved by Clean Hands

By F. A. MITCHEL

There was a time toward the close of the attempt of the commune to govern Paris when the communists were fighting a losing battle and the end was not far distant. One morning Louise Deamoulliers, a pretty French girl, went out to buy some food supplies for the day's consumption. She was obliged to go some distance from her home, for many shops were shut up, and she was absent more than an hour. When she left the street in which she lived was more than usually quiet, for ordinarily persons were going and coming on their daily vocations, whereas, while the commune was in power, many kept to their homes. When Louise returned she saw a great crowd of excited persons tearing up the stones directly in front of her house and piling them up to form a barricade.

Her mother was alone at home, and Louise knew that she would be much troubled at her absence at a time of such turbulence. But how could she get through this fierce crowd?

Summoning all her fortitude, the girl made a dash to cross the street directly opposite her home. She had reached the opposite curb when she felt herself caught by the skirt, and, turning, saw that she had been stopped by a hag of more ferocious appearance than any woman she had ever seen before.

"Where are you going?" asked the vixen.

"Home."

"Home! You are lucky to have a home. Come, bear a hand here, and help us who have no homes."

She dragged Louise back into the street and, pointing to the pavement, ordered her to join those who were tearing up the stones and piling them on the barricade. Louise knew that should she refuse her career would be ended by one of the stones being buried at her head, and she had no choice but to obey. While carrying a stone to the barricade a young man with a pointed beard said to her in a low tone:

"I have been forced to do this work, as you have. The government troops will be here in a few minutes. I left them at the Place de la Concorde, ready to march. We must not be found here when they come, but I fear we cannot get away."

This was all the man had time to say to her, and she could make no reply. They worked on, the young man keeping near Louise till the cry was raised that the troops were coming. The barricade was not half finished, and there was no organized force to defend it. So the communists began to scatter—that is, they tried to scatter, but the street was filled with them, and it was difficult for them to move in the direction opposite to that in which the troops were coming. Indeed, it was so choked that Louise and her new found friend did not attempt it. Although the girl was not fifty feet from her home, she was unable to reach it.

Suddenly her companion seized her arm and drew her toward a basement door that he saw standing open. Though buffeted by the flying crowd, he succeeded in getting her into this door and closed it after him.

"The troops will be here in a few moments. I have seen them at this work before. They will enter every house near the barricade to search for communists." Then, noticing that they were in the laundry of the house in which they had taken refuge, he ran to one of the tubs and, pulling up his sleeves, began to wash his hands, calling on Louise to do the same. He used soap plentifully and removed all trace of dirt. When Louise had finished her ablutions the man looked her over and saw that she had but little dust on her dress, which seemed to please him. His own shirt cuffs were dirty, and he rolled them up under his coat sleeves. They had no sooner got the dirt off their hands and, so far as they could, off their clothes when the door was thrown open and several soldiers hurried in. One of them seized Louise and another her companion and dragged them into the street, where they were placed with other prisoners who had been and were being arrested.

When the officer in command of the troops was satisfied that all communists who had been working on the barricade and who had taken refuge in the houses near by had so far as possible been collected he placed them in the center of the column and gave the order to march.

Half an hour later Louise found herself in a yard surrounded by a high wall. The prisoners were directed to stand against the wall with their faces to it. Then an officer cried out:

"Hold up your hands!"

Every hand went up, and the officer passed down the line, selecting those whose hands were clean and directing them to stand aside in a group by themselves. Louise and the young man who had warned her to wash her hands were among this number. When all those with clean hands had been selected they were marched out of the inclosure and liberated. As they were leaving they heard a volley fired inside the walls and knew that those unfortunates with soiled hands had been shot to death.

As Louise and her friend walked away she knew that had it not been for him she would have been among those who had just been executed. He saw her to her home, where she found her mother in an agony of terror concerning her.

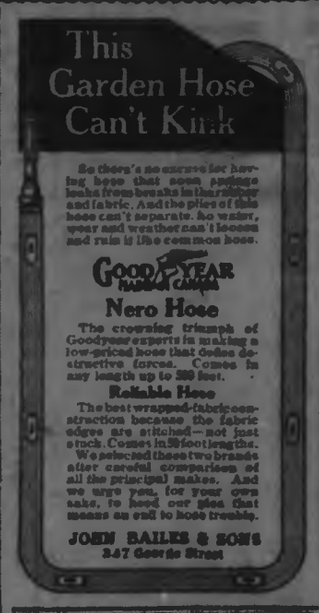
The man who had saved Louise Deamoulliers was a young artist.

Helping the Poor.

Lady White, the widow of General Sir George White, defender of Ladysmith, who was given apartments in Hampton Court Palace by the King, has come out of her retirement a little lately, and has been quietly interesting herself in the poor of the district.

Or Worse Than That.

Scientists claim that love is due to a microbe. Some of us are willing to go even further and say it's a bug.



HARD TO ENTER GERMANY TO-DAY

PARIS, June —Not since August, 1914, have the German frontiers been so strictly watched as during the last two months.

If a neutral now wishes to go to Germany he must sign a document agreeing not to return before the expiration of three months. Even commercial men who have been doing continuous business with Germany and are known to have a genuine connection with the country must now conduct their affairs by correspondence, or if they do cross the frontier they are forbidden to recross it before the lapse of the statutory three months.

I know of a Swiss professor and author who, like the many other Swiss writers, has his books published in Germany and consequently is well known there, but even he when anxious to consult some German professor about the publication of a certain work, could not obtain permission to go to Germany and return from it within a week or two.

Are Locked In.

People who have to travel between Switzerland and Holland are consequently subjected to the greatest difficulties, and are not permitted to leave the train or spend a night in Berlin or any other town, but must travel straight through, and all the time they are under surreptitious police supervision. That is to say, they could not do anything without the German police being aware. The entire German Empire now is more than ever a beleaguered fortress. Even such neutrals as are suffered to enter Germany and remain there three months are selected neutrals, for it is not to be imagined that the editor of a neutral newspaper which does not happen always to write in such a way as to please the Germans would be permitted to cross the frontier, not even were he to agree to spend three months in the country. Not even Germans are allowed to leave Germany now, unless for some very special reason.

Must Register.

However, the regulations as regards foreigners in Germany are more stringent and more strictly enforced than ever. Any one taking any foreigner of either sex over the age of fifteen into his house or hotel must see personally that he or she has reported himself or herself to the proper authorities within twenty four hours at most. Should the foreigner have failed to report himself within the stipulated time, then the person taking him in must inform the police immediately to that effect. Should the foreigner have arrived on a Saturday night or on a holiday or the day before a holiday he must still report himself within the same given time, twenty-four hours being in all circumstances the maximum period allowed.

It is not so much to prevent spying on German military movements that foreigners are admitted only with so much difficulty and are so closely watched, but to ensure disagreeable facts not becoming known outside Germany concerning her real economic and financial condition, and above all just now not to let anything get abroad about her preparations in view of a possible third winter campaign.

Many Commissions.

Already all manner of government commissions and government offices are taking stock of one or another of the foodstuffs and necessaries in the country — tea, cocoa, coffee in particular at present. Everything is being done to encourage people to breed more goats in order to increase the diminished and insufficient supply of milk. A premium has been offered to a goat breeder who succeeds in bringing up twin kids or triplets. The German Fishery Association is also doing its utmost to impress upon the public that any water, whether pond, slow flowing stream, pool or lake, in which fish will live must be stocked with fish of some suitable kind.

Meat Supply Curbed.

The meat supply has now for about a month past been in the hands of a special meat supply board, whose duty it is to look after the supply, distribution and import of meat of all descriptions for the entire empire. Even in the best and most expensive restaurants the law does not allow more than two kinds of soup, two hors d'oeuvres and two meat dishes to appear on the bill for fare at once, and only one each of these may be served to a single person.

Furthermore, any one going to a restaurant must now bring not only his bread card with him, but his meat card also. Butter, of course, is not usually served in restaurants, and the scarcity of it and of milk does not seem as yet to have become much less. In Berlin, as in the rest of Germany, butter is now obtainable only on production of a butter card. As to whether the introduction of meatless days into Germany has seriously diminished the consumption of meat statements are contradictory. The official statement does not say anything about the reduction in the consumption of meat in the parts of Berlin inhabited by the wealthier classes. But one thing is clear, the poor have suffered and are suffering.

Three squares of chocolate, one cup sugar, one half cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla. Melt in double boiler, and let cool. One tablespoon butter, one cup sugar, two egg yolks, one-half cup milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two cups flour, the whites of two eggs. Mix well, bake in three layers. Filling, one half cup butter, one-half cup milk, two cups sugar, vanilla to taste. Boil for five minutes. Beat well until the mixture is cold and is ready to spread.

An Iceless Refrigerator

A companion convenience to the fireless cooker for the hot summer days is the iceless refrigerator, or milk cooler. This consists of a wooden frame covered with canton flannel or some similar material. It is desirable that the frame be screened, although this is not absolutely necessary. Wicks made of the same material as the covering rest in a pan of water on top of the refrigerator, allowing the water to seep down the sides. When evaporation takes place the heat is taken from the inside, with consequent lowering of the temperature. On dry, hot days a temperature of 50 degrees can be obtained in the refrigerator. The following description will aid in the construction of this device.

HOW TO MAKE.

Make a screened case 3 1-2 feet high, with the other dimensions 12 by 15 inches. If a solid top is used, simply place the water pan on this. Otherwise fit the pan closely into the opening of the top frame and support it by 1-inch cleats fastened to the inside of the frame. Place two movable shelves in the frame, 12 to 15 inches apart. Use a sheet pan 12 inches square on the top to hold the water, and where the refrigerator is to be used indoors have the whole thing standing in a large pan to catch any drip. The pans and case may be painted white, allowed to dry, and then enamelled. A covering of white canton flannel should be made to fit the frame. Have the smooth side out and button the covering on the frame with buggy or automobile curtain hooks and eyes arranged so that the door may be opened without unfastening these hooks. This can easily be done by putting one row of hooks on the edge of the door near the latch and the other just opposite the opening with the hem on each side extending far enough to cover the crack at the edge of the door, so as to keep out the warm outside air and retain the cooled air. This drum or covering will have to be hooked around the top edge also. Two double strips one half the width of each side should be sewed to the top on each side and allowed to extend over about 2 1-2 or 3 inches in the pan of water. The bottom of the covering should extend to the lower edge of the case.

Place the refrigerator in a shady place where the air will circulate around it freely. If buttons and buttonholes are used on the canton flannel instead of buggy hooks, the cost should not exceed 35 cents.

To Reduce.

In the morning eat a breakfast which consists largely of toast and fruit. During the morning drink three pints of water, if possible.

At noon eat a little meat and all the greens you want. At night eat no meat at all. Meat should be eaten only once a day.

A very good beauty diet is soups, fresh fish, vegetable, broths, clear; fish, raw oysters, fresh fish, boiled. Meat—fat bacon, boiled or broiled chicken, game (sparingly). Farinaceous—cracked wheat, oatmeal, rice, sago, hominy, whole wheat, bread or biscuits, rye bread, graham bread or crackeds, dry toast, milk toast, macaroni. Vegetables—mashed potato, green peas, string beans, spinach, cabbage, cucumbers, cresses, lettuce. Desserts—plain milk, pudding, junket, rice (no sugar), milk, buttermilk, toast water, pure water (cold or hot).

A very efficient exercise for reducing the abdomen and hips is to stand facing the door, the feet being placed against the bottom of the door. Grasp the knobs with both hands and stoop, then pull yourself up to a standing position again. Anyone who has very large hips should walk a good deal and also run.

To clear the skin, drink plenty of water and less coffee; sleep in a well ventilated room, with the windows raised at the bottom and lowered at the top. Take a hot bath daily and use a bath brush and pure soap. Take a heaping teaspoon of phosphate of soda in a cup of hot water half an hour before breakfast for five days about once a month.

NEW LIFE-BELT REGULATIONS IN FORCE JULY 1

AIR CONTRIVANCES BANNED SHIPS SAID TO BE WELL SUPPLIED.

With the close of the present month the death knell will be rung on the old-fashioned type of life jacket for use at sea. In the past, there has been laxity on the part of some ship owners in providing a life-jacket that would not drown its wearer. The nervous passenger, making his first deep sea trip, would regard the life-jackets in his cabin with complacency. But investigation and disaster have shown that the old regulations were not stringent enough to ensure a really adequate life-jacket. If a life-belt would support a given weight in the water for a given number of hours, it was enough to pass the Board of Trade regulations.

Under the new Board of Trade regulations, coming into force on July 1st next, the lifebelt must do more: it must keep the wearer's face clear of the water even if he or she is unconscious.

No particular make of life-belt is required to pass the Board of Trade test. But the regulations, as received by the Montreal Shipping Federation, makes these provisions:

When the wearer is inert, the position of the body should be as near the vertical as possible and if there is any tendency to depart from the vertical, it should be to throw the head backwards.

The buoyancy of the jacket should be so arranged that it will keep the wearer's head clear of the water when floating in the inert position.

In the event of the wearer, through any cause, being rendered unconscious, the head should be so supported that it would not fall forward, and the face become submerged.

Only one specific type of life-belt is barred. "No jacket," the regulations state, which depends on air compartments for buoyancy, will be accepted."

"The objection against portable rubber balloons and similar type of lifebelt, it is stated, is in the danger of deterioration and damage. Pneumatic belts, when in good condition, would hold up the wearer, but their weakness lies in the liability of the material to crack, thus rendering the belt useless.

Belts must depend for their buoyancy on cork, Java kapok, or other approved substitute.

Vessels in the North Atlantic trade, it is stated, are already equipped with a new type of lifebelt which will meet the new regulations.

Urges all Kidney Sufferers to take

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Mr. Thos. G. O'Connor, Halifax, N.S., says: "I am writing this for the public telling of the remarkable cure I received from your great remedy Gin Pills. When I started taking these I was what you might call 'all in.' I could not bend for any length of time, nor could I lay on my side for a short time without becoming very tired. I had all the symptoms of Kidney Trouble and thought I would not be able to stay at work.

With the aid of Gin Pills I entirely overcame my trouble and I am now feeling fine. I strongly urge any one suffering from their kidneys to take Gin Pills and they will soon feel as if they never had any trouble."

These Symptons Mean Danger

If you have pains in the back, constant headaches, incontinence or suppression of urine, burning pain, puffiness under the eyes: suspect stone in the bladder, suffer from rheumatism, swelling of the wrists or ankles, it is time you took Mr. O'Connor's advice—take Gin Pills.

If your dealer does not handle Gin Pills, do not take a substitute, but send your order direct to us at the regular price—50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. Money cheerfully refunded if Gin Pills do not carry out all our claims.

A sample box free if you write to us, mentioning this paper.

ONE-PIECE FROCKS FOR COATLESS DAYS

Serge, Linens, Pongees and Tussahs Popular, Plain and Striped

Soft Colours Liked—Grays, Pinks and Blues

NEW YORK, June 24.—Just at this time of the year, when we are all of us finding the coat very irksome indeed, one-piece frocks play a most important role. Of course there never is a closed season for them, but at this time their real charm is best appreciated.

FABRICS IMPORTANT CONSIDERATIONS.

Aside from the simple, trim models of serge, gabardine, faille, and taffeta, which one meets everywhere on the avenue these bright days, the shop windows are gay with voiles, nets, figured organdies, and the dainty imported cottons, fashioned into frocks, which are wonderfully appealing. Each day new models appear, no two exactly alike, though obviously of the same family, each seeming, if possible, daintier than those launched before. Frills, narrow and wide, cobweb-like laces and embroideries, and layer after layer of the sheerest of fabrics are used to create these full-skirted, fluffy frocks, for summer dances, country club afternoons, and the thousand and one other requirements of the summer playtime.

INTERESTING TUB FROCKS.

Of course, many of these dainty, lace-trimmed, befrilled lingerie frocks are anything but economical when one considers that they will not launder, but must be cleaned each time they are soiled. However, there are many dainty materials which will launder and make up quite as effectively—figured voiles, colored handkerchief linens, crepes, many of the organdies and most of the imported novelty cottons, when simply trimmed.

A particularly effective summer frock, suitable for almost any daytime occasion, illustrated here, is developed in a dotted voile, a white ground embroidered with a soft pink dot; the flounce is of embroidered batiste, just tinted to match the dot. The satin girdle, which is in a darker tone, affords the necessary touch of sharp contrast.

COLOR COMBINATIONS.

Colors, more, perhaps, than almost anything else, should be chosen, not according to the shades which are fashionable, but for their becomingness. There are certain tones which are more becoming than others, and these should be selected. It is not a difficult matter to do this this season, for, although we hear of the seriousness of the dye situation on every hand, there seems to be no dearth of beautiful shades. The many shades of gray are popular for muslins and silks; and the soft pinks and blues predominate in the cool, pretty waistings. Navy blue is always favoured, and this summer it is as popular as ever for serge, taffeta and linen suitings.

To Keep Skin in Fine Condition All Summer

It would be much better for the skin if little cream, powder or rouge were used during the heated term. Mixed with perspiration, dust and grime, these things are anything but beautifying. Ordinary mercolized wax will do more for the complexion, and without giving an oily, streaked, spotted or pasty appearance. It is the ideal application for the season, as it not only keeps the pores clean, but daily removes particles of scarf skin which have been soiled by dirt or weather. By constantly keeping the complexion clear, white, satiny, it does more toward perpetuating a youthful countenance than any of the arts or artifices commonly employed. One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, will completely renovate the worst complexion. It is applied at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

To keep the skin from sagging or wrinkling, or to overcome such condition, there's nothing better than a face bath made by dissolving 4 ounce powdered saxolite in 1/4 pint witch hazel.

BEING A GIRL IS SO DULL.

New York June 22.—Because she did not want to be a girl any longer, Annie Fox, 16 years old of No. 122 Charlton street, Newark, N.J., dressed herself in a sport shirt and knickerbockers on Sunday night and ran away from her home.

Yesterday in the Yorkville Court, where she had been arraigned following her arrest for masquerading, she told Magistrate Barlow that she hated housework and thought that she would like to try the life of a boy. Magistrate Barlow gave the girl a short lecture upon the folly of her course, and returned her to her father, Samuel Fox.

Prodigal, Not Fatted Calf Is Almost Killed

New York, June 23.—Karl Klotz saw his wife last Thursday for the first time in two months. From a friend he learned that after he had faded from home without so much as an intimation that he was going, she had gone to live with Mrs. Feinberg, at 2170 Amsterdam avenue. But Klotz had tired of the "open road" and longed for home. As a peace offering he purchased a bunch of violets. With a stout heart and a smile on his broad face Klotz mounted the stairs leading to the Feinberg flat and bravely knocked thrice on the door.

"Lo, Elisabeth," he said, nonchalantly, "How's your health, eh?"

FINDS WIFE UNFORGIVING.

Mrs. Klotz glanced at the newcomer, then stared, then frowned. She was ironing the weekly wash. Calling on all her available reserve, she placed the flat iron where it would do no harm and pointed a finger towards the door.

"Out!" she shouted.

"Aw, Lizzie," pleaded Karl, "have a heart. Here's some violets I bought for you."

"Out!" commanded Mrs. Klotz again. "If you dont'—if you don't—" Mrs. Klotz gased suggestively at the flatiron. Karl softly shut the door behind him. Once safely on the sidewalk he began to cogitate on the best means to restore the affections of his wife unto himself. Ah, he had it. Women liked candy. He would buy a large two pound box, with a big red ribbon tied about it, and call again the next day—Friday.

THEN COMES THE SMASH-UP.

Klotz called. "Lizzie," he said, "I been mighty lonesome without you. Give a feller another chance, won't you? Aw, come on, be a sport."

"I told you to stay away, didn't I?" Mrs. Klotz cried. "If you come around again you'll go to Blackwell's you will."

"Say, Lizzie, I'll behave," coaxed Karl. Mrs. Klotz shoved him through the entrance and down part of the stairs. In the window of a drug store he saw a small square camera. Figuring his worldy wealth he found that he had just enough to cover the price.

"See what I bought you," he lisped, opening the door of his wife's room just a few inches.

"Come in, Karl," returned Mrs. Klotz. Karl's heart bounded high. Here was forgiveness at last. Mrs. Klotz took the camera from his outstretched hand, retired to a corner, and took careful aim.

POLICE END THE SESSION.

When Klotz felt better physically he returned with a dress.

"You wouldn't support me when we lived together," Mrs. Klotz shouted. "You're a good for nothing, a nobody that never was and never will be—a tramp. Help, help, help, police!"

Patrolman Lilly came in time to stop Klotz in the midst of a torrent of abuse directed at his wife. At the West One Hundred and Fifty-second street station Mrs. Klotz said that after the death of her child her husband refused to support her and shortly after disappeared.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not even without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can walk and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

CASEMENT'S LAWYER BUSY.

Sister Sends American to Assist in Defence.

LONDON, June —Within half an hour of his arrival in London, Michael F. Doyle, the Philadelphia lawyer retained by Sir Roger Casement's sister to look after Casement's interests, conferred with Sir Roger's lawyers. He will see his client in the Tower to-day.

Mr. Doyle said that he was deeply gratified by the Government's courtesy in allowing him to assist Casement, particularly as he understands that this is the first State trial in Great Britain in which a foreigner has been allowed to participate.

HIS FEAR.

With sobs in his voice, the applicant for a meal and some old clothes had told his story and the kind hearted woman had helped him.

Now as he sat eating a hunk of bread and cheese she thought it wise to get in a little good advice. So she began:

"Don't you think that—er—it would be better for yourself if you used soap and water occasionally?"

The tramp sighed dolefully.

"I would, ma'am—I would," he answered eagerly, "but the truth is that there's so many different kinds of soap, and it's so hard to know which is injurious to the skin, that I am afraid to take any risks."

TOO LITTLE BLOOD MEANS MUCH MISERY

That Is What Makes People Pale, Weak and Languid

The one source of most of the misery that affects men and women and growing children is poverty of the blood. If you consult a doctor he says on are anaemic, which really means bloodless. That is what makes people drag along, always tired, never real hungry, often unable to digest their food, breathless after the slightest exertion, and too often on the verge of complete breakdown.

More weak, anaemic people have been made strong, energetic and cheerful by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than by any other means. These pills actually make new, rich blood which reaches every part of the body, strengthens the nerves and brings new health and strength. The following is proof of Dr. Williams Pink Pills to restore health. Mr. Geo. Turner, New Haven, N.S., says: "No doubt due to constant hard work I got in a badly run down condition. It took very little exertion to tire me, and my appetite was far from being good. Often I had headaches, and when going up stairs or after any slight exertion my heart would palpitate violently and I grew considerably alarmed about my condition. I decided to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using a few boxes I felt much better. I continued using the pills for some weeks longer, and they completely cured me. I can warmly recommend this medicine to men who are weak or run down."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ENEMY LOST HEAVILY YESTERDAY AT VERDUN

French Troops Forced Every Line Back on a Wide Front

Six German Divisions Took Part in Yesterday's Attack

More Than One Hundred and Twenty Thousand Men Participated in Great Smash Against the French Lines on a Three Mile Front---German Attacks Were Repulsed With Fearfully Heavy Losses---Russians Are Sweeping Through Bukowina---Large Town Captured.

GERMAN ATTACK BROKEN UP

PARIS, June 24.—(French Official).—The French War Office announced that over six German divisions, or more than one hundred and twenty thousand men, participated in the great smash against the French lines on a three-mile front yesterday.

The Germans drove forward to within three and a half miles of the heart of Verdun, reaching the village of Fleury.

An immediate counter attack threw the enemy back from Fleury in the direction of the Caillette Woods.

The French followed up this advantage last night by powerful blows against the German flanks and centre, and forced the enemy line back on a wide front.

While this furious fighting was going on on the east bank of the Meuse, a violent battle began last night on the west bank of the Meuse. The Germans again attacked the French positions on Hill 304. Fighting went on all night, but the latest official despatches reported the repulse of all German attacks with fearfully heavy losses.

THE RUSSIAN ARMY IS SWEEPING THROUGH BUKOWINA

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, June 24.—The right wing of the Russian army is sweeping through Bukowina, and has crossed the Galician frontier, capturing the important town of Kuty. The Austrians evacuated Kuty, which is a city of about 10,000 inhabitants, immediately after the capture of Visnitz, across the river, by a strong Russian detachment.

There are indications of greater German activity in the extreme north on General Kuropatkin's front. The Germans have attempted several times in the past few days to start offensive movements in this region with the purpose of drawing off Russian troops from the Galician battle front, but each time the German attack has been broken up.

German Submarines Capture Number of Small Vessels

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 24.—The Great Eastern liner Brussels, which has been captured by a German submarine, and taken into a German submarine base at Zeebrugge, was a vessel of 1,400 tons. She has been plying between Harwich and Hook of Holland.

German submarines have captured seven small vessels around the Baltic and off Wilhelmshaven. This is the first report of the capture of a steamer by a submarine so near the coast of England.

Held a Conference With The Military Leaders

Special to the Examiner.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A News Agency despatch from Paris says that Kaiser Wilhelm last week held a Council of War with his military leaders to decide whether it was worth while continuing the offensive at Verdun with its awful slaughter of German lives. It is stated that the Emperor at the conference appeared depressed and worn. He eventually allowed the Crown Prince and General Von Falkenshasn to convice him that the Verdun campaign should be continued at all costs; hence yesterday's new German offensive.

Berlin Reports Capture of Prisoners

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, June 24.—German troops in yesterday's fighting took 2,673 prisoners, the War Office announced to-day.

American Aviator Killed

Examiner Special:

PARIS, June 24.—The American aviator Chapman, attached to the Franco-American Flying Corps, was killed in an air battle on Friday after bringing down two machines.

LAKEFIELD POLICE COMMITTED SUICIDE DURING THE NIGHT

Told Wife He Was Going For Glass of Water But Did Not Return---Found in Yard With Throat Cut

RESIGNED HIS POSITION

Almond Galvin, aged 33 years, committed suicide at two o'clock this morning at his residence in Lakefield by cutting his throat with a razor. A long deep gash severed his windpipe and both the large arteries of his throat. Death was almost instantaneous.

About two o'clock he went downstairs to get a glass of water, but when he did not come back at once his wife followed and found him in the yard all but dead.

Galvin had succeeded Sergeant Webster as police constable of Lakefield, but on account of ill health had resigned yesterday. No other cause was ascribed for his self-destruction than the recent illness. The deceased came to Lakefield from Selwyn in Smith township, where his mother resides. He leaves a wife and three small children, the oldest of whom is four years old.

The funeral will take place to Lakefield cemetery on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

FRIDAY NEXT IS MARKET DAY

The Buyer and The Seller of Market Produce is Asked to Remember This

Owing to the 1st of July (Dominion Day) falling on Saturday of next week, it has been decided to hold the regular weekly market on Friday, June 30th. The public are advised to keep this in mind as the farmer is being notified of the change, and no doubt will be on hand Friday, and nothing will be offered for sale on Saturday.

Electors Can Assist In Securing Another Good Industry For Peterboro'

By voting on Tuesday for the By-law to aid the Bonner-Worth Company the electors will assist in securing another good industry for Peterborough.

The company is now erecting large extensions to its present factory. If the By-law is carried they will establish a new industry on a lot west of its present factory for manufacturing another class of yarn.

The new factory will be under the same capable management, and it is important that it should be secured for this city, and as there is a large demand for the class of goods to be made the new industry will be a growing one from the start.

Private J. Reid of the Canadian Mounted Rifles Passed Away in Kingston

Left Peterboro' Early Last Year With the 8th C.M.R.---Was Invalided Home---93rd Band Left For Barriefield This Morning---93rd Battalion Football Team Winners in a Match With the Provisional School of Infantry---Today's Military News.

PTE. REID DEAD.

His many local friends will regret to learn of the death at the Kingston Convalescent Home for Soldiers, of Pte. Lyman J. Reid, a member of B Squadron, 8th C.M.R. Pte. Reid, whose home was in Havelock, where he was employed by the C.P.R., enlisted here with B Squadron of the 8th early last year and drilled with the local squadron here until it went to Ottawa early in March. He went overseas with the 8th, but became ill soon after reaching England, and was invalided home going to the Convalescent Home at Kingston, where finally death's call came. The body was taken to Havelock yesterday. Pte. Reid, who was the son of Mr. Jacob Reid, of Havelock, was a cheery likeable young man who made many friends while in Peterborough. They as well as his comrades in B Squadron will be sorry to hear of his death. Pte. Reid was never destined to see the firing line, but he gave his life for the Empire nevertheless.

The Band of the 93rd Battalion, which has been home from Kingston all week, returned to Barriefield this morning. Whether they will be home on leave again or not depends principally upon the length of the 93rd's stay at Barriefield.

Captain Birdsall who is in charge of the local recruiting office, Lieut. P. G. Might of the 93rd Battalion, and Lieut. Thompson of the 74th Battery, conducted a short recruiting meeting at the Auburn Woollen Mills last evening. The plant stopped work for fifteen minutes to give the officers a chance to address the employees. Many employees of the Auburn have already enlisted, but there are bright prospects of more.

CAMP NEWS.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP, June 24.—A football match was played last night between the 93rd Battalion and the Provisional School of Infantry, on the grounds of the former, being a challenge from the School, after seeing the game between the 109th and the 93rd, the night before.

The School, losing the toss, King chose to kick into the goal with the sun and wind behind, Keene, after robbing West of the ball, McCarthy shooting in; Griffin saved, the ball travelling quickly to the other end, West centered, Willshaw shot outside, from a free kick off West; Coulton put into touch. Pears robbing Palmer, passed out to Willshaw, Gillece clearing at the expense of a corner; Pears taking the kick, passed out to King, who scored the first goal for the Battalion.

Proctor, getting away from the kick-off, passed out to Willshaw, who shot outside. From the goal kick, Proctor getting possession, headed into the goal mouth, Hill, the heavyweight for the School, kicking into touch. Thompson, on the left wing, taking the ball down the wing, shot outside when in a good position, King receiving the ball, shot on to the back, the ball going in touch for a corner. Pears, being entrusted with the kick, passed over to Willshaw, West shooting hard into goal, the ball just missing the bar, from a foul off Hannah, West shot into goal, Hill fisting out, when hard pressed on a pass by Shaw. King headed finely into goal, McCarthy, playing left wing for the School, getting away on his lonesome shot wild, when close up, Gillece savin time after time the rushes of the 93rd forwards. Hardie pladed the ball into the goal mouth. A centre from Willshaw was intercepted by Murray, Kitchen relieving the pressure with a timely kick, King getting in a fine shot which Hill, in kicking out, passed on to Shaw, who banged the ball through for goal No. 2.

Give-and-take ruled for a time; eventually the ball went out to Hardie, for him to place the ball well into goal, King heading goal No. 3.

Pears dropped a corner kick right in front of goal, Willshaw shot, the ball going into touch. A fine piece of combination work on the part of the 93rd forwards, was brought to a halt by Gillece, who was playing a fine game for the school; a corner kick by Pears was placed the wrong

Tide Shows Many Signs of Turning

While There is Bitter Resentment in Ireland Against Militarist Rule the Majority Are Willing to Support Mr. Redmond and the Irish Party.

THIS WEEK'S REVIEW

By T. P. O'Connor

London, June 24.—As many times before the Irish problem changes with cinema variety and rapidity. Up to the beginning of the week all the difficulties of the Lloyd George settlement were concentrated in Ireland, but this week the scene suddenly changed to Downing street. For some days a vehement struggle has been going on between Mr. Lloyd George and some of his Tory colleagues, the latter seeking to disavow the terms proposed by Mr. Lloyd George. Necessarily any such disavowal would involve Mr. Lloyd George's immediate resignation, while on the other hand, the resignation of some Tory members of the Cabinet also is possible.

This transformation from apparently complete English and ministerial unanimity in favour of a settlement is due to the long delay in the negotiations, to the manifestations of continual unrest in Ireland, and to the fierce unscrupulous campaign of certain factionist organs in Ireland against a settlement, to the revival thus of the hope that Home Rule may be killed after all. But even on this point there is no firm cohesion among Tory ministers. Some are backing up Mr. Lloyd George as the representative of the Cabinet. The final arbiter of the action of the Tory ministers is Sir Edward Carson, who if he sticks firmly to his position, can force them into acceptance or deprive them of anything like large support among the English Tories.

CURIOUS COMBINATIONS.

Thus, we may have a curious combination of Mr. Redmond, Mr. Dillon, Mr. Devlin, Sir Edward Carson, Mr. Craig, Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George in favor of a settlement against both the English and irreconcilables of the Irish factionists.

Meantime in Ireland, the tide has shown many signs of turning. While bitter resentment against militarist rule and executions still makes the country restless the sound sense of the majority sees through the Independents' dishonest campaign to refuse liberty and thereby perpetuate militarism, and is rallying to Mr. Redmond and the Irish party. Mr. Devlin has been the chief agent in producing this turn in the tide, facing all concentrated enemies of the party and settlement with a series of brilliant, courageous speeches. A meeting of the six hundred Hibernians in Dublin, most of them against him when he started, gave him triumphant acclamations at the end. A similar scene occurred at a crowded meeting in Belfast where 18 priests were on the platform. One of the most respected priests proposed a resolution accepting the settlement, and when the vote came not twenty protested out of two thousand present. Mr. Redmond, Mr. Dillon, and every member of the Irish party, are represented by Mr. Devlin and all are resolved to stand or fall by the settlement.

A SURVEY.

There never was a moment in the history of Ireland when it was so difficult to form anything like an accurate or confident survey of her psychology. Revolutions, like war or an earthquake, produces such upheavals from ordinary conditions that it is inevitable that the ordinary outlines of even the most familiar landmarks should become blurred, if not obliterated. Up to about a year ago there was no firmer political fabric in the world than the Irish party. It had justified its existence for forty years by producing a more widespread and more beneficient revolution in conditions than has ever countred in so short a time in any country or any time. It had behind it the backing of nine-tenths of the intelligent Nation

CONCERT BY THE MASSED BANDS WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Bands of The 93rd Battalion and 57th Regiment United in Presenting a Most Delightful Programme in Victoria Park

HUGE CROWD PRESENT

In spite of the threatening weather a huge crowd gathered at Victoria Park, last night for the concert by the massed bands of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, and the 57th Regiment, and were rewarded with a splendid programme, admirably played. The bands mustered over sixty strong and the bandstand presented a very impressive appearance with the business-like khaki uniforms of the 93rd intermingled with the brilliant scarlet of the 57th men. The combined organizations directed alternately by Lieut. Gliddon and Band master Hughes, gave a splendid interpretation of the different numbers, and their playing was a treat, every number being enthusiastically applauded.

During the selections conducted by Lieut. Gliddon, Bandmaster Hughes played with the Band, following the baton of the leader under whom he has played for fifteen years, for the last time until the war is over, at least. In the 93rd Band there were many other ex-members of the 57th Band playing with their old comrades on the last occasion for some time, and this made the concert decidedly more impressive than the usual Friday night's event, combined with the fact that Peterborough may not have another opportunity of hearing her overseas band.

One of the best things on the programme was the overture "Raymond," which was most effectively presented. The two comic opera selections "Gaiety Girl" and "Pinafore" were both charmingly played, and dainty numbers were the waltz "Eileen Alannah," with vocal embellishments, and Lincke's "Glow-Worm".

Bandmaster Hughes of the 93rd, who for the past fifteen years has periodically delighted local music-lovers by his splendid work as solo cornetist for the 57th Band, played a farewell solo last night, and he has rarely been heard to better advantage. "Sing Me To Sleep," was his offering, and he played the number with beautiful tone and admirable reserve.

The programme was as follows:

March, "Triumphal" .....
Overture, "Raymond" .....
Cornet solo, "Sing Me To Sleep" .....
Bandmaster Hughes
Selection, "Gaiety Girl" .....
Selection, "H. M. S. Pinafore" .....
Intermezzo "Glow Worm" .....
Waltz, "Eileen Alannah" .....
March, "Highan" .....
"God Save The King".

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1916

A CONTRAST.

Here we have Sir Mackenzie Bowell, at ninety years of age, taking a 4,000 mile trip to the ice-bound Klondike. Yet we have among us all over Canada, a large number of young men, robust enough for river driving, who do not enlist for fear, perhaps, that the whole Red Cross organization cannot supply Bonner-Worth wool socks enough to warm their poor cold feet.

ERGO.

In the late general elections in Manitoba, when the Roblin government was on trial, the electors thought it was "time for a change" and they made the change accordingly. When the general elections came on in Nova Scotia, the electors did not think it was "time for a change" and they retained the government in power very emphatically. The people know what they want pretty well. When they get tired of a bad government out it goes; when they are satisfied with a good government, in it stays. Ergo—

CONGRATULATIONS.

The members of the County Council are to be congratulated and commended upon the prompt and unanimous, and unhesitating manner in which they increased the monthly grant to the Patriotic Fund from $1,000 to $2,000. Their patriotic action is all the more commendable since it doubtless represents the sentiments of their constituents who have shown their patriotic interest in Canada and the Empire by sending to the battle front a large and splendid proportion of the 33rd Battalion. The stay-at-homes show that they politely inviting Chili to unite with those who have enlisted to defend the interests of the homes and neighbours our soldiers leave behind them. It is an ill situation of the power and good will of all, each in his own way, to contribute to the winning of this war. While we are proud of our fighting fellow-citizens, we have also reason to feel proud of those they leave behind them, who do not forget the boys they have sent out to the battle lines.

THE CAUSE AND THE RESPONSIBILITY.

The Toronto Star thinks the reason of Quebec not doing its share of recruiting consists in the fact that Quebec has been shut off from old France ever since it came under British rule. It points the past few years, Britain and France have been enemies. There has not been the literary, social and commercial intimacy of intercourse with Great Britain that has kept alive the British spirit in the rest of Canada. Besides that, we have ourselves to blame for creating an anti-British spirit in Quebec. The organized clique of agitation against all things British, the Nationalists, have been for years poisoning the minds of the Quebec habitants. We in Ontario and elsewhere in Canada are responsible for that, and Frederic Borden most of all. When Nationalism first raised its head and sought recognition at the polls and put a candidate in the field against the Liberal candidate in Drummond-Arthabaska, Mr. Borden, the leader of the Opposition, gave the Nationalist candidate the sympathy and encouragement of his party—the election of the Nationalist would be a blow to Laurier. He was elected, and when Mr. Borden gained office in 1911, he took Nationalism to his bosom and made three members of the disloyal cult members of his government, and has kept the number up to his Cabinet to the present day, with frequent changes of personnel—for there has been a constant procession of Nationalist ministers from cabinet positions to fat offices. If the people stand the Borden government long enough it is fairly certain that all of his Nationalist supporters in Quebec will be kicked through the doors of the asylum to the safe and well paid shelter of the judicial or civil service. With the government of the day encouraging, and at a mighty high price, too, the agitators and the political element, that is patrolling the border of the Province of Quebec, habitants against British ideals, if it any wonder that French Canadian recruiting is not at high water mark; and is there much difficulty in placing the responsibility for the conditions that are alleged to exist? People who "sling-whang" Quebec in the matter of recruiting, should remember the divine reproof—"let him that is without sin cast the first stone," and if he should think it let him see that it hits the right head, the responsible head or heads.

SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL BUILDING.

It is the experience of all builders, that it is as a rule, an unsatisfactory, expensive and disappointing thing to undertake to improve and modernize an old building — something kin to the Scriptural idea of putting new wine into old bottles. The question of patching and repairing the South Central school building has become an acute problem for the Board of Education. Plans were prepared for changes and improvements required to make the building sanitary and comfortable and usable. The cost was estimated by the architect at nearly $13,000. The Board asked the City Council for $15,000 to cover the estimated cost and provide for contingencies.

When the tenders were sent in for the various items of improvement, it was found that the lowest total was $18,000—practically $20,000. It is no wonder that the Property committee, in face of the facts, declined to deal with the tenders, and decided to refer the whole matter to the Board in special session.

Would it not be well for the Board to reconsider the scheme of improvement that will no doubt cost at least $20,000? The ratepayers, not the Board, have to provide the money, and the wisdom of making so large an expenditure for repairs on so defective a foundation as the present buildings provide, is questioned by many ratepayers and friends of the school.

It is to be borne in mind that the nucleus of the present group of buildings was erected nearly, if not quite, forty years ago. One citizen remembers having attended the school there 38 years ago. With all the improvements that can be made, the venerable old pile cannot be converted into a building that will meet modern requirements for educational purposes. Spending $20,000 to make the buildings fairly satisfactory, will be only a temporary easing of the strained condition. At present the buildings are without grounds, and so hemmed in with other buildings on one side as to prevent satisfactory lighting of some of the rooms.

The South central school district is the most densely populated in the city, and at the best the present buildings can only be expected to serve the purpose for a very few years. It does not seem practicable to procure a new site and erect a new south central. With the growth of the city to the south and west, a new school centre will have to be established before many years. The interests of the district require that the present school should remain where it is.

It is proposed as a good means to meet the situation, to spend a nominal sum, to provide pressing necessities, new furnaces and a boys' lavatory, etc., at a cost of $1,500. This it is contended will make the school decently usable for three or four years. Meantime and at once, it is proposed, and it seems wisely, to secure ground suitable for a new building to be erected in the future. The present cramped grounds can be enlarged by securing the balance of the square—bounded by King, Rubidge, Stewart and Sherbrooke streets. The private property now in this square and outside the school grounds has an assessed value of $38,000.

It is said by good judges of real estate that this property could be procured by expropriation at practically the assessed value. Fifty per cent. added to the assessed value, considered equivalent to the real value, would mean an addition of, say, $15,000. If the amount saved by subtracting $1,500 for temporary repairs, from the cost of the larger improvement scheme —about $20,000, which would be $18,500— were applied to meeting the purchase price of the square mentioned, its net cost would be less than $25,000. This would be a very reasonable cost for a splendid site, in the heart of the city, for the new school buildings that must of necessity come within a few years, no matter how much we patch and sink money in the old pile of buildings which can never be made suitable for the requirements of modern education and the accommodation of a large school population.

It does not seem wisdom to spend almost the third of the price of a fine new building, on repairs to a pile of buildings which will, within a few years, have to be abandoned.

The Board must see that it is wisdom to look to the future. Former boards failed to do that, and so we have the present difficult situation. It is said that not many years ago, the square now needed for school grounds, could have been bought for as few hundreds as it will cost thousands to-day; and the cost to-day will be far below what the same grounds or similar grounds in the vicinity, will cost in a few years, when the erection of new buildings, with suitable grounds, will be forced upon the Board.

By spending $1300 or $1400 for urgent repairs to the old buildings they can be used while a new building is being erected on the new grounds. Thus, there will be no interruption of school work as there is bound to be, if the $20,000 scheme of improvement is carried out. Workmen say that it will be an absolute impossibility to have the larger repairs completed before school opens, as can easily be done with the smaller and less costly plan.

The suggestions made, and the considerations submitted, are not intended to be a criticism of the Board, but as things worth thinking over, in the interests of the ratepayers and of our educational future as well as present. True statesmanship consists in looking ahead and making the expedients of the moment, not an end, but a means of subserving future interests.

The Question of Canadian Immigration After the War

That Canada will obtain a huge immigration after the war is the opinion of all who attempt to discern the signs of the times, and the general belief is that the old figures of "a thousand a day" will be largely exceeded. Attention has been directed to this important matter during the past few days by Mr. Lionel Curtis of The Round Table, who appeared as a witness before the provincial committee for the organization of resources. The opinions he expressed were based on actual experiences in South Africa after the Boer war, when there was such a rush of immigration that the colony was unable to absorb it and bitterness and disappointment resulted. Restrictive measures had consequently to be adopted. Mr. Curtis says the cause of this post-bellum immigration is moral rather than economic, and is largely to be explained by the unwillingness of soldiers to settle down to their old modes of living, more especially if they had been accustomed to sedentary occupations. They have acquired a roving spirit. For some time after the war the tide of immigration from Great Britain to Canada will be limited only by the shipping available, and Mr. Curtis thinks it possible that if measures are not taken to care for these people, Canada may be compelled to close her ports even against those who have fought for the Empire, and some old soldiers who have landed and fail to find employment may drift south to the United States. As a remedy he presents a scheme by which these soldier immigrants may be trained by the Dominion Government until they are efficient farm labourers, and he claims that this practice is successfully in operation in South Wales.

The subject to which attention is thus called is certainly one of prime importance. Not only from the British Isles, but from Belgium, France, and Russia this country as a "land of promise" may expect a large inrush of persons who are anxious to better their condition of life, to escape the inevitable reconstruction which must follow the war, and to make a new start. In addition, and, as a first claim, we shall be called upon to provide for half a million or so of Canadians, most of whom forsook all to follow the flag of Empire. It is a great problem and one which needs judicious handling. And now is the time to lay plans in such a way that subsequent will be impossible and we shall be able to prove equal to an unusual opportunity.—Brantford Expositor.

Proof Positive of Food Shortage In Germany

Mr E. B. Fowler, 277 Rubidge Street, has received a letter from a friend in the United States, with whom he has business relations. This gentleman, a native American, who has just returned to the United States, after having spent 17 months in Germany, in a business capacity, has had splendid opportunities for seeing social and domestic conditions; and, in the following letter to Mr. Fowler, he tells of, from a neutral standpoint, the food conditions in Germany. As first-hand information regarding the food and other living conditions in Germany, it may be depended upon as picturing truthfully what the mad ambitions of the Kaiser has brought upon the German people:

Dear Friend Fowler.—It will be like a voices from the dead to hear from me. We left Germany April 17, and were sixteen days crossing. We sailed from Holland and had to go north as far as the coast of Norway, then stopped at Kirkwall, in the Orkney Islands, then by the west coast of Ireland to Falmouth, England, which took seven days. We had to make that circuit to try and escape the mines and submarines. We passed the very spot where Kitchener and his staff were lost. Europe is a very poor place to be now, and Germany is the worst of all. We were in Germany seventeen months, and you can imagine that it was not very delightful for us. They took me for an Englishman and my wife for a French woman and, seeing we could not speak a word of German when we arrived there, made it still more disagreeable. But it was not long before my wife could understand very well, and the aquareheads certainly did give us some pretty good calls, and after they found out that the United States was making shells for the Allies, and when President Wilson would send over a note on the sinking of the ships, I tell you we caught it then. My wife was coming to America in April, but I intended to stick it out a while longer, because the Company needed all the Americans there, but I was taken the last of March, with pleuro-pneumonia, and came very near 'kicking the bucket'; so the doctor said I could not live in that climate. The day I left Germany I guess nobody thought I would live to get to America, but I gained from the moment I reached Holland, and when I landed in New York I was looking and feeling very good.

The food question in Germany is very serious; in fact, we did not get enough to eat; and what you do get is adulterated. There is meat served only four days a week, and it is all boiled before roasting or frying to get the grease out of it, and only one-quarter pound a day is allowed a person. There are cards issued by the Government for all necessary articles of food, such as bread, potatoes, tea, coffee, sugar, butter, milk, etc. We had nothing but black bread all the time we were there, and it was like straw. There is allowed one-quarter pound of butter per capita for a month; one-quarter pound of sugar per day for a family; one pound potatoes per head a day. No milk is served after 9 a.m., unless one has a doctor's certificate, that one is an invalid; only one-half litre (about 3 half pints) of petroleum is allowed a month, and so on. Three days' fish and eggs, and the fish, in most cases, are about spoiled when cooked. Fruit is out of the question, an orange costing 10 and 12 cents apiece. Even soaps are so dear I do not know how the poor people are going to do their washing. Common black soft soap is thirty cents a pound, and it is laughable to us to read some of the papers saying Germany is not short of food for we know by experience. If England keeps up the blockade it is only a matter of time when Germany will be starved out.

The "Barefoot" Tire——and Why.

No concern in America made, of old, dared use as its latest facial vaunt, simply as many motor car tires as did The B. F. Goodrich Co. Our published challenge, still unanswered, proves this.

CONSIDER the means by which many Tires have been given maximum traction—i. e., by means of a frictional texture in the Rubber of their Anti-Skid Treads.

Assuredly such Tires do give Traction.

But, every time the brakes are put on, to make such Tires grip the road, the relatively hard, unyielding, and comparatively brittle, texture of the Rubber in their Treads causes these Treads to grind away on the pavement, to WEAR OUT fast at the point of contact.

The sudden efficiency of their grinding-Traction also tugs so sharply on the Rubber Adhesive between the layers of Fabric in Tire as to separate these layers.

There is little "give" to them—just as there is little "slide" to them.

So, they gain Traction at the expense of Mileage.

Because,—

The Safety-Tread on Goodrich Tires is made of a very unusual, secret and exclusive Compound, which we now call "Barefoot-Rubber."

It is much lighter, in weight, than the Rubber used in other makes of Tires, being free from the whitish "sand-papery" ingredients that are heaviest and inert.

Its lightness, however, is secondary to its CLING quality its STRETCH, its enormous STRENGTH and its MILEAGE.

HERE is how it acts in Automobiling,—

—When the weight of the Car bears on this clinging "Barefoot-Rubber" Tread, and the power is applied to go ahead or reverse, the stretch in the Sole (or Tread) of the Goodrich Tire acts as a sort of Lubricant between the Fabric Structure of the Tire and the Road.

Then the Barefoot-Rubber "Toes," of the Goodrich Safety-Tread Tire, CLING to the pavement (instead of grinding against it), just as your Bare Foot would cling to a slippery surface—without Grind, and so, with the minimum of Frictional Heat or Wear for maximum Traction.

Goodrich "Barefoot-Rubber" is now made into Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Motor Cycle, and Bicycle Tires, as well as into Goodrich Rubber Boots, Over-Shoes, Soles and Heels.

Get a Sliver of this wonderful "Barefoot-Rubber" at the nearest Goodrich Branch, or Your Dealer. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

That's the Stuff that GOODRICH Black-Tread Tires are made of. And, bear in mind that no Tires are "larger-sized" taken Type for Type.

GOODRICH——"BAREFOOT" Tires

Tanker Richmond Makes Record Transoceanic Tow

NEW YORK, June 23.—The arrival of the Standard Oil Company's big American tanker Richmond at Shanghai with barge No. 95 in tow, after a voyage of eighty-two days from New York, has aroused interest in marine circles over the feasibility of extending towing service for general cargoes to foreign ports.

For many years it has been customary to tow strings of three barges on the Atlantic coast from Norfolk to Boston, and even to points on the Maine coast, and latterly the towing service has been extended to embrace departure points from Brunswick, Georgia, and even from Gulf ports.

The Gulf towing has been confined largely to oil laden craft, but it has remained for the Standard Oil ships to undertake towing service across the Atlantic in all seasons of the year. At the present time the big tanker Iroquois is owing between New York and London and the Richmond has been on the London route prior to her present voyage it is said, for fully eighteen months.

The tankers towed in deep water voyages are practically as large as the vessels doing the towing, and only one vessel is towed. The Iroquois, it is understood, makes the passage between New York and London in about fifteen days.

RECORD TOWING VOYAGE.

The Richmond's tow to Shanghai is a record one to date, and the actual distance covered between New York and Shanghai is reported to have been 12,465 miles. The Richmond, after discharging at Shanghai has left for San Francisco with No. 95 again in tow.

The steamer Brilliant is another vessel of the tanker type which is making a regular practice of long tows out of the Gulf. According to information available the experience of the big tankers has resulted in standardizing several features connected with towing apparatus, not the least of which is the employment of English made flat wire strand hawsers of two inch diameter. The English made wire is used because it is cheaper and because it runs evenly as to stress properties. It is asserted that the best grade of American hawsers is made of imported English flat strands.

Towing engines are installed on both the towing vessel and the vessel towed, but only one towing engine is put to use at a time.

The form of engine employed is known as a modified Providence gear. The modification effected does away with the excessive chafe which arose in certain well-known makes of towing engines.

In fine weather the towing is done on the brake, and when both vessels are light the steamer takes the hawser from the barge. With both vessels levelled, the steamer gives her hawser to the barge.

BAD WEATHER PRECAUTIONS.

In heavy weather both hawsers are used at lengths of 200 fathoms, or a single hawser may be used payed out at 250 to 300 fathoms. In actual service one of these standard English two-inch diameter steel hawsers last usually one year.

A Ford type of towing check is installed at the stern of the steamer, and a similar towing check is fixed in the bow of the barge. These towing checks are mounted on ball bearings the effect being to obviate any tendency to snap the hawser when sharp changes in the courses are made.

In securing the hawsers recourse is had to trap hooks. The hooks are fastened to the decks and the loop of the hawser is passed over the tongue, when the clevis is brought into position to hold the tongue from moving. In case of accident a sharp blow will shear the pin, thus allowing the clevis to release the tongue and the hawser. These tongue bits have a height of 2 feet 9 inches and occupy a fore and aft deck space of 2 feet 1 1-2 inches. The approximate net weight is 560 pounds.

Belts are not used at all in securing the hawsers, as it has been found a too difficult matter to let a line go quickly when made fast to the ordinary type of towing bolt.

In heaving in the hawser a five-inch line from the winch is employed At each end of the hawser an eye is spliced around a solid cast steel thimble.

The towing check, as installed, is the saver of the hawser in many instances. The roll which supports and guides the hawser is carried on a pin in a forged yoke, which swings on a pin suspended from the top casting. The lower end of the yoke is provided with a roll. This roll works in a radial groove in the base casting. No matter how the hawser leads, the yoke will swivel so that the hawser will lead fair, from whatever direction it may be pulling. These towing checks weigh aproximately 1,750 pounds and cover an athwartship deck space of fifty inches, a fore and aft deck space of twenty-five and a half inches and a height of thirty-three inches.

THE SAG BELOW WATER.

The practice in the deep sea tows is to carry only one turn on the drum to the towing engine. So far as can be learned, the Standard Oil vessels seldom, if ever, find it necessary to let go a line, no matter how bad the weather. An interesting fact disclosed by one master by actual test—namely, that when 200 fathoms of steel hawser was out the sag below the water suface reached a maximum depth of about seventeen fathoms and that frequently when towing through the Florida Straits the hawser scraped over the ground. This latter fact was made known by the action of the towing engine.

The principle of the towing engine involves a combination of the elastic steam cushion and the automatic relief to the hawser. The latter obviates a continual straining of the line and a consequent tendency to break. The distance between the vessel in tow and the towing ship may be altered at will by means of the towing engines, the advantage of which is apparent in a crooked channel or when passing under bridges. In heavy weather, when a heavy strain is suddenly put on the hawser, the towing engine automatically relieves the line, and when the strain relaxes the engine winds in the hawser. The strain on the hawser can be regulated at will at a fixed pull and automatically the strain is maintained.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

INFORMATION BUREAU IN CANADA.

This Bureau exists for the purpose of answering enquiries as to the condition and progress of disabled Canadian soldiers. Until it was established the only way for friends of wounded men to obtain news was to write to the War Office in London or to the London Branch of the Canadian Red Cross. This necessarily involved loss of time. The information Bureau now receives by weekly mail from England the lists of casualties compiled daily in the Record Branch of the War Office from the reports transmitted by the various field and other hospitals. It also receives the weekly report of visitors to the Hospitals containing Canadian sick and wounded. From these lists and reports a card index is compiled, and kept posted by a staff of twenty voluntary lady workers.

Enquiry as to the nature of the casualty and the whereabouts of a wounded Canadian soldier, can now be satisfied in a couple of minutes by turning up the card bearing his name in the card index, on which, week by kwt soirdf loimfw yoimfwy yoifaw vaof week, the reports of his condition are noted, together with his changes of hospital as he is moved from one to another in the course of convalescence.

The information thus accessible to Canadian enquirers is of course, not cabled from England but comes by post so that the latest news that the Information Bureau can supply is always that of ten days previous to the date of enquiry.

Anyone is at liberty to write and make enquiries regarding their relatives or friends' conditions, and all particulars available will be gladly given by "The Information Bureau", CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY, 77 King Street, Toronto.

The splendid Canadian Red Cross Hospital at Cliveden, on Mr. Waldrof Astor's lovely estate, which is recognised as one of the famous beauty spots of the Thames, is second to none in the completeness of its plan and arrangements.

On Wednesday of this week, it was inspected by the British Medical Military Authorities, who were unanimous in praise of it, and said that in general appointments and especially in the system of handling food, there was nothing to equal it in the British Army. Such enthusiastic praise must have afforded great pleasure to Col. Neal Marshall, President of the Canadian Red Cross Society, who was the guest of Lord and Lady Astor (as they are now) and who is in England inspecting the Canadian Hospital and methods of working, etc. Col. Marshall drove with the King and Queen show their interest to visit the patients and inspect the building. By such acts of courtesy do the King and Queen show their interest in, and appreciation of the work of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

We cannot but be impressed by the great thought bestowed on the selecting of sites for the many hospitals, and also how carefully the surroundings are taken into consideration.

Just to mention two or three can we imagine more exquisite surroundings for the convalescent soldier than are to be found at Buxton.

Situated at an altitude of one thousand feet above sea-level, amidst the lovely hills and scenery of Derbyshire, and not far from that queen of mansions and home of romance—Haddon Hall. It has famous mineral wells, the waters of which are peculiarly beneficial to those suffering from rheumatism. The Peak Hospital as it is called, was formerly a general one but it has now been decided to increase its usefulness and so it is to be reserved for our soldiers who have been sent back from the front on account of rheumatism and it is full of such to-day.

Dr. Guest of St. Thomas who served so gratefully through the ill-fated Dardanelles campaign is the Superintendent.

Then we have the hospital gifted by the King to the Canadian people at Bushey Park where the grand old chestnut trees never fail to excite the admiration of every visitor. Hampton Court was in bygone days the palace of the proud Wolsey.

Its famous gardens were laid out by "Dutch William" but every summer georgeous with adch beds of flowers as "Dutch William" never beheld.

Here Cromwell used to rest after his week of overwhelming care, and in quieter times the last sovereign of Charles' house "Great Anne" used "sometimes counsel to take, and sometimes tea."

It is amid the singing of birds and the wondrous beauties of nature that the men who have been fighting the battles and have suffered in the fighting thereof are being gradually wooed back to health and also to the realization that there remains much in life that speaks of peace and beauty in spite of the horror and brutality of the scenes through which they have recently passed.

Another new and beautifully situated Canadian Red Cross hospital is the Kingsdlife Convalescent Home for nurses. This hospital is in the Cliftonville district of Margate, and is surrounded by a small park.

Margate is one of the favourite watering places in England, and possesses a beautiful beach, good bathing facilities and an abundance of entertainment all of which are desirable features as regards a convalescent home for nurses.

The Maple Leaf Club which was started by Lady Drummond in London, has proved such a boon to our soldiers when on leave that an additional building has been secured and it has been enlarged in order to meet the great demands made upon it. Our boys are loud in its praises, and also delighted with its very moderate rate of charges.

Do not address letters sent to a soldier in hospital "c|o Army Post Office", London. Postal authorities have no means of tracing soldiers from one hospital to another. Such letters should be addressed with the rank, initials, name, number and regiment, c|o Canadian Red Cross Society, 14 Cockspur street, London S. W.

Many are already aware that the Canadian Red Cross "Prisoners of War Food Fund" some months ago made arrangements to have bread made in Berne, Switzerland, sent direct from there to the prisoners in the various camps in Germany. This has worked well, and the Bureau is now supplying fourteen thousand Canadian and British prisoners with bread. The British Legative in Berne estimates that 98 per cent of the bread arrives safely and in good condition.

Now that Germany is actually feeling the pinch of want, the prisoners also experience it, and the prisoners who are exchanged are giving increased evidence of this, and urge food being sent in increased quantities. One prisoner named Sanderson says without hesitation, that it is an undoubted fact that the English and Canadian prisoners are more harshly treated than are the French.

He says the men are very generous towards one another, sharing up the contents of the parcels.

The local society is contemplating trying to do even more for this Fund than they have hitherto been able to do, for it is a brauch of the work worthy of all the support we can possibly give to it, and means a very great deal to the prisoners both in the moral and physical sense, as it helps to keep them physically fit, and also bears to them a message of cheer, that though prisoners they are not forgotten by those for whom they fought.

The knitting demonstration given last Monday afternoon to the workers in the Red Cross Room by Mrs. Nattrass was most interesting and greatly appreciated.

A very good contribution has come in this week from our Lakehurst Auxiliary, which evidently has good and faithful workers among the things sent are two very nice quilts.

SERVICE.

NO MEDICINE AS GOOD FOR LITTLE ONES

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. The first few doses make her realise there is nothing to equal them in making baby well and keeping him well. Concerning them Mrs. C. E. Stilwell, Winthrope, Sask., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and have found them so good for my little ones that I always keep a box in the house." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

King Edward Chaffed the Kaiser.—When King Edward and Queen Alexandra were at Potsdam on a visit to the Kaiser in 1909, the Kaiser was one evening talking to the King in his private smoking room about the great veneration the German people had for him. "To them," said the Kaiser, "I am a god." "Well, you make a more imposing god in uniform than you do in tweeds, Wilhelm!" said King Edward. This was one of the things that the King said to the Kaiser that the Emperor was reported never to have forgotten or forgiven. This was just in accordance with the character of the Kaiser: the loss just at his own absurdly high estimation of himself was an unforgivable sin in his eyes.—The London Magazine.

Plenty of Grain Little Meat

NEW DICTATOR ADMITS, TOO, THAT POTATOES ARE VERY SCARCE—BLAMES BRITISH MONEY FOR DUTCH EMBARGO.

BERLIN, June 24.—There is plenty of grain on hand in Germany to carry the country over until the harvests, declared Adolph Von Batocki, president of the Food Regulation Board, in an address at Dusseldorf. The potato situation was more unfavorable, he said, and would be especially difficult during the next fortnight but the deficit could be met by arranging for increased bread rations for physical laborers. The potato situation in Western Germany had been made worse by Holland's prohibition upon exports due to the agitation there, which, Herr Von Batocki said, was probably induced by "British money".

MAY PROHIBIT MEAT.

Herr Von Batocki said it had been proposed to prohibit meat consumption for two months, but that this was impracticable unless a better distribution of the supply of fats could be effected. If that could be eventually done, the proposal could be considered.

The control of bread stuffs during the coming year would be unchanged, except that flour of uniform grade would be introduced. An effort would be made in the autumn to regulate the whole year's potato supply. This might result in reducing the number of swine available, but that must be accepted as a part of the bargain.

In general, added Herr Von Batocki, an effort would be made, based on the experiences of the last two years, to insure the more accurate establishment of amounts of food [illegible] on hand, sharper control and the most equitable possible distribution.

CENSUS OF SUPPLIES.

In the first of a series of open letters which Herr Von Batocki intends to write for the press treating on the work of his department, he deals with taking stock of food stuffs and the question of private stocks and households. Experience, he says, has not justified the assertion that a census would reveal great supplies in households; nevertheless such a census will be taken as soon as preparations can be competed, and the process will be repeated from time to time. There is no intention, however, of confiscating all stocks thus found. The criterion will be whether the amount possessed by any household is a proper quantity for the use of the family. If there is no undue retention of perishable foodstuffs, and no suspicion of an accumulation, beyond the needs of the household, for speculative purposes, the stocks will not be confiscated.

THE SHOES I CAN'T WEAR

All Because of a "Touchy" CORN

BUT you can wear them, Madam—and now. Simply place on that corn a little Blue-jay plaster, and never again will you feel it. In two days there will be no corn. It will disappear for good. Millions of women know that. They don't pare corns. They don't use old-time methods. And they don't suffer. When a corn appears they end it. We are urging you to join them. Corns are needless since Blue-jay was invented. So they are absurd. You can prove in one minute that Blue-jay ends corn aches. You can prove in two days that it ends them forever.

Trades and Labour Notes

About the usual number of delegates turned out this week to the meeting, which happened to fall on Midsummer Day, though none could excuse absence on account of excessive heat. President Chas. Hammacott occupied the chair.

The Civic Salaries Cut.

An editorial in a local paper seemed to imply that the Trades Council had debated on the question of the reduction of salaries of those in the city's employ, and had come to a decision condemning such action. Such, however, is not the case, and the question was raised at last week's meeting. Organized labour is in favour of the worker getting his fair share of wealth produced by the combination of capital and labour, but in the case in point the worker with the pick and shovel has a hard enough task in making both ends meet these days. It is always harder for the man at the bottom to get a boost in his wages, yet he is entitled to a home and a family as much as the man higher up. With all consideration and appreciation of the abilities of the officials affected, the Council decided that as the matter stands now, that is, a 10 per cent. cut on all salaries over $750, they were of the same mind as the City Council. Prosperity in a city can be judged by the number of working men living in their own homes, with the crushing weight of taxation as now it is cheaper to live in the other fellow's house, and an economizing Council is the one that is going to star.

No Celebration This Year.

This is a condition caused by the war, and considering the number of union men who have enlisted, added to those who are indifferent and do not care to help, it was decided to abandon the Labour Day celebration this year.

Another War Condition.

The Council had great hopes of making the Labour Hall a social centre, as well as a rendezvous for labourites. A piano was installed, but all know how the war has dampened social life, the expected balls and parties did not come off, and by the looks of things will be dead for some time to come. The piano will be offered to the highest bidder among the membership next meeting.

The Barbers' Fight.

The barbers' delegates discussed the situation of the barber now in the Little Windsor stand. Regarding Mr. Johnston's statement to the delegation that the barbers' organization was not always run right, that may be the case as barbers are only human, but they desire to recall the fact that Mr. Johnston promised that when a certain cut price barber had finished out his lease the shop would not again be let to another. The present occupant was cut price barber No. 2 to occupy the Little Windsor stand. Delegates were asked to report back to their locals Mr. Johnston's attitude.

Good for the 93rd.

One active member of the Council who has donned the khaki turned up to say good-bye. Whilst giving his farewell speech he added that Peterborough could well be proud of the 93rd. For example, crossing a certain bridge down at Barrieffeld, the men are searched for liquor. One night 90 prisoners was the result of this search, and not one of them belonged to the 93rd; same thing occurred when the number of men taken was forty. The men expect to leave on the 15th July for overseas.

A Belated Report.

G. L. Myland, the Council's representative at the Berlin Convention of the Labour Educational Association, presented his report on what he saw and heard during his visit, at the conclusion of which a hearty vote of thanks was tendered.

Next meeting, July 8th.

IRRITABLE NERVES RESTORED AND HEALTH REGAINED IN A SIMPLE WAY

The man or woman who is run-down, not feeling up to the mark, perhaps, irritable, nervous or sleepless can well afford to learn about the wonderful results the newly discovered blood-food is giving to folks that use it.

There is wonderful power in this new blood-food, and every weak, pallid person can be quickly nourished back to health that uses it as directed.

After each meal, with a sip or two of water, you simply take two little chocolate-coated tablets, sold in all drug stores under the name of "FERROZONE."

The effect is noticeable at once. You feel happier, brighter, more contented. That old-time feeling of weariness departs—you forget your "nerves" and no longer get irritable or cross over trifling annoyances.

There is a reason for this change and that reason consists of the fact that Ferrozone contains blood-making materials you can get in no other way.

Ferrozone makes the blood tingle and sing with new vitality. This ensures lots of nourishment and strength being supplied to every part of the body.

No wonder the eyes brighten and the cheeks raniate color and happiness. With abundance of strength, a keen appetite, good digestion and plenty of sound sleep—all the result of Ferrozone—you quickly feel as if life held new charms and pleasures.

The Bonner-Worth By-Law To Be Voted on Tuesday Next

The Company Has More Than Fulfilled its Obligations to The City in Connection With the Present Plant. The Proposed Agreement is For an Entirely New Factory.

The public is asked to acquaint themselves with the particulars of the by-law which is to be presented to the freehold voters of this city on Tuesday next. The Bonner-Worth Co. is one of the most important manufacturing establishments in the city at the present time, and with the carrying of the by-law on Tuesday will become still more important and of greater value to this city.

This by-law does not refer at all to the additions the company is now putting up. These additions are two buildings, one 95 x 66 feet, two stories high, for an addition to the factory proper, and the other 37 x 36 feet, two stories high, to enlarge the dye house. The present dye house is also being raised one storey. With these additions the company will give employment to about 300 employees in their present factory, instead of thirty, which they agreed to employ when they came here five years ago.

The by-law to be voted upon on Tuesday has nothing to do with the present factory or these extensions of it. It refers to a new factory to be established here by this company.

In the present factory the Bonner-Worth Company is manufacturing yarn used for making sweater coats and similar yarns. They have seen an excellent opening for making another class of yarn by another process and they purposed organizing a new company for that purpose. There was a question with the promoters as to where the new factory would be located, some of them favouring Peterborough and some another city in Western Ontario. The Council offered them a site and a fixed assessment for ten years if they would locate the new factory here. This offer was accepted, and it was decided to erect and carry on the new factory under the same name without organizing a new company. This by-law is to carry out the arrangement made with the company and to secure the new factory.

For the new factory the company will erect a building at least 70 x 100 feet, two stories high, west of their present buildings, and give employment to at least thirty operatives. That is the number they agreed to employ in their present factory, but they have greatly exceeded that number, and they expect that the new factory will be as progressive as the present one.

The Bonner-Worth Company has shown that it is under capable and progressive management, that has made a great success of their present industry. The new industry will be under the same capable and enterprising management, and the electors should not fail to poll their votes for the by-law on Tuesday and secure the new industry.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION HANGS IN THE BALANCE

Steps Will be Taken to Find out Whether or Not The 10th "Coloured" Cavalry Were Too Agressive When They Were Cut Up By Mexican Troops

A HOT DEBATE

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 24. — The prospect of a general invasion of Mexico by the United States still hinges on the question as to whether the ill-fated 10th Colored Cavalry, were not too aggresive when they were cut up by the Mexican troops.

So far no official report has been received from any comissioned officer engaged in the fight and such report is anxiously awaited before the Government can make a decision on the most momentous question as to whether the United States should be plunged into war as the result of this affair.

BILL DEFEATED.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—An attempt by Senator Reed of Missouri to rush through the Senate to-day a bill to pay the National Guardsmen $30.00 a month while they are on active service, brought one of the hottest debates of the Senate. The bill was defeated.

Candian Privates get $33.00 per month and separation allowance for married men.

CONVICT SHOOTS TWO OFFICERS ESCAPES FROM DEATH HOUSE

Sing Sing, June 24.Oresta Shillitani, a convict, who was sentenced to be executed on June 30, shot and wounded two keepers in the state prison early to-day, escaped from the death house, and fled to the Ossining hospital, where he was recaptured and taken back to the prison. The two officers wounded are named McCarthy and Bullard. McCarthy suffered a bullet wound in the abdomen, but it is not considered serious. Bullard was shot in the arm.

After wounding the officers Shillitanti obtained the keys to the death house, unlocked the door, scaled a wall, and wearing no clothing, ran to the hospital. There he was placed in a padded cell and later, raving like a madman, was taken back to the prison.

Shillitani was sentenced to death for killing two policemen in New York city three years ago. After a hunger strike of several days he recently became apparently crazed by terror during a double execution.

How Shillitani obtained his revolver is unknown. It was stated that he was visited by two relatives, one of whom, a woman, was not searched. They talked to him through a screen in front of the death house cells. There is an opening about two inches wide between the bottom of this screen and the floor through which a revolver might be passed.

When Shillitani escaped he was wearing his clothes, but he stripped himself soon after leaving the prison and was nude when he reached the hospital.

Mr. Long Called To Michigan

Mr. Harry Long left this afternoon for Michigan to attend the funeral of an old neighbour in Alberta. He received a telegram this morning announcing that a neighbour living on the farm adjoining that of Mr. Long at Irma, Alberta, was dead. The body is being brought to Grand Branch, Mich., for interment, and Mr. Long goes to pay the last tribute of respect, to an old neighbour he valued very highly, and whose death he greatly mourns.

PORT HOPE'S BIG DAY

Port Hope will observe the 49th anniversary of Dominion Day by a monster celebration on July 1st. A feature of the attraction will be the presentation of the colours to the 136th Battalion by Col. Hughes of Toronto. The afternoon programme will consist of horse races, baseball tournament, acts by four of the greatest lady acrobats on the continent, wrestling matches and all kinds of athletic sports. In the evening there will be a band concert, acrobatic stunts and a regular Vaudeville entertainment. Two bands numbering seventy-five pieces will furnish music during the day. Special, after evening performance, leaving at 10.30, for Peterborough.

Butter Was Weak On The Market To-day

Sold Down to 24c. a Pound and Probably Was Sacrificed at Still Less to Be Disposed of Butter sold as low as 24c. a pound on the market this morning, and it is very likely that it fell below even that price before all that was offered was disposed of. The figures ranged in this order: 30c, 28c, 26c, and at the latter figure the market was still weak. On the other hand, eggs were very scarce. They had sold out early at 25c a dozen, and at eleven o'clock the baskets were empty. Chickens sold from 50c up, and potatoes were $2.00 a bag.

TEMPORARY REPAIRS TO PIGEON CREEK BRIDGE

The Pigeon Creek bridge discussion between the counties of Victoria and Peterborough required a visit of the Peterborough councillors yesterday in order that every member might be familiar with the situation. The trip was made in automobiles, and it was decided to make certain temporary repairs, but the Council does not accept any responsibility for those who use it.

VERDUN TRAGEDY IN N.Y. STATE

Lyons, N.Y., June 24. — Martha Lorenz, unmarried (29) committed suicide by jumping into the Erie canal. She had been a domestic in the employ of Dr. Watson, court dentist at Berlin, Germany. About a year ago she came with Dr. Watson and family to this village. She was engaged to marry a young man who was killed recently in charge at Verdun.

Japan Friendly To the States

Will Not Supply Mexico With Munitions—Feeling is Against War.

TOKIO, June 24. — The Mitsui Company told the Associated Press yesterday that it recently received inquiries from the Mexican Government as to whether it could supply munitions and arms, and replied that it could not.

"Of course, any claim that the Japanese Government will assist Mexicans with munition and arms is out of the question and absurd,' said Baron Ishii, Foreign Minister. "As for private Japanese companies selling arms to Mexicans, I consider it extremely improbable. As you know, all available rifles and guns are being furnished to Japan's allies. And I fancy that munitions not available for our allies may have found their way to China during the revolutionary troubles.

"The Japanese nation sincerely hopes that armed conflict between the United States and Mexico may be avoided. Japan's interest in America, north, central and south, being essentially pacific and commercial, any event bringing disturbances into the American market would be felt keenly in Japan. This is especially true at a moment when the whole European trade is virtually closed to Japan and the Chinese market is seriously upset."

FORFEIT FORD JOBS BY ENLISTING.

DETROIT, June 24.—In line with his pacifist policies Henry Ford announced that any employees of the Ford Motor Company who are members of the Michigan National Guard, will not only not receive pay while absent, but will forfeit their places as well. Many Ford employees who intend to enlist as recruits in the Guard likewise will relinquish their places, it was said.

MOTOR LEFT RUNNING ALL NIGHT CAUGHT FIRE THIS MORNING

A motor that had been left running all night by some employee of the English Canoe Co., Charlotte Street, caught fire this morning about 4.30 o'clock, causing damage of about $350. Police Constables Blade and Wigg discovered the blaze and reported verbally to the Fire Department.

CHILDREN AND MATCHES.

At 10.15 this morning the firemen had a run to 174 Douro Street, the residence of Mr Daniel Holland, where a small fire was extinguished. Several children in the house had been playing with matches, according to the report, and clothes in a wash stand had caught fire. The damage was comparatively light.

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT---

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

alists of Ireland. Mr. Redmond was in almost as powerful a position as Parnell before his downfall, and had more than justified his position by his statesmanship, courage and prudence. Then came the various factors that eventuated in the rebellion; and from the period when the Sinn Fein movement became powerful and menacing, the situation of course was transformed. I have written, I should say, hundreds of times, that the Irish Parliamentary Party is like the French Republic. It had in normal times nine-tenths of the same men of the country, just as the French Republic has, but, also, like the French republic, to some extent, some entirely unexpected event if not combination of untold circumstances, might shake it to its very foundations. This is what happened; and now let us see how far the fabric can re-establish itself.

SINN FEIN MOVEMENT.

In the first place, the Sinn Fein movement, like every other movement of revolt in Ireland, gathered to itself all the discontented elements in the country. The politician, disappointed in obtaining a seat in parliament, the factionist, determined to produce chaos in the hope that his particular group will emerge victorious from it; a certain number of clergymen who have been in sympathy with the Sinn Fein movement—all these elements are hostile now and may remain hostile, though I do not think it is likely. To all these conflicting forces must be added the vast number of people who have been estranged and exasperated by the wholesale and insane era of repression which immediately followed the putting down of the rebellion.

ESSENTIALLY SAME.

While stating these difficulties very frankly, I must go back to the fact that nine out of ten of the same men of Ireland are still on the side of the party. If it were not so one would have to despair of the sanity of the Irish people; and though now and then a section of them do lose their senses under special conditions, the Irish people are as a nation essentially sane. Indeed they are in this respect more like the French than any other people: underneath the foam and fury that sometimes are on the surface there lies that deep sea of sane and clear political instinct. The new Ireland, indeed, is not merely new in the development of new aspirations and ideals, of which the Sinn Fein movement was in part the child; but also in the vast increase of men with an interest in the tranquility and the material prosperity of the country. There are now, as everybody knows, 300,000 heads of families in Ireland who own every bit of their lands free from rent, from landlords, from bailiffs, and all the old accessories of the rent office. These have turned to the soil in that spirit of hope which was impossible when they were all liable to rack rent and eviction. They were working with the same indefatigable industry as the peasant proprietors of France. They are advancing visibly every hour in self-respect, self-control, as well as in material improvement. They wear better clothes, eat better food, they have all better houses; there are few of them who have not now their deposits in the banks. The war of course has added to the material prosperity of the agricultural population of Ireland. There has been no country indeed which in comparison has in this respect been more contributory to the food and other resources of the armies of the allies. Thus the Irish party will still have at their side this great huge majority of people, and I cannot but think that when a new Irish National Government begins its work it will be able to confront and defeat all these destructive forces of which I have spoken.

THE OPTIMISTIC VIEW.

Another cause for taking an optimistic view of the future of an Irish Government is that there has been, in spite of appearances to the contrary, a steady process of appeasement of party feeling even between the North and the South. There is not a single Ulsterman, however bitter his political traditions before the war were, who does not believe and in private openly asserts, that any division between the North and the South of Ireland must be temporary; indeed the mere fact of Ulster's pride being considered in a temporary exclusion of Ulster would be sufficient to dissipate some of the virulence that exists, though not in as many quarters as before. Belfast is largely ruled by its business men, and the Belfast business men recognize more than anybody else in Ireland the economic dependence of the North upon the South of Ireland.

As to the South, Unionist exists in a few of the leisured class, who learn nothing and forget nothing; and there is a strong current in favor of exploiting home rule, honestly working it for the best. Any new Irish government will certainly do its best to win this side of Irish opinion I should hope. I should not be surprised to find that in any new government that was formed in Ireland and in any new legislature, care will be taken to include in the ranks and the rulers in Ireland men who were Protestants in religion and Unionist in sentiment, but who by their distinction as men of business had every reason to take their share in recreating Ireland. That I can truly say from personal knowledge is the temper of men like Mr. Redmond, Mr. Dillon and Mr. Devlin. The two latter are supposed to be more extreme than Mr. Redmond, but as on previous occasions, men like Mr. Dillon and Mr. Devlin are very much misunderstood by political opponents. While ardent fighters, they both have cold political judgment and a large and broad spirit, and instead of opposing, would strongly back Mr. Redmond in a broad policy of toleration and of religious and political appeasement.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish through the columns of your valuable paper to thank the North American Life Assurance Company of Toronto and their representative, Mr. Geo. A. Benor for the prompt and satisfactory settlement of our claim on the life of our late father, Mr. J. D. Armstrong. The claim papers were completed and sent to the Company on June 21st, and we are in receipt of the Company's cheque for the full amount of our claim on June 23rd. This promptness in the way of settlement speaks once again of the great value of life insurance, and we have no hesitation in recommending the North American Life as a desirable Company to insure with.

QUILTS FOR THE MISSIONARIES

Seven are Being Prepared by The Ladies of Springville—Items of Interest

The ladies of Springville congregation, augmented by several from Lakevale to the number of twenty-five, assembled at the home of Mrs. H. Clark on Tuesday afternoon, where they enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Clark as they engaged in quilting seven missionary quilts, which are being prepared by the Ladies' Auxiliary to be forwarded in their annual bale. Mr. S. Stinson of Fowler's Corners and Councillor Ball of Cavan was present taking a very prominent part in the social part of the programme.

Has Returned.

Mr. H. Baptie, deputy-reeve of Cavan, has returned from Cobourg, where he has been attending the session of the County Council. Mr. Baptie is considerably disappointed in not securing the desired and very necessary grant for the boundary road between Cavan and Monaghan. Mr. Baptie interviewed the Minister of Highways, who recommended making this road a permanent highway according to plans and specifications of the Highway Commissioner; the government to pay sixty per cent. of the cost of production and assist in the upkeep, the different municipalities to bear part of each item. This is certainly a step in the right direction and Mr. Baptie's efforts to make our roads better are heartily endorsed.

Action For Damages.

Considerable interest is being taken in the action for damages now pending between F. E. Wilson, our local grain dealer and Robt. Hooten, ex-Reeve of Cavan. His case was heard by Judge Huycke on Tuesday. The evidence showed that Robt. Hooten obtained peas in the spring of 1914 from F. E. Wilson. A contract was made and signed by both, by which Hooten was bound to sow and deliver the entire crop to Wilson, who was pledged to pay Hooten a specified price. The market value of peas in the fall of 1914, on account of shortage and special demands being much higher than the contract price, Robt. Hooten sold his peas regardless of the contract. Wilson claimed, and proved a considerable loss as a result. Judge Huycke in summing up the evidence made very clear the special clauses of the contract, pointing out the clause by which Wilson retained ownership of the crop under all conditions. Therefore to dispose of it in any other way without permission from him was a criminal act. Judgment was given in favour of plaintiff. His Honour wishing to review evidence before stating amount of damages to be paid by Hooten to Wilson.

REPORT ON THE CROP SITUATION

Record Breaking Crop is Looked for in The Canadian West

MONTREAL, June 24.—The following reports were received from the west to-day:

Regina, Sask.—Provincial Government reports on crop situation show grain in excellent condition practically all over, wheat is up to ten inches in some districts, and oats up to five inches, prospects indicate a good hay crop, barley also is well; nearly all over flax conditions are equal to and in advance of last year in most places.

Southern Alberta.

Lethbridge, Alta.—Prospects are bright throughout Southern Alberta for a repetition of the record breaking crop of last year. Reports are coming in of remarkable growth of grain following heavy rains and recent warm weather. Wheat is ten inches high in most places and a few fields are more than that.

LAWYER KILLED, PINNED UNDER HIS AUTOMOBILE

Southampton, Conn., June 23.—R. Burnham Moffat, a New York lawyer, with offices at No. 61 Broadway, was instantly killed when his automobile skidded and upset on the highway near here. His wife and daughter, Miss Elizabeth Barclay Moffat 18 years old, were thrown into the road, but escaped with minor injuries. Mr. Moffat was pinned under the automobile. Besides his wife and daughter, he leaves two sons, J. Pierrepont Moffat, aged 20 years, a student at Harvard University, and Abbot Low Moffat, 15 years old, a student at Groton School.

PETERBORO BOY REPORTED WOUNDED

Name of John T. Hardwicke Appears in The Casualty Lists

In the list of casualties yesterday is given the name of John T. Hardwicke of Winnipeg, as wounded. Mr. Hardwicke is a son of Mr. John T. Hardwicke, 489 Cross street and left Peterborough for the west about six years ago, where he has resided since. He enlisted in Winnipeg with the Engineers with one of the first contingents. He was married and his wife is residing there.

His brother Charles of the C.P.R. Telegraph Office, is also at the front.

BARRIEFIELD EXCURSION WELL PATRONIZED

Both C. P. R. and G. T. R. Took Crowds of Excursionists

The special C.P.R. excursion to Barriefield this morning left promptly at 8 o'clock, and was well patronized. More than three parts were women and children, families of soldier fathers and husbands in camp, who no doubt will be delighted to meet each other again, even if the weather is not the brightest.

The regular G.T.R. left at 8.30, taking back the 93rd Band and a good number of their acquaintances as well.

$ 5.00—cost of new wheel on a Ford car.

$ 7.87—the 60 per cent. saving secured by the Ford owner.

And this merely indicates the general saving in every item of upkeep in which the Ford possess a big advantage over any other make of car.

An assembly of Ford spare parts—enough to build the touring car complete—cost only $40 more than the standard list price of the car, while on the average car priced around $1000 and less a complete set of spare parts costs $941 more than the car—over twenty times the Ford excess cost.

And yet tests conducted by one of the most authoritative Government laboratories in the world have shown that the quality of Ford constructive material is actually superior to that in most of the best cars made.

The Western Fair

September 8th to 16th

The Poultry Exhibit at the Western Fair, London, Ontario, in September next promises to be a very large one as usual. Poultry Breeders have come to the conclusion that a win at London's Exhibition means considerable to them. The prize list is a very liberal one and the cups and trophies offered by the Exhibition Association in addition to the cash prizes makes it very attractive from an Exhibitor's standpoint. Prospects are very bright this year for the whole Exhibition. A very large amount of space is already allotted and applications are coming in daily. A real live programme of attractions will be given twice daily before the Grand Stand. Prize lists, entry forms and all information regarding the Exhibition will be given on application to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, London, Ont.

AN EFFORT TO PREVENT WAR

Argentine Government is Anxious to Avert a Clash Between United States and Mexico

Special to The Examiner:

BUENOS AIRES, June 24. — The Argentine Government will despatch a note to Chili to-day or to-morrow politely inviting Chili to unit with other South American republics at the present time in an effort to prevent war between Mexico and the United States.

LONDON, June 24.—Pope Benedict will appeal to President Wilson and General Carranza in an earnest endeavour to avoid war, said a Rome despatch circulated by the Wireless News Agency to-day.

FATHER AND SIX SONS, FRENCH-CANADIANS, ENLIST.

Ottawa, June 23.—One striking example to French-Canadians in regard to enlistment is furnished by Fred Denis of Hull, a French-Canadian. He and his six sons have all joined one of the new battalions. Five of the sons are married.

side of the bar, the ball going into touch. Half-time came with the 33rd leading 3 goals to nil.

THE SECOND PERIOD.

King set the ball in motion for the second period, the ball being rushed towards the other end, the opponents coming back, through McCarthy, who shot wide; Ryan cleared at the expense of a corner; the corner was nicely placed, McCarthy rushing the ball through, this being the first goal scored against the 33rd.

From the kick-off the 33rd forwards rushed towards the goal, and scored through Proctor. Kiss, getting away, was pulled up by Gilliece. A free kick against Proctor was nicely placed, Kitchen relieving by kicking into touch. McCarthy, the inside left for the School, missed an easy opportunity to score. Griffin was playing a sterling game in goal, saving twice in quick succession. Spring was getting through a lots of useful work, constantly checking his wing. Gilliece robbed Proctor when in a good position, from a centre by Hardie. King scored, the ball striking underneath the bar, for goal No. 5. From the kick-off the School raced towards the 33rd goal, Hannah missing the goal; McCarthy, with a glorious opportunity to score, made a wild attempt. Shaw headed in another goal, but a foul against the 33rd spoiled the chance. The whistle blew with the 33rd still pressing, the game ending with the score 5 goals to 1.

Referee, Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp.

CAMP NEWS.

A piano has been installed in the new marquee, for the use of the boys during their stay in Barrietield.

Word has been received by Mrs Jay, 196 King Street, wife of Sergt. Jay, of the 93rd Battalion, that her brother went down with the Turbulent, in the naval battle off Jutland, having served 19 years in the navy. Another brother is reported missing at the front.

Sergt. Lacey of the Armourers' Staff hears that a brother has enlisted in the Navy. He has also another brother just returned to the front after being wounded in the Persian Gulf. A third brother is serving with the Australian Forces.

Sergt. Millership was the recipient of a gold-headed cane from the Military Police of the Camp.

Major Watt, Captain Thompson Captain Tastwood, Lieut. Eastwood. Lieut. McNabb left camp yesterday for a few days.

First-class certificates have been received by the Officers Commanding for the Signallers of the 93rd Battalion from the School of Signallers, Ottawa.

RE AUCTION SALE OF RUBBER BOOTS.

The following letter was received in camp, addressed to Sergt. Toone:

Re Rubber Boots:

As I am unable to be present at the auction sale on Saturday, June 24th, kindly bid $5.00 on my behalf, and previous to the sale see that the auctioneer has his license to sell, or there may be a hitch in the proceedings. "Get me"? I am at the present time unable to report to, on account of having no boots to get around in. If, however, the camp boots realize more than the amount, I have instructed Sergt. Toone to bid on my behalf. I am up against it, and shall be obliged to depend absolutely on the Sergeants of the Battalion to help me out. I am at the present time suffering with a weak heart, brought about by the excitement of having to part with my rubber boots. In the event of the sergeants being generous enough to buy the boots in again, I feel sure my heart will get strong again and would then return to camp again, but keep the Auctioner out of my path.

Yours respectfully,
Dressmaker and Paymaster Sergt.
93rd Battalion.

The 5-ar batteries being recruited in Kingston, including the 74th, are to be moved into Barrietield Camp, 130th and 136th moving to Valcartier, to make room for them. They will, in all probability move in at the beginning of next month.

Word was received from Headquarters that through the generosity of Mr. E. G. Patterson and the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company, a machine gun has been presented to the 93rd Battalion. A suitable acknowledgement has been sent to Mr. Patterson.

The following letter has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Cuffe:

Mr. and Mrs. Cuffe,
32 Benson Avenue.

Dear Friends,—It is with very great regret indeed that I take this opportunity of extending to you, on behalf of the entire staff of this office, as well as myself, our sincere sympathy in the loss of your son, Private Trevor L. Cuffe, who has given his life for the freedom of his country.

Words cannot express to you our great disappointment in not being able to look forward to his return again to take his usual place in the office. Nor can I express to you in mere words how both the staff and myself enjoyed his comradeship and his pleasant association when he was with us, having endeared himself through his pleasing and willing manner to all his associates in the office, and I may say that we will not soon forget him.

Kindly accept this small token of flowers as a token of sympathy from his comrades on the staff of the Peterborough Post Office.

J. EDGAR,
Postmaster.

Mrs. Cowan, 125 Park Street, has received word from the Record Office, Ottawa, to the effect that her husband, Private George Nelson Cowan, has been struck off the list of seriously ill. He has been admitted to Number 13 Stationary Hospital, Boulogne, June 23rd, suffering from a gunshot wound in the tibia. He left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion.

Barrietield War Camp, Friday, 24.—This morning Col. Hemming has decided that the city of Kingston will be given the privilege of seeing the largest military force the city has ever known, parade through the principal streets. Over 10,000 men who are now in camp will be turned out for a route march to Portsmouth. The parade will be composed of nine battalions, with nine bands, and bugle bands, one of the bands being a pipers' band. The troops participating in the route march will leave the camp about nine o'clock and will march to King street, out King to Portsmouth, then back over Union street to Barrie, up Barrie to Princess and down Princess street to Ontario street, and will then return to camp.

Lectures on interior economy are being continued by Maj. Prideaux, S.O.O., 3rd Military District, and all who have taken the course so far speak in the most complimentary terms of the field covered, and the information imparted.

The 93rd, 109th, 139th, 136th have sent representatives to the course of lectures delivered by Maj. Prideaux.

The men will be marched off parade to their lines and will at once commence to lay out their 'kit' which will be ready for inspection by 10.30 a.m.

BADGES FOR OFFICERS.

It is published for the information of all concerned that all members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force should wear the title 'Canada' on the shoulder strap of jacket. These shoulder titles are a free issue on demand to N. C. O's. and men and will be provided by officers out of their outfit allowance.

GARRISON BOARD OF OFFICERS.

A Garrison Board of Officers composed as under, assembled at 9.00 a.m. in the Orderly Room of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., for the purpose of inquiring into and reporting upon, clothing in possession of N.C.O's and men of that Battalion.

GUARDS.

The duty unit for the day will furnish a guard consisting of one N. C. O. and three men for duty at the pump house on Cartwright shore, to mount daily from this day (inclusive) at 5.30 p.m. in front of the Administration Building.

TROOPS LEAVING CAMP.

The attention of officers commanding units leaving camp is directed to the fact that they are responsible for their lines being clean and in a sanitary condition before departure.

C. J. JAMES DIES VERY SUDDENLY

The Agricultural Commissioner is Stricken at St. Catharines—Lasting Reforms Accomplished While Deputy Minister of Agriculture For Ontario—Administered $10,000,000 Federal Grant

TORONTO, June 24.—In the prime of life, and at the very zenith of his influence, Charles Carniff James, C.M.G., M.A., LL.D., F.R., S.C., better known to the people of Canada as C. C. James, Dominion Agricultural Commissioner, came to his end with tragic suddenness last evening in St. Catharines. He had been for a week a guest at the Queen's Royal Hotel, Niagara-on-the-lake, in company with his wife, her father, Mr. James Cranson of Cobourg, and her sister, Mrs. W. R. Riddell of Toronto, and party last evening went along late to St. Catharines by the radial car line to receive medical treatment for a slight indisposition. Just before the car reached its destination in St. Catharines, a soldier sitting a few seats behind Dr. James noticed him in a position strangely motionless. As soon as the car could be stopped, Dr. F. G. Greenwood of St. Catharines was hastily summoned to the radial company's freight office, to which the lifeless form of Dr. James had been removed. The doctor stated that death had come instantaneously as the result of heart failure.

Havelock May Ask To Be Relieved of One Patriotic Gift

Early in the year Havelock Council made a grant of $600 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and under the County's levy they are called upon to pay an additional $410. Reeve Fennel pointed out this morning that the Havelock Council did not anticpate that the County's grant would be so large. The combined contribution would total over $1,000. He asked that the County Council strengthen Havelock's hand in applying to the Patriotic Fund Committee for a consideration of the fact that Havelock Council made a grant unaware of the County Council's action.

A motion as desired was passed, being presented by Reeve Walsh, seconded by Reeve Ketchen. Reeve Anderson pointed out that the Council was contributing at present only to the Patriotic Fund. The Red Cross and Belgian Relief quarterly grants had been discontinued.

NO ROAD BUILDING IN COUNTY UNTIL WAR CONCLUDED

The comprehensive road-building scheme which the County Council has discussed more or less during recent sessions will not be entered upon until the war is concluded. This was the attitude expressed at the closing session this morning. Reeve Cohen remarked that the obligations to the Patriotic Fund and other patriotic efforts the municipalities might make would preclude the possibility of the undertaking of road building with the Government's assistance.

Reeve Anderson stated that the Government had ceased the work and would not recommence it until labour and other conditions were favourable, but he urged that the preliminary survey might be applied for. If it required an outlay on the county's part it need not be effected, but if the Government engineers would perform this work, the County would be in a position to commence road building whenever conditions warranted it.

Mr. Eason urged the desirability of being in a position to begin work when returning soldiers would be seeking employment.

A motion was passed recommending the Special Roads committee to apply for the survey work of county roads as a measure of preparedness for the future. Reeves Cohen and Ingram offered an amendment that no action whatever be taken for the present, but the amendment was defeated.

Reeve Fitzgerald remarked that the ratepayers were being accustomed to patriotic giving, which money at the close of the war could be diverted to road work and the demand would not be noticed.

NO MORE KILTS REGIMENTS FOR OVERSEAS FORCES

OTTAWA, June 23.—No more kilts will be issued to Scottish regiments of the Canadian overseas forces. Units which have the kilts now will have to wear trousers when their present clothing has been worn out. The pipers are to be the only exception in the order just issued by the Militia Council. However, Scottish corps will be allowed to wear the Balmoral instead of the regulation staff patterns caps as a distinguished mark. It has been found that the kilt is not suitable for trench work in rainy and cold weather, and was caused considerable inconvenience. Active militia regiments will not be affected by the order.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HAL CHASE, PEEVED AT FIRST, IS NOW HAPPY WITH REDS

Hal Chase undoubtedly is glad that Garry Herrmann was a bit harsh—and firm—with him when Hal decided he'd much rather play in the Pacific Coast League than with the Redlegs. Of course, no one can play with the Reds and be perfectly happy at the same time, but Hal is much more joyous than he hoped to be.

It was this way:

Harry Sinclair assumed the contract of Chase and, after considerable dickering, sold the "peerless first sacker" to Garry Herrmann. When the sad, sad news was carried to Chase he at once got in touch with Sinclair:

"Please, kind sir, do not add to the sorrows of my life by making me play in Cincinnati," pleaded Hal. "Let me go to the California league. If you do I will accept a cut of $2,000 per year in my two-year iron-clad contract."

"You don't belong to me any longer," answered Sinclair. "Speak to Herrmann."

"Yu'll play in Cincinnati or nowhere."

Rather than be forced out of baseball, Chase decided to go to the Reds. His real objection to getting back into the majors was because he feared ridicule if he failed to deliver the goods. During recent years Chase achieved the unenviable honour of being the most panned man in baseball. Chase had stood as much of it as he could. He wanted to go some place—like California—where the knockers were fewer.

But, as you know, Chase joined the Reds, and he has become one of the idols of the town. His playing at home and abroad has been spectacular. He has hit, too—and with considerable frequency. His fielding, both around first base and in the garden, has been brilliant.

Hal Chase expected he'd become a 'goat' by going back into the majors. Instead, he has become something of a hero again.

Willard Has No Intention Of Retiring

Champion Is Content With Occasional Fight, and Will Not Quit in a Year as Rumoured

New York, June 23.—Jess Willard has no intention of retiring from the ring next year—or the year after, for that matter. The Pottawatamie giant is merely biding his time. He is now content with an occasional fight, once a year on an average. Shortly after 1918 sets in, however, Willard will inaugurate a fighting campaign never before attempted by a heavy weight champion.

A question of personal animus is keeping big Jess from fighting more often. True, he is a class by himself and his challengers are a negative quantity, but were he so inclined the champion could pick up $25,000 or $30,000 every month or so by taking on the leading contenders for his crown.

The real reason for Willard's reluctance to fight more than once a year just at present is due to the fact that he cannot figure why he should pay out such an enormous percentage of his earnings. Right now Willard has two men "cutting" in on his income—Tom Jones, his legitimate manager, and Jack Curley, who superintended Willard's match with Jack Johnson.

Willard likes Tom Jones, and does not begrudge the Kewanee man his "bit." But Jess sees no logical reason why Curley should receive one-tenth of his profits from the ring, and to prevent Jack Curley from profiting from his labor, Willard is quite satisfied to let slip away from him a few paltry thousands.

Circus work is not in Willard's line, repeated interviews with the champion on the subject notwithstanding. However, he prefers it to appearing in the ring as long as Jack Curley, under a contractural agreement, is entitled to 10 per cent. of his ring earnings. Just as soon as Curley's contract expires, do not be surprised to see Willard fight on an average of once every six weeks or two months.

CIRCUS WORK AGREEABLE.

Rather than remain passive, and to add to his tonnage, Willard finds circus work agreeable, as it tends to keep him in good condition, without the severity of the training grind. Jess does not detest training as much as we have been led to believe. He finds it entertaining so long as he does not have to make an extremely low weight for him—something like 245 or 250 pounds.

By the time Willard is ready to take on his challengers as fast as they come there will be quite a formidable crop to confront him. At present the pick of all heavyweights is that they require more seasoning before they can cope with the monolith Jess. Within two years the crops should be developed sufficiently to give Willard a heap of trouble.

In two years Fred Fulton will be almost a seasoned fighter. He has a couple of physical advantages right now, and with increased weight should become a serious contender, if he can meantime overcome a tendency to wilt from a hard punch to the jaw.

JOHNSON AS A TOREADOR

MILWAUKEE, June 23. — There have been reports of late about Jack Johnson, the former heavyweight champion, being broke in Spain, but the originators of the same are no doubt doing a lot of guessing. Any person who can afford to pay out $15 for a cablegram these hard times in Europe is not broke, nor anywhere near it. A letter would have answered the purpose, and it would have cost only five cents, but nothing like that for 'Li'l Arthur.'

Evidently Jack became a bit homesick, and wanted the sporting people here to know that he is still alive, and hustling, for he sent the following cablegram from Spain:

Barcelona, June 20—T. S. Andrews, Milwaukee, Wis., U.S.A.—Wish you would state that I am fighting a bull here June 26. No 'bull' story, but fact.

"Also state that I will fight Sam Langford, Sam McVey, Willard, or any one who may be selected, in Mexico, Cuba, or any place. Best regards to all my friends,

"Jack Johnson."

Jap Net Champion Has Arrived In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Kumagae, Oriental champion and one of the greatest tennis players ever developed in Japan, is here. Kumagae is to make a tennis invasion of the United States, and plans to participate in the important tournaments of the season.

Peck Griffin, the local player, who has made two tours to Japan, received a letter from Kumagae in which the arrival of the invader and his plans were made known. He left Yokohama on May 27, and is doing some travelling to show his skill and ability on the courts.

Playing on Coast.

Kumagae is playing in the Pacific Coast championships at Del Monte that started today. He is entered on the singles.

The Japanese won the championship of the Far West last year by defeating Peck Griffin, and he holds victories over other well known local players. He has competed against Willie Johnston, Ward Dawson and Carl Gardner, and they all agree that he gives promise of developing into a champion.

The Japanese is a short and stocky individual who wears glasses while playing tennis. He is very fast on his feet, and plays a smashing game.

The Japanese originally took up tennis with an ordinary rubber ball, and in order to get over the net he was forced to smash the ball hard. In this way his driving was improved wonderfully.

Coming East in July.

After Del Monte, Kumagae will go to Long each to play in the Coast doubles championship on July 4. He will find a suitable partner while playing in the singles. Then he will go East and enter all the important tournaments. He will make a try for the national title of the United States.

It is the first time that a Japanese player has invaded this country in quest of tennis laurels. They have made a stand in baseball, sending over three or four teams, and have proven apt pupils in sporting competitions. Several American teams have gone to Japan and they have marvelled at the rapid advancement in the play of the Orientals.

Fear Troopers Were Wiped Out

Reinforcements Sent to Rescue Had 70 Miles to Go—Another Raid by Mexican Bandits

El Paso, June 24.—All that was left of Captain Boyd's command—the 30 troopers who fought their way out of the trap at Carrizal—have been wiped out in the grey hills between Ojo Berredendos and San Luis, is the alarming report that reached Fort Bliss to-day, shortly after receipt of Gen. Pershing's first official version of the Carrizal fight.

At the same time, information was received here which is said to make it almost a certainty that the American troops will move on Juarez within 48 hours.

The last message received by Pershing told how the troopers had started a slow retreat from Carrizal, followed by the soldiers of Gomez. The Mexicans realised that the retreat must soon come to a halt. What horses had not been killed by the fire of the machine guns had been used by couriers to Gen. Pershing.

A courier galloped back to Villa Ahumada for reinforcements. These had about 70 miles to cover. It is feared at Fort Bliss that they arrived too late.

Pershing Heard From.

Washington, June 24. — Secretary of War Baker made public a report from Gen. Pershing on the fight at Carrizal, based on personal questioning of men from the two troops of the Tenth Cavalry engaged in the conflict. It indicated that the attack upon the Americans was unprovoked, but gave no estimate of casualties on either side.

Gen. Pershing had not had an opportunity to confer with any officer of the two troops, and Secretary Baker said that a definite conclusion as to where the blame rested could not be formed.

War Inevitable.

Lima, Peru, June 24.—A lengthy note from the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs was received at the Foreign Office. It set forth the opinion of the Mexican Government that war with the United States was inevitable, on account of the methods employed by the American Government, and pointed out that all the republics of Central and South America would be affected by a conflict.

Another Raid.

Columbus, N.M., June 24.—Armed Mexicans have crossed the American border southwest of Hachita, New Mexico, raided a ranch and stole the horses.

Needed on the Border.

Washington, June 24.—Announcement of the new orders that all units of the various State Guards be rushed south as soon as organized was made officially after yesterday's Cabinet meeting. No explanation was offered for the change in the original plan to send only a part of the available guardsmen at present, and officials would not discuss whether news of any important developments in Mexico had caused the step.

To-day's orders are expected to result in the immediate movement toward the border of separate regiments from many states whose entire National Guard strength has not been assembled.

Special Agent Rodgers at Mexico City advised the State Department to-day that the Carranza Cabinet still was considering the American note refusing to withdraw the troops from Mexico, but that no final decision had been reached.

No Unfair Advantage.

Santiago, Chile, June 24.—Chilean newspapers take the view that the United States will exact from Mexico nothing more than a guarantee in respect of the safeguarding of the frontier. The view is taken by the press that, on account of internal disorders and lack of stable government, Mexico is no longer entitled to the customary consideration accorded by nations to each other. But in view of the declared policy of the United States toward smaller powers, the newspapers say it is hardly to be expected that the United States will take any unfair advantage of Mexico enfeebled as she is by long internal convulsions.

One Way to Prevent War.

Washington, June 24.—Amos Pinchot, who presided at yesterday's meeting of the Union Against Militarism, which to-day sought to arrange a conference at El Paso between representative Americans and Mexicans, declared that this proposed commission would have behind it "the power of American public opinion, as well, probably, as that of Mexico." He continued: "We have wired to President Wilson our belief that the American troops now in Mexico should be withdrawn and that a war arising from their continued presence there would be a national humiliation. The American people don't want war. The situation to-day is in the hands of the 'El Paso liar' and to the military advisers of the Administration. Together they can plunge the country into war overnight. There is only one way to stop them, and that is to have at El Paso a courageous unofficial civilian commission which can get at the facts and present them with fairness to both sides.

AGAINST PINCH HITTING.

Ban Johnson Says It Has Injurious Effects.

Chicago, June 24.—The pinch hitter craze with which baseball managers appear to have become afflicted, has a strong opponent in B. B. Johnson, president of the American League, according to a statement made public by him here. He declared that he favoured baseball legislation to curb the pinch hitter habit.

Johnson thinks that managers by constantly shifting their pitchers are not only injuring the pitchers, but are reducing the interest felt by steady patrons of the game in the players.

150 Refugees Are Sent To Hoffman Island For Baths

For seven hours the Quarantine officials wrestled with the problem of separating the unclean from the still less clean on board the steamship Dante Alighieri, of the Transatlantica Italiana line, which arrived at New York from Naples, and did not allow the steamship to proceed to her pier in Jersey City until 150 of the 1700 immigrants had been taken off and sent to Hoffman Island for observation and a general cleaning up. Not one of them the general health officer said, was suffering from any real ailment other than filthiness.

Of the 1700 steerage passengers 800 were refugees from Serbia, Albania, Greece, Syria and Armenia, and it was from their number that the candidates for Hoffman Island were recruited.

Captain Angelo Sturlese, commander of the ship, who has long borne the title of "Cavaliere," received a cable message when his vessel reached Gibraltar, notifying him that the King of Italy had conferred upon him the degree of Knight of the Order of Saints Mourisio and Lazaro. This was in recognition of Captain Sturlese's conduct in connection with the Dante Alighieri's seven months' service as a transport ship.

Like nearly all other Italian passenger ships, the Dante Alighieri carries two guns aft for defence. Owing to the presence of the guns Captain Sturlese met with a great deal of trouble to procure coal when having run short of it he put into Cadiz on the present voyage to New York.

The Spanish authorities, the captain said, refused to allow him to coal on the ground that it might be construed into an unneutral act to aid in coaling "an armed vessel."

One of the sixty-four horsemen who were returning aboard the Dante Alighieri was brought over in irons. He is said to have threatened to kill the captain when the latter endeavored to quell a general fight among the horsemen.

Daniel D. Bidwell, returning from a business trip to Venice, said that he had been introduced to the Patriarch of Venice.

"The Patriarch told me," said Mr. Bidwell, "that the Venetians feel grateful to America for having saved them from starvation. He said that the lace industry is practically the only thing they depend upon for support. The markets of England and Germany have been closed to them since the war and the United States is the only country upon which Venice has been depending for exports. In 1916 so far exports of lace to the United States, the Patriarch told me, amounted to three and a half times as much as in any previous year."

Harist Chandra, an East Indian, who is editor of a newspaper published in Delhi, will address the convention of editors in this city. He said that he is secretary to the Maharajah. He declined to speak about conditions in India, and when asked whether there was any truth in the rumours of disloyalty existing in that country he said, "I will not say a word until I deliver a speech in two days."

Mrs. Dorothy Carolyn Heath, who had been residing in Florence since 1900, said there was an American Hospital in that city and that the women of the American colony are devoting themselves to hospital work. "Many of the women are most delicately nurtured," she said, "yet they perform the meanest sort of menial work with a zeal which is as pathetic as it is noble." There are 100 beds at the hospital.

Domenico Truda, of the firm of MacDonnell & Truda, agents of the Transatlantica Italiana line, made the round trip on board the Dante Alighieri. He said that at Punta Garda, St. Michaels, the Azores, he saw two ships which had belonged to the Germans, which the Portuguese had commandeered. What their names were originally he did not learn, but the names which they now bear are the Santa Maria and the Gracious.

Dr. John Sherley of No. 135 West Sixty-fourth street, a member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons said that the mortality among horses shipped to France is very much less than during the winter months. "Last winter two hundred out of nine hundred died during one trip," he said. "Now there are many trips during which scarcely any die."

Faces Death For Graft

Former Russian War Minister Received Enormous Bribes.

PETROGRAD, June 24.—The report of the commission which investigated the charges against the former War Minister, Gen. Soukhomlinoff, is creating tremendous excitement.

The commission appointed for the investigation by the Imperial Council has been at work four months.

The commission states that Gen. Soukhomlinoff received enormous bribes from army contractors. He had organized a regular and extensive system of graft. The statements made by Raevski have also connected Gen. Soukhomlinoff with the activities of Lieut.-Col. Mjassejedow, who was executed some time ago for treason. The commission charges the ex-Minister with high treason, and states that he drove the country unprepared into war, so as to be able to graft on a larger scale than before.

The court clique dominated by the monk Rasputin is doing its utmost to save the indicted general, but he will probably have to pay the penalty for his crimes.

SHOWING EXTENT OF ARABIAN REVOLT AGAINST TURKEY—The Arabs have sickened of the corrupt and bloody rule of Turkey, and the revolt against the latter has assumed substantial proportions. Mecca, the "Holy City" of the Mussulman, has been seized by the nomad tribes, and other seats of Government are in the hands of the rebel forces.

SHRUBB IS RE-ENGAGED TO COACH HARVARD MEN

CROSS COUNTRY RUNNERS PREPARE FOR CORNELL, YALE AND INTERCOLLEGIATES.

Cambridge, Mass., June 23.—Alfred Shrubb of Toronto, who has been re-engaged to coach the Harvard University cross-country team, has ordered all the members of the band he will train, to report at the Belmont course on September 18, a week before the college opens, to get ready to meet Cornell at Ithaca, November 4; Yale, at Cambridge, November 11, and to prepare for the intercollegiates at New Haven on November 25.

The most dependable men he has to build up his team from are Captain Bancroft and Whitehouse, of '17. King of '18, and Hutchinson of '19, the latter Captain of the freshman team last fall.

BRAVEST OF MEN HAVE MOMENTS OF WEAKNESS

INCIDENT IN FLANDERS REFUTES THEORY THAT EXHIBITION OF COWARDICE INDICATES FEEBLE CHARACTER.

Not a few New Yorkers will recall the case of Patrolman Walsh, who because he feared to rush up stairs after an armed murderer, was publicly humiliated by Commissioner Bingham, and dismissed from the department.

Commissioner Bingham expressed somewhat too theatrically at the time the primitive conception of an exhibition of cowardice as proof of an ineradical weakness of character which makes forfeit for all time the respect and regard of one's fellow men. Psychologists long ago riddled this notion. A. E. W. Mason devoted his widely read novel, "The Four Feathers," to a repudiation of it, and now there comes from the front in Flanders an incident which would finally dispose of it.

So unimpeachable an authority as Professor J. H. Morgan, the results of whose recent visit to Belgium, were summed up in the Bryce report, related the story to an audience at University College, London. It concerned a sergeant who had lost his nerve and had been sentenced by court martial to five years' penal servitude for cowardice. But before the sentence could be enforced the Prussian Guard assaulted the British lines, and in the ensuing fight the sergeant conducted himself with such bravery that had he not been technically under arrest, he would probably have won the Victoria cross. His sentence was quashed, but even more fortunately his dramatic reversal of form led to the passage by parliament of the army sentence suspension act, which officially recognizes the coward's capacity for redeeming himself.—New York Tribune.

OBJECTORS PUNISHED.

Sentenced to Ten Years for Refusing to Obey Orders.

LONDON, June 24. — The Daily News says that four privates in the non-combatant corps — composed of men with conscientious scruples against fighting, who are detailed to work behind the lines — were court-martialled at Boulogne for refusing to obey orders and sentenced to death. The sentence was later commuted to ten years' imprisonment.

The affair has caused a sensation and will be taken up for discussion in Parliament on Monday.

BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

This picture not only shows what the Huns did in Belgium, but what would positively transpire should the Germans ever get to Canada's shores or the United States. It shows what would happen to Canadian homes, women and children should the Germans ever get to this continent. The Star Theatre, Toronto, did the largest business in the history with "The Battle Cry of Peace," and its manager expresses through the press his highest admiration for this wonderful patriotic film. It not only shows the danger of German aggression, but displays in unmistakable words, Canada's and the Empire's necessity for preparedness and a stern resolve to defend our homes and ourselves.

The Strand ran this picture for two full weeks with crowded and delighted audiences and was compelled to play a return engagement for another week.

Dept. of Militia.

Lieut. Col. J. G. Might, O. C. of the 169th Battalion (O.S.), under official heading of the Dept. of Militia, strongly endorses this picture as the grandest war film, with historical and educational interest, ever produced. He tells how, by showing German atrocities in Belgium, taken right on the spot, Zeppelins in action and other real war scenes, it should greatly assist in recruiting. It, according to his statements, shows the absolute necessity for "preparedness" in Canada. Another part of his letter says: "This picture should be seen by every man not in khaki and if the women, too, could witness the awful sights so vividly depicted, it is difficult to believe that they would hold back any longer from letting their men do their duty."

Mayor Church.

Mayor Church of Toronto, over his own signature, in an autograph letter, praising the Battle Cry of Peace and advising every man and woman to see this splendid 9-reel war picture says that it will go down in history as an epic.

This picture, that will begin at 2.30 Monday afternoon at the Grand Opera House, will run for three days only. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with matinees each day.

KOHLEMAINEN IS PLACED WHERE BULLETS ARE NOT

NEW YORK, June 23.—Hans Kohlemainen the long-distance runner, was transferred to-day to depot service by Col. Foote of the 14th Regiment, Brooklyn, to whom Kohlemainen sent his resignation two days ago as a member of the National Guard.

Most of the guardsmen who have tried to avoid joining their regiments have been tried before a delinquency court appointed by the commanding officers. After talking to Kohlemainen, however, Col. Foote transferred him to depot duty at the 14th Regiment Armory.

Kohlemainen, when ordered to join his regiment for service in Mexico, complained that he joined the 14th as an athlete to run on military meets, not as a soldier.

LANCE-CORP. MARTIN REPORTED WOUNDED

BELFAST, June 24.—A conference of Ulster Nationalists was held yesterday to consider David Lloyd George's proposal for the settlement of the Irish question. John Redmond presided and was supported by Joseph Devlin. Mr. Lloyd George's proposal was accepted by a vote of 475 to 265.

Delegates from all the Ulster counties and the Bishops of these counties were present. In all, 1,000 delegates were in attendance.

It is unofficially stated, adds the despatch, that Mr. Redmond declared that if the exclusion of six Ulster counties was not accepted by the conference he would resign the leadership of the Irish party.

LORDS DEPRECATE MOVE.

London, June 24.—Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Lord Cromer, the Earl of Halsbury, Viscount Middleton and the Marquis of Salisbury, who represent the extreme anti-home rule party, have issued a manifesto deprecating the attempt to settle the Irish question by negotiations at a moment "when a sanguinary rebellion has just been repressed," and when the concessions proposed will be regarded in Ireland as "a premium on rebellion and as a vantage-ground for further demands."

The signatories of the manifesto declare it to be their conviction that the proposed settlement is fraught with infinite danger to the State.

WANT MACHINE GUNS.

Chicago Financiers Make an Appeal to J. P. Morgan.

CHICAGO, June 24.—J. P Morgan, said to be in charge of munitions contracts for the allies in the European war, has been appealed to by Chicago financiers to divert to the Illinois regiments of the National Guard 20 machine guns manufactured for use aboard, it was announced yesterday. The appeal was telegraphed Thursday night by Major McCormick, following a meeting of financiers headed by J. Ogden Armour. Mr. Morgan was asked to allow the Illinois Guardsmen the use of the guns until such time as they could be replaced by the United States Government.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A representative of Morgan and Company said yesterday that the above request would be referred to "the proper authorities."

"Don't you want to be recognized as a great leader?" "Sometimes," replied Senator Sorghum; "and other times I'd prefer to exert a certain amount of guidance and authority without being recognized."—Washington Star.

RECORD WORK IN SHIPYARDS

ONE HAS LAUNCHED A WAR CRAFT A MONTH SINCE HOSTILITIES BEGAN.

LONDON, June 24.—In the shipyards of Great Britain, where fleets are born, there has been tremendous activity since the commencement of the war, and the effort to provide the navy with all it requires has been stupendous.

James Bone gives a picturesque account of the wonderful work that has been accomplished.

"When we speak of Germany's industrial inventiveness and resource", he says, "We are apt to forget that she neither discovered the application of steam as a motive force nor did she invent any of the great devices by which nations have been brought closer and time and space have been telescoped. The German navy exists only as the result of British inventions.

"Now, in the great world- struggle all our shipbuilding resources of peace have been tremendously expanded for war. One yard alone has launched a battleship, cruiser, torpedo boat destroyer, or submarine every month since the war began. One famous marine engine shop has produced 1,000 horsepower of machinery every day since the beginning of last year.

"Wonderful engine shops, up to a thousand yards in length, of cathedral height and spaciousness, splendidly lit with railways linking up every part of the organisation, have sprung up in many parts."

2,500,000 Women In British Industry

LONDON, June 24.—Women the world over may be proud of the fact that in answer to the call of duty and patriotism something like 2,500,000 women and girls have entered the industries of Great Britain since the beginning of 1915.

With the exception of certain skilled trades and occupations necessarily confined to men, the whole world of work is now for the first time in history open to women. The nation is undoubtedly benefiting largely in many ways by the influx of women into the labor world, that is to say, into that portion of it which up to the present time has been the special preserve of the male. Curiously enough there is a very serious storage of women's labor in a large number of women's trades, chiefly in textiles and clothing. The fact is that the high wages paid to munition workers is responsible for this desertion of the less well pain jobs. Domestic servants, laundresses and waitresses are at a premium.

"They don't seem satisfied unless they are making something that explodes, remarked an employer, who found it difficult to get women workers.

This fresh industrial revolution has brought with it new problems and the Women's Labor League is doing good service in initiating systematic inquiry and discussion upon them. One speaker at the opening conference in London hasarded the prediction that at least 2,000,000 men now in the army must be regarded as lost to industry, since they would be either incapacitated or would refuse to go back to their old occupations.

Nevertheless the labor world will be confronted with the necessity of adjusting its whole basis and policy to the new conditions. It is clear that the woman worker cannot be excluded wholesale, neither can she be exploiten for the benefit of unscrupulous employers, but before the matter can be equitably adjusted there will be trouble.

Meantime the Women's Labor League has started a series of conferences in an endeavor to settle the question that the workingman is thinking hardest about—the future of the women who have been drafted into industry to take the place of men, and the effect on men's wages and the general standard of living.

Mr. A. R. Moore Receives an Appointment From the County Council

The County Council refused to accept the resignation of High County Constable George Cochrane, which he handed to Warden Darling this morning, after he explained the duties of his position and the work he had done in this County. They stated that they wished to give him every opportunity of recovering and reassuming full charge of the County Constables, but in order to safeguard County Constable Moore from loss in the prosecution of the duties he may be called upon to undertake, the Council made Mr. Moore Assistant High County Contable, at a salary of $100 a year. Mr. Cochrane retains entire responsibility and a salary of $125 until he is able to continue his duties.

The Battle Around Fleury Continues With Increasing Fury

INTENSE BOMBARDMENT ON THE WESTERN FRONT

The Enemy Succeeded in Occupying Some Houses in the Village of Fleury--Bombardment With Gas Shells South-west of Messines---Russians Capture Over Three Hundred Prisoners.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

LONDON, June 26.—Hostile aircraft were active. Six machines attempted to cross our lines and were attacked by our scouts and driven back. The trenches around Givenchy and westward of Messines were bombarded intermittently. Later reports show that the hostile gas attack southwestward of Messines reported yesterday was a bombardment with gas shells.

INTENSE BOMBARDMENT.

PARIS, June 26.—Official communique says there was an intense bombardment of our lines around Hill 321. The fighting continued during the morning. The enemy succeeded in occupying some houses in the village of Fleury. Generally calm in other sectors.

RUSSIANS ENTER ENEMY TRENCHES.

PETROGRAD, June 26.—West of Radziviloff near the Galician border northeast of Brody, one of our regiments after artillery preparation, got a footing in the enemy's trenches, captured five officers and 303 men. We were later compelled to retire but we retained the prisoners.

BRINGING UP REINFORCEMENTS.

PETROGRAD, June 26.—The Germans are still bringing up a continuous stream of reinforcements to Bukowina.

It's awfully nice to dress in a warm room on a cold winter morning. It is the luxury that comes of having a King Boiler and King Radiators to furnish your hot-water heating. You can have your bed-room windows open all night with the air below zero, then step into the next room in the morning to dress and you will find it as warm as toast. "Steady and strong"—that is the style of heating the King Boiler and King Radiators do. The "fire-travel" is so constructed as to give the full heat of the fuel to the circulating water, and no heat gets away without paying toll to the water-way. This saves fuel and saves money. The King Hot Water Boiler has no fear of competition in the matter of quality, heating power, or fuel economy. Besides, the ease of operation makes a King Boiler transcendently superior. You can shake the ashes from either side, standing up; You can use an ash pan full size of pit; You can regulate the drafts accurately on account of tight fitting doors and joints. Flues are easily cleaned, ample combustion space allows complete burning of gases instead of their going free up the chimney. Simple to erect and economical to instal. We have a King Heating Apparatus for every requirement, from a cottage up to an apartment house. We manufacture everything required for heating—steam or hot water—for buildings of all descriptions.

King Hot Water Boiler

IF YOU WANT FACTS REGARDING THE ADVANTAGES OF HOT WATER HEATING AND THE COST, WRITE US. INFORMATION GLADLY SUPPLIED.

King Radiators

The success of the King Radiators is founded on the same principles that have made the Boiler so successful—the quick circulation principle. King Radiators are made to fit any size or shape of space. Let us tell you what a King Hot Water Heating System would cost. Our Illustrated Booklet, "COMFORTABLE HOMES" sent FREE on Request.

Woman Burned To Death in Bedroom At Harrow Village

BODY OF MRS. CROSBY FOUND LATER NEAR DOOR OF ROOM.

WINDSOR, June 26.—Mrs. Martha Crosby, 60 years old, was burned to death 26 when the residence of Washington Hurst, her nephew, with whom she lived at Harrow, near here, was destroyed by fire of undermined origin.

Hurst and his wife were awakened by smoke. After lowering his wife to safety with a hastily improvised rope made of red clothes, Hurst attempted to reach Mrs. Crosby's bedroom, but was compelled to retreat by the flames after being burned about the head and arms. He left the burning house by jumping from a second-story window.

The body of Mrs. Crosby was found four hours later near the doorway of her bedroom. She had evidently been overcome by smoke while attempting to reach the stairway.

The authorities of the village may order a probe to determine how the fire started.

She—"How did you dare tell father that you have a prospect of $50,000 a year?" He—"Why I have if I marry you."—Boston Transcript.

Says Canada Lost All Her Wheat in Summer of 1859

MALAHIDE RESIDENT ALSO SAYS 1888 SIMILAR TO THIS YEAR.

AYLMER, June 26.—John McTaggart, one of Malahide's best-known citizens, and son of the late Archibald McTaggart, who was the oldest resident of this township, stated on Thursday that, according to his daily diary which he has kept for many years, 57 years ago all the wheat in Canada was killed by frost.

Thirty-three years ago the season was similar to this one, raining every day in May, every other day in June, eleven days in July and the second week in August, then it came dry, and the corn and potato crops proved a failure.

Wheat, however, was good with the exception of a portion which was winter killed. The only difference between the season of 1916 and that of 1863 is that the present season is colder.

Drop in the Price of Flour

This Week's Market Summary Attributes the Drop to the Declining Freight Rates

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer last week:

The outstanding event in the grocery market last week has been the change in situation in the flour market. To begin with, there has been an alteration in freights, applying only to flour and grain. Ocean vessels which have to take a certain proportion of flour in their cargoes report they have not the demand for space on their boats in July and August that has been the case for the past year, every month. Freight rates have therefore been reduced on flour and wheat. Boston boats are offering local flower exporters a rate of 60c a cwt. as against 80 and 95c normally, going to London and Glasgow, while Montreal boats are down as low as 65c and will probably go lower than that. Space for wheat is offered as low as 30c a bushel. Not long ago flour space cost on an average about $1.15 cwt., while wheat was going at 44c a bushel. This change in the freight situation is indicative of the change in the flour market during the last week. First patents Manitoba flour dropped 20c and this was not in any sense due to a declining wheat market; the latter after its usual fluctuations and vagaries actually settled 5c higher than at this time two weeks ago. The reason for the drop in flour is somewhat difficult to understand, but it can be put down as chiefly due to the lack of cable enquiry from England. British and other overseas buyers appear to be fairly well loaded with flour stocks at the present time and enquiries are few and far between. Hence the decline in levels, which has nevertheless so far failed to secure very much more business.

Sugar Market.

There has been a period of something like weakness in the sugar market which has lasted now for a month or more. During this time market values lost something of their strength, but a full recovery appears to have been made, which fact is indicated by an advance in raws from the low point of a month ago to the high point of the week before that. The stimulating factor appears to have been more export demand for American refined sugar which, during the last few days, has reached something like its usual very considerable extent. This cleared the air a good deal in New York. Sugar men were beginning to wonder what was the matter. The American domestic demand was slow and with the cut-out in European buying the sugar market looked weak and unstable. The fact of overseas buying being recommenced, however, relieved the situation considerably and the market is considerably firmer. So far as Canadian refined sugar is concerned, prices are still unchanged as the local trade is somewhat slow. This is possibly due to the backward season. The tone of the market, however, is very strong and it is thought that very shortly there will be a revival of heavy purchasing for home consumption, should we get, albeit belatedly, a little warm weather.

Egg Situation.

The cold weather is having an undoubted effect on the new-laid egg market. Prices have advanced from 1 to 2 cents this week and this was almost wholly due to the fact that deliveries were very small. We are also in the middle of a time of unbounded consumption, and here again this is partly on account of the weather. It is a notable fact that during hot weather people will not eat as many new-laid eggs. I could weather the converse applies. Hence the rise in new-laids last week.

For the first time in many moons cheese levels sank a cent or two this week. Prices at country boards dropped about a cent last week, and the situation is notably easier. This is in part due to a much reduced demand from England, where prices also have sunk recently.

THE DUCK.

A little girl in Michigan has written the following essay on the duck: "The duck is a low, heavy set bird. He is a mighty poor singer, having a coarse voice caused by getting so many frogs in his neck, and he likes the water and carries a toy balloon in his stomach to keep from sinking; the duck has only two legs, and they are set so far back on his running gears by nature that they come pretty near missing his body; some ducks when they get big curls on their tails are called drakes, and don't have to set or hatch, but just loaf and go swimming and eat everything in sight; if I were a duck I would rather be a drake; they have a wide bill like they use it for a spade; they walk like a drunk man; they bounce and bump about from side to side; if you scare them they will flap their wings and try to make a pass at singing."

In This Matter of Health

one is either with the winners or with the losers.

It's largely a question of right eating - right food. For sound health one must cut out rich, indigestible foods and choose those that are known to contain the elements that build sturdy bodies and keen brains.

Grape-Nuts

is a wonderfully balanced food, made from whole wheat and barley. It contains all the nutriment of the grain, including the mineral phosphates, indispensable in Nature's plan for body and brain rebuilding.

Grape-Nuts is a concentrated food, easy to digest. It is economical, has delicious flavour, comes ready to eat, and has helped thousands in the winning class.

Fighting Continues With Increasing Fury In The Vicinity of Fleury

Germans Gain a Foothold in the Village After a Desperate Struggle---Enemy Aims to Get Control of the Vaux Ravine Preparatory to An Attack Upon the Main Line of Forts in Front of Verdun.

GERMANS SUFFER HEAVY LOSSES

LONDON, June 26.—The Germans still held Fleury village last night. The battle continues with increasing fury.

Late details show that fighting of the past two days near Verdun equalled in fury anything yet experienced. The total German forces engaged on a two-mile front are estimated as exceeding 100,000. It was only by the last overwhelming rush when the defenders were worn out and thinned by many hours of bombardment that the enemy succeeded in rushing the Thiaumont work and the adjacent advanced trenches.

The Thiaumont fortification covers the approaches to Fleury, and the enemy hope to continue the charge and sweep away the defenders of the latter place.

The aim of the German commander is to secure control of the Vaux ravine, without which it is impossible for him to force back the French advanced line and begin an attack upon the main line of forts between Souville and Tavannes. The ravine is closely boxed in by the Caillette woods to the north and the Vhapitre wood to the south and Hill 320, where the French position forms its root to the west. German attacks here met with a certain measure of success, but at heavy cost, and their footing is by no means sure enough to prevent their being dislodged by counter-attacks which, it is believed, the French will not fail to make.

BARS BETWEEN HERO AND $25,000

Trenton, N.J., June 26.—Ernest Rogers, now in the workhouse here, and who cannot obtain his freedom for five and a half years, was notified today that $25,000 was left him by a woman whose life he had saved 25 years ago. It is probable that Rogers' wife and three children, now living in Lonedale, Pa., will enjoy the fortune until he is released.

In September, 1913, Rogers, who is now 42 years old, and who was a butcher, was sentenced to prison for seven years for forging a check. After serving two years he was paroled, but about six months ago he was convicted of a similar offence and was sentenced to the workhouse for one year. When he finishes that term he will be sent to the state prison to serve the unsatisfied five years of his seven year term, his second conviction breaking the parole.

When returning from a ball game in Pitsburg 25 years ago Rogers saw a runaway horse approaching, dragging a carriage in which sat Mrs. Martha Dobbs, of a wealthy family. He threw his cap at the horse. The animal shied so suddenly that he fell and Mrs Dobbs considered that Rogers had saved her life.

When she died twelve years ago, she left the use of her fortune to her husband, and upon his death $25,000 was to go to Rogers, and the balance to her nephew, Theodore Diehl, of Delmore Idaho. Mr. Dobbs died recently in Switzerland, and since then Diehl, as executor, has been seeking Rogers. An advertisement by him in a Trenton paper, was seen by Clark Hendrickson, warden at the workhouse and soon Rogers had the news.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Mr. Barnackel

By EDITH V. ROSS

"Enoch Barnackel! What a name! Any one would know that he was a crusty old man of the farmer type, uneducated and with no manners. But what can I do?"

These words were spoken to herself by a girl who had some sixteen years before been left at a foundlings' home and who had been given the name of Helen and had later chosen the additional name of Whitman. She had been retained at the home as an employee till she approached seventeen, then was informed that a farmer named Barnackel had written that he wanted a wife and asked whether one could be sent to him. Helen was informed of the opportunity.

After a long and fearful deliberation, feeling incompetent to go out into the world and make a living, she decided to go out to Mr. Barnackel. If he was very terrible she might commit suicide. The matron approved of her resolution, for she was comely, and the good woman feared that with her inexperience she might fall a victim to some designing person.

Mr. Barnackel was informed that there was a young woman ready to accept his proposition, and he sent money for her journey. The heart broken girl nerved herself to her fate and one afternoon alighted at a railway station at the village near which his farm was located. A young farmer with a whip in his hand approached her and asked if she was the young woman who was to marry Mr. Barnackel.

"I am," was the reply. "That is, if he isn't an ogre."

The young man smiled. His smile was very winning. "I have a team here," he said. "I'll drive you to the farm."

When seated in the wagon and he had said "get up" to the horses Helen expected that he would say something to her. He did not. He seemed to be thinking.

"What kind of a looking man is Mr. Barnackel?" she asked.

Now, the young man was George Barnackel, nephew of the man who had written for a wife. The uncle was fifty years old, his face looked like a ball of strings, his hair was red, and he was just too unlovely for anything. At any rate, that is the way the daughter of one of the neighboring farmers put it. In fact, he was exactly what Helen had conceived him to be, judging from his name. He must also have been a fool or he would never have sent his good looking nephew for a young girl he expected to make his wife. Upon Helen's inquiry George turned his face toward her, displaying a set of regular white teeth by smiling, and asked:

"Suppose I should tell you that he is a disagreeable old codger and always cross as a bear. What would you do?"

"I would jump into the river—that is, if there is one near by."

There was a prolonged silence, at the end of which the young man said:

"And what would you say if I told you that I am Mr. Barnackel?"

Helen's heart went up into her throat. She made no reply to the question, but she sidled nearer to her companion. Presently there came a subdued voice:

"Are you Mr. Barnackel?"

"I am."

Her face was bent low. He leaned lower himself and looked up into it. He saw what he took to be a look of pleasure. Perhaps it was relief. The reins were in his right hand. She was sitting at his left. He put his left arm about her waist. She looked up at him, her eyes wet, a suspicion of a smile on her lips. He kissed them.

"How far is it to the farm?" was the next thing said.

"About three miles."

George drove over six miles, which seemed like three to Helen, then stopped at a farmhouse.

"Wait in the wagon," he said, "while I go in to tell my mother and sister you're here. They don't know you're coming."

Leaving the reins in her hands, he went into the house. He was gone a long while. Helen saw the face of an elderly woman surveying her from a window, then a younger one doing the same.

"Oh, dear," she said, "I hope they're not going to make him send me back!"

Presently a door opened and the two women came out, the elder in advance. She welcomed Helen, though she seemed constrained. Leading her into the house, the younger woman showed her to a chamber upstairs and, shutting the door behind them, took her in her arms, exclaiming:

"You poor child!"

"Why am I to be so pitied?" asked Helen, surprised.

"You're not. It's all right. We'll make you very happy. My brother is not the Mr. Barnackel you came out here to marry. That one is my uncle, a crusty old man who would not do for you at all. Being rheumatic, he asked George to drive you from the station to his farm. George wants you himself. Mother has given her consent, and you are to be married—that is, if you wish to marry George—at once."

Helen asked if haste were necessary. George replied to this that his bride belonged to his uncle, was expected by the uncle and unless the knot were tied here was no knowing what he would do in the matter. The chance of being turned over to the old curmudgeon terrified Helen that she was only too glad to be married at once. The wedding took place that evening.

Afflicted with Lame Back

THREE YEARS AGO
COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Goodshaw, 663 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GERMAN PEOPLE TO SEEK NEW RIGHTS

LONDON, May 24.—A frank admission of the tremendous difficulties which Germany will face after the war is contained in an outspoken article in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt. The writer even goes so far as to hint at the possibility of very serious internal troubles.

"Germany's task during the war and until peace is obtained is clear enough, he says. It is to hold on and to carry on to the end. On the success of our combined efforts depend the campaign and the contents of the treaty of peace. Germany must obtain the clearest possible recognition of her peculiar central position in Europe, so unequivocal that there shall never be another war about the terms of peace. For in so far as the present war foreshadows another it will be held to have missed its aim.

"The transition stage between the end of the war and the return of normal conditions will raise the most formidable difficulties both in the political and the industrial spheres. The questions that will at once concern us will be the manner and method of buying the necessary material for our industries, and re-establishment of our transport service, the recovery of our exchange values, the distribution of raw stuffs and the fixing of prices for the country both for manufactured and half manufactured articles. We must have a plan for every detail, which will enable us to profit from the mistakes we have made and our experience in the past.

"All these affairs, which presuppose a great activity on the part of the state and its army of officials, are of such decisive importance for our industries that they will hardly attract less public attention than the conclusion of peace and the terms of the treaty. With this object in view Germany must requisition all its skill for organization. Officials and private individuals must work together and prepare the ground in every possible way at once.

HEAVIER TAXATION COMING

"Now the nation, after its terrible sacrifices, will be eager for a renewal of public life. We know this to be the wish and desire of the soldiers to whom the fatherland can never be sufficiently grateful, and those at home share their views and would be as deeply disappointed as the Fieldgreys (soldiers in the field) if everything went on in public life in the same slow humdrum way.

"The danger that has be faced in this matter is greater than most people think. For the taxation which the State will require will be greater than ever before, and individuals and parties will naturally differ as to how the money shall be spent and as the justice of the demands. There will be plenty of material for excitement in this affair! There are not a few people who seriously hold that there are enemies of the State in Germany itself who are prepared to cause a revolution. They say that there are parties who will not follow the call to the colours or protect their fatherland. But this danger has been removed by the war. Never has the world seen a more united nation than Germany."

The writer believes that the sacrifices, which all classes have shared in the war, will prevent the revival of party quarrels after the war. But one thing is clear, he declares—the German people will demand a greater control over the foreign policy of their Government.

POLITICAL SECRECY OPPOSED

"The nation and their representatives were kept far too much in the dark about foreign policies, which were discussed with far too much secrecy. The result was that a large number of people received no education in this most important sphere of politics. Bare assertions could be made, without contradiction, the nation lost its sense of responsibility, and public opinion could be easily misled.

"With public opinion so loosely knit even the Foreign Office has found it difficult during the last quarter of a century to make the essential unity of the nation felt as a force in politics. It had to grope and feel its way, and this condition of things was not favourable to the creation of a school of diplomacy of the highest style.

We need the weight of a steady tradition in our foreign politics and a new generation of statesmen who shall not be taken exclusively from the upper ten. We shall then become a country that exports not only goods, but also a political tradition, and we shall be able to rely on public opinion much more than we could under the old system. Above all we must produce moral, that is the law of peace as it is the law of madness to do it—the attempts of the Entente politicians to hem us in will soon be reduced to a threat without any danged for us. Already their commercial aims are becoming an embarrassment to the enemy. They must be taught that they can conclude a peace with Germany, but not a peace against Germany."

ARMY GROWS ITS POTATOES

British Soldiers Planting Between Camp Huts to Increase Supplies.

LONDON, June 24.—The army has started to grow its own potatoes. Instructions have been sent, or are being sent, from the War Office to every command, indicating the lines which should be followed.

Military requirements are very large, and little more than half the usual supplies of potatoes are coming into the markets, with the result that pre-war prices to the public are nearly doubled.

At one camp in Surrey digging operations began last week, and the seed potatoes were planted in a few days in rows between the huts. A number of men were told off each day for digging, and others were asked to help in spare time. At a camp in Yorkshire potato growing began over a month ago. It is understood that instructions were soon issued for the growing of vegetables.

OFFICERS MAY BE NEEDED.

Question of Continuing With Canadian Contingents May Arise.

Ottawa, June 24.—The imminence of war between the U. S. and Mexico raises a question as to the status of the numerous American officers and men who are serving with the Canadian overseas contingents and the likelihood of their going back to their home forces.

The attention of the Minister of Militia was directed to-day to a report from New York that he had promised to release American National Guard officers with the Canadian army. "I have heard nothing of it whatever," said the Minister. "And besides most of them are in England."

THE SOUTHWARD PATH IS OPEN AND MUST BE TROD.

History yesterday repeated itself, and the existence of a state of war with Mexico appears to be a stern, stubborn fact.

In April, 1846, a squadron of dragoons, under Captain Thornton, was sent by General Taylor up the Rio Grande to obtain information regarding a force under the Mexican General Torrejon which had crossed the river, the American and the Mexican forces then being but a few miles of each other, but both countries still being at peace. Captain Thornton's command entered the corral of a hacienda when the gate was closed, and they found themselves ambushed. Attempting to escape, Thornton was badly wounded and sixteen officers and men fell dead or wounded before Captain Hardee, who succeeded to the command, surrendered.

This began the Mexican war seventy years ago, some weeks before Congress knew anything about the decision that the gods had forced upon the country.

What happened at Carrizal appears to be somewhat beclouded, but enough is known to indicate that the American troopers of the Tenth Cavalry were ambushed as Thornton's dragoons were and practically annihilated with concealed machine guns. This was done by Carranza troops. The Mexicans report many wounded and many prisoners. It will encourage the Mexicans who will profess to believe that the American troops are easy to beat. It should inflame the patriotic ardor of this country, which has not hitherto been very enthusiastic at the prospect of war with Mexico. Boots and saddles! No waiting more!

The question of peace is out of the hands of the President, of Congress, of Carranza, and his de facto government; out of the hands of the "A.B.C." Powers; out of the hands of the Entente Allies, who were seeking to prevent the final issue of war being joined because it has largely been promoted by German agents. Germany wins!

The country will awaken this morning to the stern reality that the way southward is open and must be trod.—New York Herald.

NERO comes in any length up to 600 feet

RELIABLE in 50-foot lengths

Beware of hose of doubtful brand and quality. The market is overrun with inferior kinds. Usage and weather soon disintegrate them. That means leaks, kinks, lost pressure and wasted money.

We've selected this Goodyear Garden Hose after close comparison because it wipes out all excuse for hose trouble. One reason is this: Goodyear Nerb Hose is made so the plies can't separate. The cover and the lining both are extra tough rubber, so Goodyear outwears the average. It's a "many season hose." Yet the prices are low—due to quantity output. DISLIKE DAYLIGHT LAW.

Hamilton, June 22.—Daylight saving in Hamilton is proving no trouble some for some of the lawyers that there is talk of applying to the court to upset the by-law. Some of the lawyers doubt if the city has the power, without consulting the voters, to pass such a measure. Last night the Burlington Council after one week's experience with daylight saving rescinded the by-law.

LOVING KINDNESS OF OUR GREAT GOD

To Know God Aright Is Life Everlasting.

Love of God Constrains — Many Made Agnostics by Erroneous Teachings—Very Little Gospel Preaching for Many Centuries—Heathen Bewildered by Unreasonable and Conflicting Creeds—Truth Now Clear to Earnest Bible Students—Majority of College Professors Know Nothing of the True Teachings of the Bible—Many Truth-Hungry Souls Stumbling Into Latter-Day Errors

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Leasure Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

St. Louis, Mo., June 25.— Pastor Russell spoke to-day before the I.B.S.A. Convention which is in session in our city. His text was, "Because Thy loving-kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise Thee." (Psalm 63:3.) The Pastor said in part:

More and more are we noticing that the Bible presents to us a God of loving-kindness, and from that viewpoint calls upon us to render some return to Him. More and more are we impressed with the erroneousness of the creeds. How they misled us into thinking of our Heavenly Father as anything but the kind, loving Parent presented in our text? In harmony with this thought of the loving-kindness of our God, the Apostle says, "The love of Christ constrains us." (2 Corinthians 5:14.) Since Christ is the "express image of the Father's glorious person," God also constrains us—draws us to Himself by His love.

It is very probable that the reason why so many have been kept away from God is that He has been very seriously misrepresented to us all and by us all. When we read the Apostle's words to the effect that the heathen are feeling after God, if haply they might find Him (Acts 17:27), we ask ourselves, Why is it that the heathen have not found the Lord? Evidently St. Paul expresses the right sentiment here; for mankind are so constructed that the highest and noblest organs of our brain are those that call for reverence for the Almighty God. Therefore it would be the most natural condition for all men to desire to have a God, to have fellowship with Him, to have His favor and blessing, and to have the everlasting life which He has offered.

But we find the very reverse of this, not only in Christian lands, but in lands where the Gospel has been preached to a very limited extent. Not only do we find many who neglect the Lord and care little for Him, but we also find many who have turned away from Him entirely and who are antagonistic to Him. They call themselves agnostics, a term which signifies persons who do not know anything definite about God, persons who demand proof of the existence of things supernatural. There is a difference, however, between an infidel—an unbeliever—and an agnostic. Some of the leading people of our day candidly confess that they are agnostics. They are feeling after God, trying to find Him. Then there are some who drift from one denomination to another; and others, such as Christian Scientists, who are outside of all so-called orthodox denominations—all feeling after the Truth, but not having a knowledge of it.

Repelled by False Teachings.

It is difficult to estimate how much harm has been done by the doctrines which misrepresent God's character. Erroneous teachings are responsible for the many denominations all calling themselves Christians, though knowing little about God and Christ—for the most part, merely formal professors. Only a few claim to be fully consecrated to the Lord. After all these centuries of preaching, we would naturally expect better results. The trouble is that during all these centuries there has been very little real Gospel preached. If we had been taught the simple Truth during the entire Gospel Age, and not the "doctrines of demons," doubtless the results would have been more like those obtained in the early Church, when thousands turned to the Lord.—Acts 2:41; 4:4.

Noble Christians they were, not merely formal professors. The Apostle tells us of some who endured a great fight of afflictions, who suffered great loss; and of others who became the companions of such as were thus treated. (Hebrews 10:32, 33.) Under Nero, the Roman Emperor, and later under Diocletian, many Christians suffered for loyalty to God. It required a great deal of character to stand up and be willing to suffer even unto death for righteousness' sake. Had this spirit continued, where do you suppose Christianity would be to-day?

A few years ago, when I was in so-called heathen lands, some of these heathen people came to me one morning just before my departure and said, "Pastor Russell, we are sorry that you are leaving us. We wish that you could stay longer. We did not get out to hear you last night; for we supposed that your teaching was something like that of the missionaries here. But we are told that it is very different; and we would like to hear you. We know that there is something in Christianity; but we cannot understand how it could be true, as the missionaries have told us, that thousands upon thousands are suffering in eternal torment because they did not know about your God." Some said, "The gods of the heathen are better than your God. We are taught not to take the life of even a worm, and to be careful where we tread, lest we kill some little creature. How different from what the missionaries tell us about your God! Can you wonder that we are not Christians?"

You will perceive that these people are feeling after God and wishing to find Him; but they are bewildered by misrepresentations of the God of the Bible. Of course, we could converse only through an interpreter; and as my schedule placed a time limit upon me, I could not remain with them longer to tell them about the loving-kindness of our God, as I would have liked to do.

"Ye Know Not What Spirit Ye Are Of."

When St. Paul was in Athens, he recognized the fact that the heathen were feeling after God and trying to find Him. On the street corners and elsewhere they had vain images erected to represent their multitudinous gods; and lest they should overlook even one, they had erected an altar to "The Unknown God." St. Paul noted the fact and preached to them the true God. But they were so steeped in superstition and error that when they heard of the true God and His Plan they were not ready to receive the Gospel.

If the Truth had been proclaimed by the best of teachers all down the Gospel Age, the result might have been the same. Perhaps it would have been rejected; perhaps only a few would have been willing to receive the Message. But experience teaches that many people would like to know the truth about God. Even children of ten years of age and younger are interested to know about Him; and many at the age of twelve or fourteen years have a clear understanding of His Plan.

False doctrines have driven people away from the Lord; and Christian people, under the delusion of these false doctrines, have shewn anything but a proper Christian spirit. They have not known what manner of spirit they were of, as was the case with St. James and St. John. You will recall that the people of a certain Samaritan village had refused to sell bread for the Master's use. St. James and St. John asked our Lord, "Wilt Thou that we call down fire from Heaven and consume them?" The Master replied, "Ye knew not what manner of spirit ye are of. The Son of Man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them."—Luke 9:51-56.

Like those two disciples, Christendom has had a wrong focus. We have not understood our Father in Heaven, nor His Plan. We had a devilish idea, engendered by the doctrines of demons. (1 Timothy 4:1.) During the Dark Ages, men were burned at the stake and put through various forms of torture, all in the name of Jesus, in the name of religion. What a terrible mistake! Did not this drive the people away from the Lord and the Truth? Did it not do great injury to those who perpetrated such crimes as well as to the world at large? Yes; and it all resulted from the lack of knowledge of God.

But now, by the grace of God, the light is shining clearly upon the Bible. God's people to-day can appreciate our text, perhaps, in a way not appreciated even by the early Church. Because of God's loving-kindness our lips shall praise Him. How far removed is this thought from what many of us were taught in childhood—that God was vengeful, ready to throw us to the Devil; but that our Lord Jesus stepped in and said, "Please do not! I died for these people. Allow Me to show them mercy!" and that then the Father would say, "For Your sake I will; otherwise I would throw them into eternal torment."

What a wretched picture! Where would God's loving-kindness be? But when we see that God arranged a wonderful Plan of Salvation before the foundation of the world, that He has a great Purpose in gathering out of the world a Church, a Bride for His Son, to become Heavenly beings of the Divine nature (2 Peter 1:4), for the blessing of all mankind later, then we begin to see His loving-kindness, His tender mercy.

Right and Wrong Viewpoints.

Now we have come to a time when our conceptions of God are growing clearer. We are awakening from the sleep of the past. We are getting our eyes of understanding open a little. We are looking and thinking, in the right direction. Many others are looking, also, but in the wrong direction: The great professors in our colleges are looking, and are seeing things, too; but they are not looking in the right direction, however. A former professor in one of our western colleges came into the knowledge of Present Truth recently. One day he remarked to one of the brethren, "It is not necessary to teach Evolution to the young men and women who come to college. They enter with their minds already prepared on that subject, having gained ideas along this line from their school books and elsewhere. They have already been taught that Evolution is the way by which man came into the world. Furthermore, nearly all of the faculty in all of our colleges and universities are Evolutionists."

Many of the thinking people of the world are looking about in the direction of Theosophy or New Thought or Christian Science. They are searching for light, not knowing where to go. The degree of light which we enjoy who have come to understand God's Plan is to be highly appreciated. "Blessed are your eyes; for they see." You have looked in the right direction—that which God has pointed out—in His Word. Higher Critics, Evolutionists, and others who lean to their own understanding are in darkness. Those who are looking carefully into the teaching of the Bible are being drawn closer to God, and are obtaining a deeper appreciation of Him as a personal God.

All who accept these theories of men regard God as a Principle without personality. If any who follow these cults still believe in a personal God, it is because they have not as yet gotten the idea of their leaders. The theory is that there is a principle of good which operates everywhere, and that principle is God. Hence they say that God is everywhere and in everything. To them, God is a great law of nature. Is there any intelligence in such a law? Is there any sympathy, any love, there? Not a bit! They worship the principle, instead of the great Source of the principle. They adore the law, and not the great Author of law.

God's Loving-kindness Known to Few

Our text speaks to those who have learned to know God. Since the days of the early Church not many have known of God's loving-kindness. It has been lost sight of, even as the teachings of the Bible have been. Only through the Bible can any know of God's loving-kindness and tender mercy. The words of this text have been true of all who have been in close relationship with God throughout the Gospel Dispensation. More fully than ever before do the Lord's people realize His love and mercy to-day. More light is shining upon this class than ever before. Truly we know something of the loving-kindness of our God.

If this realization has come into your heart, it is having a transforming effect upon your heart and your mind; for it is having this effect upon all of God's people. The Psalmist declares that this loving-kindness of our God is better than life—the present life, not the future. It is this loving-kindness which has provided for a future life for us. In view of this fact, we count what remains of the present life as a trifling thing, not worthy to be compared with what God has in reservation for us. As a training school for the life to come, this life is very valuable, but not for its own sake. So we are glad to lay it down in the service of God. We have not been compelled to do so, however. God is not compelling any one to sacrifice. Whoever makes a sacrifice that is acceptable to God must do it of his own free will.

Our hope is built upon the loving-kindness of our God. As soon as we saw His loving character, we gladly surrendered our little all. It was the same with our Lord Jesus. Did He not, in appreciation of God's loving-kindness, lay down His life? And so it has been with all who walk in His footsteps. Thus we appreciate God's provision for the future as far better than the present life, and are willing to surrender all of our earthly prospects, counting them as loss and dross, in order that we may secure the glorious things which God has promised to those who love Him.

Willing Service, not Compulsion.

Our text goes on to say, "My lips shall praise Thee." We praise God with joy in our hearts. He does not demand our praise; it is not that we MUST do this or that. We should not ask, "Must I do this?" or, "Will God require that?" This is not the right spirit; rather, it is just the reverse. Let us serve the Heavenly Father and do His will as our Lord Jesus did. He said, "I delight to do Thy will, O My God! Thy Law is written in My heart." (Hebrews 10:5-9; Psalm 40: 7, 8.) We, too, will praise God with joyful lips for the privilege of service and of suffering for His name.

This spirit was exemplified in St. Paul and Silas, when on account of their loyalty to the Truth they were imprisoned at Philippi. There in the prison, with their backs smarting from the stripes which they had received, with their hands and their feet fast in the stocks, and with their bodies in an uncomfortable position, they had so great an appreciation of God's loving-kindness that their lips gave utterance to songs of praise. This would surprise other people. But God's love and favor enabled His two faithful servants to triumph over their stripes. They were glad for any experience which man could bring them, as long as they had so mighty and loving a Friend.

So it is with us, dear Brethren. We cannot keep God's Message to ourselves. As the Prophet said, it is like a fire in our bones; we cannot stifle it. (Jeremiah 20:9.) We must praise God. We must declare our appreciation of the glorious things which He has in reservation for the Church and the blessings which He has in store for the world. Because His loving-kindness is better than life, we praise Him with joyful lips.

Wonderful Story of God's Love.

To know God is life eternal, the Master said. (John 17:3.) This being so, not many as yet have eternal life; for only a few know God. It is not sufficient to know that there is a God, nor even to realize that He is a living Being, not a Principle. As the Scriptures say, "He that cometh to God must believe that He is [a personal God], and that He is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." (Hebrews 11:6.) First we believed; then we sought to know His will concerning us. We found that He had made a loving provision whereby we might come from under the condemnation of sin and death and be admitted into His family. We offered ourselves to Him through Christ. He accepted us and gave us the begetting of His Holy Spirit. By and by, if faithful, we shall be born on the Divine plane and have joint-heirship with Christ.

We are beginning to understand something of the great love of God. He has put the robe of Christ's righteousness upon us, and day by day is preparing us for His Heavenly Kingdom.

THOUSANDS OF SICK WOMEN

Helped Every Year by Common Sense Suggestions Given Free by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

For forty years women suffering from all kinds of female ills have been writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Thus they receive common sense suggestions drawn from a vast volume of experience, and thousands of sick women have been saved from untold suffering, as letters like the following clearly show:—

Newark, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman. Your Sanative Wash is just the thing to overcome female weakness. I have told young mothers as well as older ones about your remedies, and what they have done for me. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, as my health was very bad when I wrote you, but now I can do my own work and have not had a sick day since I began taking your remedies. I keep the Compound and Liver Pills on hand all the time."—Mrs. GEO. THOMPSON, 34 Sherwood Court, Newark, Ohio.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

IF YOU want to BUILD UP YOUR BUSINESS, you must USE THE PAPER that goes into the Home.

PILES Do not suffer another day with Itching, Blind, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. Old Organ Returns To Bring a Romance

PIPES MELTED AND CASE SAWED UP FOR VENEER AFTER LONG SPAN IN LITTLE PARISH CHURCH.

What might be termed the romance of an old church organ, and its ultimate end, figured in the grist of customs decisions handed down recently by the Board of United States General Appraisers. The romantic part of the story lies in the fact that the instrument, originally manufactured in this country, returned recently after an absence of seventy-five years, during which period it had served acceptably two or three generations of French Canadians in the little village of Portage La Prairie. While the official papers in the case failed to give the identity of the particular church in which the organ was installed, report had it that it was for the long period mentioned above the property of the Catholic parish church.

Finally, the organ outlived its usefulness and was removed from the house of worship and relegated to a shed pending negotiations by the parish priest for an up-to-date instrument. Funds for the proposed new organ being scarce, and the priest determined to effect a purchase of the new organ by securing an allowance on the old, consummation of the exchange was deferred for three years. Finally a St. Louis firm of organ builders who given the contract for the new organ, the firm agreeing to allow $150 for the old affair. After careful packing the old organ left the scenes of a lifetime at Portage La Prairie and arrived back once more in the United States being billed to St. Louis.

It was at this point in its history that the ancient organ for the first time attracted the attention of the customs representatives of the United States Government. As shown by the railway invoice, it was valued at $75 and described as "nineteen boxes, parts of pipe organ, (second-hand)". The packing was valued at $20. Entry was made at the St. Louis Custom House, duty exemption being claimed under the Underwood tariff as "old junk". The Collector disagreed with the importer's estimate of the dismantled organ and exacted duty for 35 per cent., under the law's provision for "parts of musical instruments". This duty was paid under protest by the Pierson-Schade Forwarding Company, an appeal being taken to the Board of General Appraisers in this city for review.

At the hearing it developed that George Kilgen & Sons, organ builders, of St. Louis installed the new organ and took the old instrument in part payment. An affidavit submitted to the board was to the effect that the old organ was of the manufacture of the United States, "was truly exported and imported without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by a process of manufacture or other means, and that no bounty, drawback or Governmental allowance had been paid or admitted thereon." The affidavit was filed for the purpose of claiming free entry, but the claim was not advanced at the trial, the Junk paragraph being cited instead.

C. C. Kilgen, a member of the organ building firm was the chief witness, his testimony disclosing that not much sentiment was extended to the old church organ once it reached the St. Louis factory. Kilgen's description of the old organ when taking the stand was brief and to the point. "Simply old material. It came back. We sold an organ up there, he said.

The decision written for the board by Judge Sullivan said the evidence disclosed that no part of the "merchandise" was used as parts of musical instruments except possibly the stops, and in some instances, other parts in repairing old organs, but that the material so used had to be remanufactured. The pipes were melted up for the metal, which was used. The case was cut up into veneer lumber, being "old and dry" as recited in the decision, while the keyboard, which the witness stated was refuse junk was not used, being old ivory worn through.

Judge Sullivan in granting free entry as junk, in his decision mused thus:

"The paragraph under which the merchandise was classified has reference entirely to musical instruments or parts thereof. Instruments used in connection therewith, and metal musical instrument strings. Was this a musical instrument of part thereof? We think not. Does musical instrument mean an instrument that can be used, and that will produce some music?

"Does 'parts of musical instruments' mean such as can be used in the condition as imported? In our opinion in each instance it does. The merchandise does not seem to me to be a musical instrument as we understand that term, nor parts thereof. We are without any testimony whatever that it could be used as such. On the contrary the evidence sustains the protestants' contention that it could not be used. We hold that it is neither a musical instrument nor a part thereof, and reverse the Collector's action."

Wets and Drys Threaten Bolt In Iowa Fight

Des Moines, Ia., June 23.—An unparalleled situation exists in Iowa state politics. A bolt of decided dimensions by the dry Republicans to the Democrats, is openly predicted, and a bolt of nearly the same size is predicted for the wet Democrats to the Republicans.

The nomination of Lt. Governor W. L. Harding by the Republicans for governor, brought the chief state issue squarely down to one of prohibition. Harding is a wet—the only one of the four Republican candidates for governor. His nomination virtually commits the party in Iowa to a wet programme. E. T. Meredith, the Democratic nominee, has declared for a drastic prohibition stand.

The bolt by the dry Republicans started immediately after the nomination of Harding became a certainty. Cards by the dozen are now being distributed over the state bearing this inscription: "I am a dry Republican and I will support E. T. Meredith for governor."

PAPERS REFUSE AID TO HAIDING.

Dry Republicans who are circulating these cards say that they are being signed by many Republicans in every section of the state. It is said that more than 1,000 signatures have already been obtained in Des Moines alone.

Added to this phase of the Republican bolt has come the declaration by a number of the influential newspapers of the state that they cannot support Harding for governor. All of the newspapers making this declaration have been regarded as stalwart Republican publications. They have not stated that they will support Meredith, but they have said emphatically that they cannot support Harding. Probably they will maintain silence during the campaign.

Offsetting the bolt of the dry Republicans, however, is that of the wet Democrats. It is reliably stated that no less than 55,000 wet Democrats jumped their ticket at the primary and voted for Harding. This number may be augmented at the time of the November election.

GERMAN-AMERICANS FOR HARDING.

An open call was issued by the wet Democrats to their fellows to vote for Harding. The German-American Alliance of Iowa, a pronouncedly wet organization, declared for Harding, and the word was quietly passed around in the east Iowa River towns, wet by inclination and sympathy, that Harding was the candidate all the liberals should support. Not only did many wet Democrats change their party affiliations to back Harding but a considerable number wrote his name in upon the Democratic ticket.

However, there is this one feature that may hold many wet Democrats loyal to their state ticket—it has been a long time since the Democrats were in control in Iowa, and this looks like their one big chance to get back in the saddle. Every effort is being made by the Democratic leaders of the state to hold the rank and file of the party in line.

Democratic party heads scoff at the idea of wholesale desertions, but it is quite well known that they are not a little alarmed over it.

HIS HEART BADLY AFFECTED

"Fruit-a-tives" Soon Relieved This Dangerous Condition

LACROSSE MAN HONORED.

Lieut. P. F. McGibbon of the 8th Royal Berkshire Regiment, the well-known Bracebridge lacrosse man, has received the military cross for distinguished conduct on the field. Dr. McGibbon was one of the organizers of the Ontario Lacrosse Association at the time of the split with the C.L.A., and under his management Bracebridge won several championships.

When the war broke out he enlisted with the 8th Royal Berkshire as medical officer.

There is more or less work

Every furnace demands some attention. But there is no reason why the twice-a-day job should be anything but pleasant. And to save a little time and a little bother every day means a lot in the course of the winter.

The Sunshine is a furnace any one can look after without spoiling either clothes or temper

The door is large enough for the biggest coal shovel. The grates are strong and turn easily. The ash-pan catches all the ashes without the need of shovelling. The water-pan is located so that it can be filled quickly.

Ash-dust cannot escape when the Sunshine is being shaken down. None of that light dust floats about the house or the basement.

The damper and the check draft can be regulated from upstairs—and perfectly too. The close-fitting doors and dampers hold the fire for hours without waste.

RUSSIA BENEFITS BY BAN ON DRINK

LONDON, June 24.—The economic position of Russia is attracting the attention of financial magnates in countries other than those engaged in hostilities, and it is certain the end of the war will find her in a very different position, a change for the better since 1913, which is largely attributable to the prohibition of alcohol.

The sudden departure of M. Bark, the Russian Minister of Finance, for London and Paris is the talk of financial circles in Petrograd. The Russian Minister of Finance usually comes West for money. But the third Russian war loan is just nearing conclusion and the results are quite satisfactory. The Government will get $1,000,000,000, $6,000,000 being paid into the imperial exchequer a few days ago by a group of banks which undertook its realization.

The terms of subscription have been extended, for lately the United States and China have begun to subscribe large amounts of money. This sum was considered sufficient to carry on the war for some months.

The official explanation of M. Bark's visit is that the term of credits for payment of orders made by the Russian Government abroad ended on October 14. It seems, however, that a number of orders were executed, so the Russian Government is compelled to ask for an extension of the date for payments. There is little doubt that other more important questions will be discussed, and especially as to how far Russia can reckon on the financial assistance of Great Britain if the war is prolonged.

Closer Alliance Is Sought.

At the same time the Russian Government seems to attach the greatest importance to the economic conference of the Allies. The Russian delegates include M. Pokrovsky, the Comptroller of State, one of the greatest Russian experts on finance, and M. Prilekaieff, the Assistant Minister of Trade and Commerce, who will be accompanied by chiefs of departments of all the Ministries interested, even the Ministry of Interior.

At this moment both official and private initiatives are directed to one aim—the establishment of the closest possible relations between England and Russia.

That Russia after the war will present a most desirable customer can scarcely be doubted. The Miniatry of Finance has just published a compendium of reports received from the tax collecting chambers and officers all over the empire as to the effects of the war on Russian trade, commerce and the economic situation generally. From this report it is seen that, forced in many ways to rely upon herself, Russia has developed initiative and adaptability to a degree never dreamed of before. From a purely agricultural country she is fast developing into a manufacturing and industrial one.

There is a great demand for all sorts of textile and just manufactures as well as those producing chemicals, drugs and different other things necessary to the army. The capital has been concentrated in these productions and at the same time factories have been adapted to the new requirements.

Prohibition Has Helped Empire.

The prohibition of alcohol, according to the unanimous verdict of all reports, has done much in assisting to eliminate the economic crisis. Besides this it has also contributed greatly to uplifting the social and moral status of the people. In the governments of Petrograd and Moscow crime has decreased amazingly and the detention rooms at police stations are empty.

The Tamboff tax collecting chamber reports that the number of prosecutions in courts of all kinds in the government decreased during the first nine months of the war, in some by 17 per cent., in others by 69 per cent. In the government of Kazan crime decreased for the first ten months of the war by one-third, and the attorneys attribute this chiefly to the abolition of alcohol.

According to official figures for the whole of the government of Perm the number of criminal offences for the eight months of war as compared with the same period 1913-14 has decreased by 36.8 per cent. In Moscow the number of criminal offences during the first four months has decreased by no less than 29.5 per cent. The number of fires, which is a chronic calamity in Russian villages, has decreased in some places by 22 per cent., some even by 50 per cent.

At the same time, the well being of the people has increased all around. Especially in the villages peasants and their families are beginning not only to dress well and wear boots, which they have never done before, but to think generally about comfort, a thing hitherto altogether unknown.

The HOME CIRCLE COLVAN

CALL HIM "FATHER."

One of our valued exchanges gives boys the following good advice:

"Boys, when you speak of your father don't call him 'the old' man.' Of course, you are older than when you were taught to call him father. You are much smarter than you were then, you are much more manly looking, your clothes fit you better, your hat has a modern shape and your hair is combed differently. In short, 'flyer' than you were then. Your father has a last year's coat, a two-year-old hat and a vest of still older pattern. He can't write such an elegant note as you can and all that, but don't call him 'the old man.' Call him father. For years he has been rustling around to get things together. He has been held to the thorny pathy of uphill industry and the brightest half of life has gone from him forever. But he loves you, though he goes along without saying much about it, therefore be not so ungrateful."

A word of encouragement at the right time is of more real worth than an ounce of gold. It is more nourishing to the soul than meat and drink to the hungry. It is better stimulant than the richest wine, and the strongest lever to lift from the ruts of despondency. Many a poor overworked wife is pining for a word of sympathy from her husband. Just one word, one look, to show that the toil of weary hours are appreciated, and the light reflected would more than recompense the giver.

We have often wondered why mother's memory and hands must serve for a dozen persons. Would it not be better for all concerned if other's kindness contained more of self-assertion and less of self-sacrifice? Would not, at times, papa feel less disturbed, nay, wrathfully, if he were careful to keep his own papers in order, and perform the twenty other trivial things he has time to do in leisure moments, but expects of some one else? Would it not be better for sister to teach baby—who is old enough—to button his own shoes, than to do it for him each morning as a duty.

Don't wake your boys and girls up mornings with "Hurry up and get up and come out and feed the horses and milk the cows, for we've got a lot of work to do, and it's getting late, so hurry up or we'll never get through." Is that very pleasant to hear the first thing in the morning? Don't hurry so much, but take time to live and to see a pretty flower or listen to the happy notes of a little bird, enjoy all these beauties of nature as you go along through life. Are you surprised that your boys and girls begin to show dissatisfaction with their homes and long for city life, when at home it is too much hurry, hurry all the time—hurry and do your work? Yet it grows monotonous, and they see that each day brings them no nearer the goal than the day before, so they lose interest and grow to hate these daily duties that are all hurry and work.

This column is published weekly in the hope that it may awaken on the part of the husband and child a deeper appreciation of her who is the central figure of home; that it may strengthen the family bonds, making them more beautiful and tender, that it may encourage charity and breathe hope for the future, where language is music and love is law. We trust this department may to the young brighten and deepen the pleasures and memories of home, while to the advanced in years something may be said that will bring to view the reflected radiance of a golden dawning. We should be pleased to occasionally hear from our readers who appreciate this department. It does no harm to drop a word even in the pathway of an editor whose head seems ever to lead among the thorns.

We have no prejudice against the neatly dressed, nice appearing boy, while we do detest the fellow who goes around looking like a bunch of hard luck, but a girl looking for a model husband should be careful. If you don't know one when you see him ask mother—she will recognize him at sight.

The man and woman who try to make their home the most interesting spot on earth for each other, and for their friends and those who are near and dear to them, have but occasional use for the club. It is to them, like the theatre, a pleasant place to enter now and then but not a spot to dwell in.

Philosopher and poet are alike in the verdict that the safety and perpetuity of any nation lies in the homes of its people.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Male Stenographer—"Madam, you are standing on my foot." Female ditto—"I beg your pardon. I thought it belonged to the man sitting down."—Boston Transcript.

Indigestion Resulted From Bad Case of Inactive Liver

Experience Proved That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Exactly What Was Needed

If every sufferer from indigestion would study his case as did the writer of this letter the great majority would find sluggish action of the liver and bowels to be the cause of trouble.

It is then an easy way to finding a cure, for there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of the liver, kidneys and forming their natural functions, the system is thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous waste matter and the process of digestion is no longer impeded.

Mrs. W. L. Jones, Hill Spring, Alta., writes: "I have often thought I would write and tell you how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's medicines, especially Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered terribly from indigestion and did not know what was the cause. I got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so improved that I began to study the malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right, I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion, the nervous spells vanished and the 'blues' flew away. I am never sick now, but should the old trouble return, I know how to cure it quickly."

There is a whole host of derangements which disappear when the liver is set right. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, irritability, constipation are a few of the more common results of torpid liver action. By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can control all such disorders. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Brussiloff Is Idol Of Russian Army

A. A. Brussiloff, commander of the Russian offensive against the Austrian battle line, is 64 years old and looks 45. He took part first as a captain and then as a major in the Turko-Russian war of 40 years ago.

"How old values have been upset," he said to Mr. Breshgo Breshkovsky, of the Petrograd Bourse Gazette, when he had told that enterprising journalist that he could not remain on the front—not even to welcome and write about the "new army."

"Take Skobeleff," he added, naming one of the most distinguished generals of the war. "Is it thinkable that an ostentatious, decorative general like that, galloping about at the front in a white uniform and on a white horse, should exist to-day? Possibly he would only last a quarter of an hour, for if the Germans fired a few volleys, nothing would be left of the dashing horseman.

"In those days this splendid bravado had its object and meaning—it was an inspiration to the troops. But now when everything has disappeared from the surface and been buried in the ground, Skobeleff could be seen by, at the most, two companies.

"That is not enough to justify the exposure of the life of the commander of an army to such danger. At the same time, I am far from thinking that the commander of an army should sit at his headquarters or drive round visiting the staffs of corps and divisions.

"On the contrary a commander must be visible at the front and under fire, so that the officers and soldiers may see him and "feel" his presence, and so that he may witness the actual circumstances of the battle. Only by these means can there be a living bond between a commander and the army."

A. A. Brussiloff, according to Mr. Breshko, lives by nerves, strenuous work and a sense of duty. He eats very little. He regards dinner as a necessary evil, and it is finished in not more than 20 minutes. Immediately after he goes to the adjoining carriage—workroom of his head of the staff, and they are occupied together till late at night.

The soldiers worship him, says M. Breshko. He never courts popularity among them. He talks to them seldom and with a matter of fact abruptness, but in "his few words lies a knowledge of the soldier's soul; a skill in finding a direct road to the soldier's heart; which must be deeply rooted in the man himself."

A. A. Brussiloff's physical endurance at 64, is said to be amazing. "Even now, one of the best cavalrymen in Europe, he can outdistance expert and youthful horsemen. When he rides around the positions, weather does not exist for him. If the automobile sticks in the rich, black soil he continues his way on horseback. Where the going is impossible for horses, as in the Pinsk swamps, he goes on foot, knee deep in mud. He jumps from clump to clump in places where there is water right and left, and never shows a sign of fatigue.

The Austrians and Germans are believed to be greatly impressed by A. A. Brussiloff's personality. In the Carpathians a year ago they sent their picked troops to the front. "The enemy's best generals have broken their teeth and claws against the iron 'barrier' of the famous Brussiloff Corps."

He is noted for his laconic orders. "Hold out, whatever happens!" And they hold out. "No frenzied attacks," writes M. Breshko, "no tempestuous cannonade will drive them back when such an order has been given. There is in currency the following soldier's remark:

"'What retreat? Impossible! We are Brussiloff's!'"

"The army is proud of Brussiloff, and Brussiloff is proud of his army. Giving it due credit for its endurance, valor and stubbornness, he desires only only thing—more detestation of the Germans."

Text for a Sermon.—A visiting minister preaching in a small town near which a well known race meeting is held, forcibly denounced the "sport of kings." The principal patron of the church always attended the home meetings, and of this the stranger was afterwards informed. "I am afraid I touched one of your weaknesses," said the preacher, not wishing to offend the wealthy one; but it was quite unintentional, I assure you." "Oh, don't mention it," cheerfully retorted the backslider. "It's a mighty poor sermon that don't hit me somewhere."

"I see than England talks about prohibiting the importation and manufacture of perfumes!" "Won't it be awful for the women to be cut off without a scent!"—Buffalo Express

GO TO CHURCH.

How many of our readers will go to church next Sunday? How many people in our town will do as they should do and attend church service. A church service fills the mind with ideas which make for cleaner living and a greater peace of mind, body and soul. All need to go to church—any church. They are all good. All strive to reach the same place. It is needful to attend services of this kind because if men and women are to justify their existence they must feed their minds with the ideas that come from the Creator.

In failing to go to church one loses something which is vital and necessary to well being. So, try out the suggestion Sunday. Nothing will be lost, much gained. The call from the church is a call to humanity's better nature, a call well worth heeding.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

The shirtwaist will always have its admirers—more ardent perhaps in summer than at any other time. It requires a clever connecting and blending of ideas to create styles in shirtwaists that will deserve to be called fashionable and yet show a different application of the ideas of designers to give something really artistic and distinctive in a number of models. No. 7,804 is an evidence of how this is done—it shows a blouse with a grace that is by no means common. The shoulder fronts are closely gathered and in the lower part of the waist body two downward tucks are made, giving the same view back and front. The collar is another striking feature: it may be wired to stand up at the back and flare at the sides or roll low, according to preference. The sleeve has a downward tuck in the lower portion, with the result that a puff section is formed for joining to the wrist cuff. The vest, which extends the full length of the front, is in one with the collar. There are no underarm seams in this waist.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. To make like the illustration in size 36 will require 2¼ yards of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard of 36 inch goods for the collar and vest if contrasting goods contribute this part of the model.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 15 cents, or 3 for 25 cents.

THE ITALIANS ON A GENERAL OFFENSIVE

CANADIAN CASUALTIES TO DATE TOTAL 33,000

Italians Are On The Offensive Austrians In General Retreat

Taking Advantage of the Withdrawal of Austrian Troops to Meet the Russian Offensive Italian Forces Start Smashing Drive Capturing Many Strong Points--Hardest Blow Struck Against Austrian Centre.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ROME, June 26.—The Austrian troops have begun a general retreat on the Trentino front under a smashing Italian offensive, it was officially announced to-day.

The Italians have captured Austrian positions at Castelgomberto, Meletie, Monte Logara, Gallio, Asiago, Cesuna and Monte Cergio.

The Italian gains are the most important made by General Cadorna's armies in a single attack since the first few weeks following the outbreak of the Austro-Italian war. The Italians tre driving home their offensive with the greatest vigor, taking advantage of the withdrawal of Austrian troops to meet the Russian offensive.

The hardest blow was struck against the Austrian centre which invaded Italy in the recent Austrian offensive. Here the Italians took enemy positions on a fifteen-mile front, taking Monte Cegnio and Cesuna, southwest of Asiago, the Asiago positions and the town of Gallio, five miles northeast of Asiago.

The capture of a dozen Austrian positions on a wide front was announced in a supplementary official statement to-night reporting the Italians making amazing progress in new offensive.

CASUALTIES AT ZILLIBEKE WILL REACH 12,000 MARK

Special to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 26.—Approximately ten thousand names have appeared in the casualty lists issued by the Militia Department since the Germans made their first attack on the Ypres salient on June 2. As approximately 23,000 casualties had been previously reported this means that in number of casualties equal the First Canadian Contingent which sailed from Quebec in the autumn of 1914. It is likely that the lists will continue to be heavy for a few days yet, and not before all the names of those who suffered in the recent German offensive, and the successful Canadian counter attack are in they will exceed twelve thousand. It is also expected that so long as the Canadians are holding the Ypres salient with ordinary conditions of trench warfare, the casualties will normally run from one to two hundred per day.

ALLIES' BIG OFFENSIVE IS EXPECTED SHORTLY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 26.—Pointing to immense gains of Italians, and to Germany's admissions of a continued Russian offensive, British artillery activity and the weakness of the German attacks at the Verdun front, military critics here give the opinion to-day that the signs are for the immediate commencement of the long expected super-offensive of the Allies.

HAVE THE RUSSIANS CROSSED CARPATHIANS?

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 26.—Russian troops have broken through the Carpathians into Austria-Hungary and Transylvania in an advance from Bukowina, according to a wireless despatch from Rome to-day. The despatch quoted Petrograd telegrams as authority for the statement.

French Troops Take German Trenches

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official Communique), June 26.—French troops carried a few elements of German trenches between Fumin Woods on the northeastern front of Verdun last night, the War Office announced to-day.

A German attack west o Thiaumont was completely checked by French screen fire.

Artillery duels occurred around Dead Man's Hill, on the northwestern front of Verdun.

BERLIN, June 26.—In the most stubborn fighting west of Sokul, the Germans have inflicted new defeats on the Russians, the War Office announced this afternoon.

In the fighting since June 14, the Germans have taken sixty-one Russian officers, 11,097 men, two cannon and 54 machine guns.

LONDON, June 26.—In the Commons to-day Under-Secretary Tennant to-day announced that thirty-four conscientious objectors to military service in various parts of England had been sentenced to death by a military tribunals, but the sentences were commuted in each case.

Do Not Forget To Vote For The By-law On Tuesday

The Bonner-Worth Company agreed to employ 30 operatives when they came here in 1911. They employed nearly double that number almost at once. They doubled their capacity since and are putting up large additions to their factory now.

If the By-law is carried on Tuesday they will establish an entirely new industry here, and there is no reason why it should not be as successful as the present factory.

The electors should not fail to show their interest by voting for the by-law.

Three-fifths of the total vote polled is required to carry this by-law.

SOLDIER'S WIVES ARE ADVISED TO REMAIN AT HOME

May Suffer Loss of Patriotic Fund If They Move Out, is Intimation From Local Committee Will Not Hesitate to Act If Occasion Arises

A MILITARY VIEW

About this time last year, and at a time when men enlisted at Peterborough were being transferred in numbers to the training points at Belleville and Kingston, numbers of the wives of these men would go to take rooms or board in either of the places, as above, in order, as they said, to be near their husbands. This course caused considerable friction in the distribution of the Patriotic Fund amounts, as the wives had to be transferred to the branches where living, and transferred back again on return. Also the Committee had frequent applications to send money here and there.

Remonstrance was made from time to time at this course. Besides, it is plain, that the Patriotic Fund was never subscribed, nor it it being distributed, in order to allow women to travel, or to go and reside in a place where the expense will be very much more than if living at home. Having said, if possible, stop, the practice local committee propose to discourage had what has occurred in view, the of going to Kingston. Indeed, it may go so far as to at once cancel the allowance should it be known that its wishes are disregarded. It is not proposed to notify all women, personally, but this public intimation will be, it is trusted, sufficient. There is this view to consider: If a woman says she has sufficient money to go about and visit to Kingston, without using the Patriotic Fund money, then she should, probably, not be on the fund at all, so far as assistance is concerned. That view is held by the Committee. It will not hesitate to act if occasion arises.

In this connection, the following letter, received from Lieut.-Col. Johnston, is of interest, and verifies what has been stated above. Publication of this letter has been delayed, until after the excursion of Saturday, lest it be thought that anything was done to interfere with that enterprise. Such a thing as a day's outing cannot be construed as a visit for a period of time.

Barriefield Camp.
12th June, 1916.

To Executive Officer, Patriotic Fund,
Peterborough, Ont.

Sir,—I would like if you would be good enough to kindly advise any of the wives of the men of the 93rd Battalion from moving to Kingston to be near their husbands, as it is expected that the Battalion will be leaving here in a short time for another camp.

The whole Battalion is very busy at work, and if any of the men's wives did come down here they would see very little of their husbands, as they are not to be permitted to go to Kingston every evening, nor are they allowed to sleep out of camp.

In conclusion, I might say that I hope you will be able to dissuade the wives of our men from moving to Kingston.

I have the honour to be
Your obedient servant,
KEITH G. LECH, Major.
For Officer Commanding 93rd Battalion, C.E.F.

GENERAL MERCER WAS KILLED BY SHRAPNEL

TORONTO, June 26.—All doubt as to the fate of Major-General Malcolm Mercer, the highest Canadian officer ever lost in battle, was cleared up to-day by the receipt of the following postcard from Lieut. Lyman Gooderham, his aide-de-camp, now a prisoner in Germany to his parents here: "Am now prisoner and en route to detention camp. Have been treated very well indeed by captors. Was beside my beloved General when he was killed. Lay in battlefield for two days suffering from shell shock until picked up by German patrol. He was first shocked by large shell and I tried to get him way, but impossible; was shot through leg and the latter was broken. Lay in field. No pain, and next day he was killed by shrapnel instantly.. German staff arranging honourable burial for one of Canada's greatest soldiers. God bless you all and don't worry."

TWENTY-FIVE RECRUITS WANTED HERE FOR THE FIELD AMBULANCE UNIT

Another Chance For Those Who Wish to Join Canadian Army Medical Corps--Recruits May Report to Major Cameron --News From Barriefield Camp---Officers Beaten in Football--To-Day's General Military News.

Any local boys who wish to join Queen's Field Ambulance are to be given an opportunity, as Major Cameron has been notified that twenty-five more recruits from Peterborough will be accepted. Some fifteen Peterborough boys, most of them well known, have joined the Ambulance unit, but there has been no further recruiting since Captain Kennedy left. Local recruits are asked to apply at once to Major Cameron at the Armouries at 9 a.m. or 4 p.m

BARRIEFIELD, June 4.—A football match was played on Friday night on the Battalion grounds between the officers and the Battalion team, resulting in a win for the latter by 7 goals to nil. The following teams lined up:

Battalion Team.	Officers' Team
Goal
Pte. Griffin	Capt. Munro
R Back
... Cridland	Lieut. Dupuy
L. Back
Corp. Norman	Capt. Neilson
R. Half
Lance-Corp. Hardie	Capt. Mowat
C. Half
Pte. West	Lieut. Richardson
L. Half
Sergt. Gower	Lieut. Milburn
O. S. Right
Sgt-Major Hartshorn	Capt. Widdifield
I. S. Right
L.-Corp. Stockdale	Lieut. Gardiner
C. Forward
Q. M. Sergt. King	Lieut. Ketchum
I. S. Right
Pte. Shaw	Lieut. Stevenson
O. S. Right
Q. M. Sergt. Williams	Lieut. Crisp

Referee—Capt. Bygott.

King kicked for the Battalion team, Stockdale kicking into touch. Dupuy cleared from Hartshorn. Williams coming along the wing at a good clip, was pulled up by Mowat, who shaped up like an old veteran. The Battalion forwards coming down with a rush, the Officers formed platoon in goal, Munro saving twice in quick succession. The Officers got away on the left incline, forcing their opponents into their trenches. From the goal kick West came through and scored the first goal while Munro was lighting his cigarette. The goal was offside alright, but Referee Bygott happened to be looking at De Puyjalon who was dancing a can-can on the touch line. The game was fast and furious at this time, the ball travelling at a tremendous pace up and down the field. Ketchum, after a spectacular run, had the misfortunte to fall over a blade of grass when in the act of shooting into goal. It would certainly have been a goal had he been able to keep his feet. At this stage of the game the officers were playing fine ball. It was only through Cridland and Norman being in the way that they did not scare. Crisp got away along the centre and shot. If the goal had been large enough, there is no doubt he would have scored. Shot after shot was pouring in the goal. It is difficult to say how many goals would have been scored had anyone but Munro been in goal. Eventually, however, Stockdale slipped another goal through from the corner. King coming into possession when close in, shot hard Munro saving a hot shot. From the kick off, a fine piece of combination work on the part of the officers, resulted in the opportunity being spoiled through Stevenson handling, evidently being under the impression he was playing rugby. King scored an offside goal, Capt. Bycott having his eyes skinned for all foul plays. Dupuy and Stockdale collided when the latter was getting dangerously near goal West scored a fine goal from a long shot, which Munro had no chance with. Widdifield was in the thick of the fight all through, and experienced hard luck in not scoring. Dupuy calling a platoon to attention, placed them in goal. The Battalion team had a very little chance to score from then onward. From a goal kick by Munro, Richardson getting possession picked up the ball and made tracks towards the goal, scoring a rugby goal with half the Battalion on his back. The game ended in a win for the Battalion team by 7 goals to 1 rugby goal.

Capt. Munro was a tower of strength to the Officers team.

Capt. Neilson was playing rover and held down the position to perfection.

Lieut. Dupuy, who was playing back sometimes, is a better hockey player

Capt. Mowat was kept too busy trying to put Hartshorn on the casualty list to think anything about scoring.

Lieut. Richardson scored the only goal for the officers, and was obliged to carry the ball through about a dozen players with it.

Lieut. Milburn worked hard but got no support.

Capt. Widdifield took a great deal of watching, making some good shots, but the goal happened to be in the wrong place.

Lieut. Gardiner got through a whole lot of work, constantly signalling to the other officers to keep moving.

Lieut. Ketchum was a most enthusiastic player, often kicking into his own goal.

Lieut. Stevenson is very useful with his hands, his feet not being large enough.

Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp is a speedy player. It would pay the committee to keep their eyes skinned.

Lieut. de Puyjalon, the little man armed with the big mallet, was on hand to despatch those unable to be fixed up by Capt. Wilson, who was in attendance on the touch line.

Successful Concert.

A most enjoyable concert was held in the large marquee Friday night. Some excellent numbers were given, amongst them the following:

Instrumental Trio—Hartshorn Bros. and Pte. Farr.

Quartette — Hartshorn Bros and Pte Farr.

Song, 'Somewhere a Voice is Calling'—Sergt.-Major Hartshorn

Song, 'Can You Pay for a Broken Heart'—Pte. H. Hatcher.

Song, 'Good-bye Mother Dear'—Pte. Farr.

Song, When the Dew is on the Rose'—Corp. Hartshorn.

Song, 'There is a Fight Going On'—Pte Farr.

Song, 'After the Ball' — Pte. H. Hatcher.

Sergt Leader accompanied the songs on the piano.

Very great credit is due to the artists who entertained the men in no small degree. This is the first of a series of concerts that will be given in the near future.

A route march of 10,000 officers and men left Barriefield camp this morning under the command of Col. Hemming, camp comandant. Leaving the camp grounds about 9 a.m. they proceeded towards Kingston, marching up King street as far as the penitentiary, returning by way of Princess street. It was certainly a grand sight, one which will linger long in the memory of the inhabitants of Kingston. The 93rd Battalion led the parade, and as the band was absent on leave, the band of the 109th was kindly put at the disposal of the 93rd. Major Lech was in command of the Battalion.

Mr. McKinlay, Margaret Avenue, has received a letter from her son.

Peterborough People Visit The War Camp

Friends of 93rd Battalion Spend Week-end at Kingston Visiting Their Friends in Khaki and Inspecting Barriefield.

AN ENJOYABLE VISIT

Taking advantage of the excursion on the C.P.R. and the special rates over the Grand Trunk, some two hundred and fifty Peterborough friends of the 93rd Battalion visited Barriefield camp for the week end, having a very enjoyable outing in spite of the smart showers of Saturday night. It was the first visit to the big war camp for most of the party, and they found the experience a most interesting one, especially as it afforded them a fine opportunity to be with their friends in the battalion. They found officers and men in the best of spirits. Of course there is still talk of mud—the mud at Barriefield is proverbial and one of the big features—but it is no longer a tragedy, but a joke to the men. The rain of Saturday night gave the Sunday visitors a chance to look over the heavy going in the lines, and the boys in khaki took a certain amount of satisfaction that they had a sample of the much-talked of mud on hand to show the visitors. The Barriefield mud is affectionate and clinging, more like wet cement than anything else, but the men have grown used to it now and with a day or two of warm weather the camp quickly dries.

Otherwise the Peterborough battalion is very comfortably equipped. The board floors in the tents are a great improvement over the wet grounds, and the big marquee presented by the ladies of Peterborough, which is large enough for the whole battalion to eat in if necessary, is greatly appreciated by the men. The four field kitchens are in constant use, as is the motor truck presented to the battalion by Mrs. J. R. Stratton. It was a pleasure for the week-end visitors to note that all the equipment provided by the citizens of the city and council of great advantage to the battalion.

SAY CASEMENT TRIED TO FORM IRISH BRIGADE

Ex-Prisoners of War Released From Germany Testify Against Sir Roger Casement in His Trial for High Treason To-day

CHARGE A LENGTHY ONE

LONDON, June 26. — In a firm voice, Sir Roger Casement to-day pleaded not guilty to a charge of high treason at the opening of his trial before Lord Chief Justice Reading and Associate Justices Avery and Harridge.

A jury was obtained from a special panel of 130 talesmen in less than an hour.

Casement to-day was scarcely the same man who appeared at the preliminary arraignment in Bow street police court. Then, his beard sadly needed trimming, his hair was frowsy and he wore an ill-fitting sack suit. When he was brought over this morning from Brixton prison, he wore a carefully brushed morning coat and immaculate linen. His beard and hair were carefully trimmed.

The prisoner smiled and nodded to several acquaintances as he entered. He listened calmly while the clerk read the lengthy charge, reciting his activities in connection with the Irish rebellion and his attempts to induce Irish soldiers, prisoners in Germany, to desert from the British army.

Daniel Bailey, the Irish soldier arraigned with Casement at the preliminary hearing, will be tried separately.

There was no crowd around the court to-day, admission being by ticket only.

Attorney General F. E. Smith made an exhaustive opening statement, reciting Casement's nineteen years in the Consular and other services, his thorough familiarity with Government methods and consequently his great personal responsibilities. Casement listened, apparently bored. He yawned several times while Smith was talking.

Former Irish prisoners in Germany testified about Sir Roger's efforts to organize an Irish brigade among Irish prisoners to be landed in Ireland to fight for Irish independence.

On cross-examination Casement's solicitor, Sullivan, attempted to draw admissions from the soldiers that Casement was enrolling the brigade to fight against Ulster volunteers landing in Ireland after the war.

Witness admitted he did not hear Casement say specifically that the Irish brigade was to fight England.

Casement's counsel indicated that the defence would contend that Casement was recruiting a regiment not to fight England, but to uphold Home Rule against the Ulsterites.

Wounded in The Shoulder and Thigh

Mrs. Clark Receives Information About Her Son Gunner Clark

Mrs. William S. Clark, 633 Roger Street, has received from Capatin W. J. Baxter, Chaplain Number 10, Casualty Clearing Station, B.E.F., the following information, relative to her son, Gunner W. J. Clark, who a few days ago was officially reported wounded. The communication follows:

"Your son, Gunner W. J. Clark, has come into the hospital wounded in the shoulder and thigh with shrapnel. He came in through the night, but already has shown some improvement. It is too soon to say that his case is no longer serious, but he was so anxious for you to have a card to allay your anxiety, that I send this off. I hope I shall have good news for you when I write again. With kind regards—W. J. B."

FUNERAL OF PHILIP TAYLOR

Pupils of King Edward School Followed Comrade to the Grave

The funeral of the late Philip Taylor, whose death occurred as a result of a baseball accident on Tuesday night last, took place on Saturday afternoon from the family residence, 45 Ware street, to the Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Mr. McKenzie officiating. The funeral was largely attended, the pupils of the King Edward school and the members of the Knox church baseball club marching in a body. The pallbearers were Frank Montgomery, L. Bartley, W. Jackson, R. Byers, C. Cunningham and W. Liddell. Among the floral tributes received included beautiful flowers from the Knox church Guild, the baseball club of Knox church, the Daughters of the Empire and King Edward school.

GERMAN SOCIALIST LEADER TO BE TRIED THIS WEEK

AMSTERDAM, June 26.—The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger states that the trial of Dr Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist leader, who was arrested on May 1 in connection with the May Day demonstration, will take place in Berlin on Wednesday next before a court-martial, on a charge of attempted treason in time of war, which is punishable by fifteen years penal servitude. The former indictment charged high treason, conviction on which charge requires a death sentence.

MEXICO AND THE UNITED STATES.

The fact that in the first clash between Mexican and United States troops the loss of the latter was 93 per cent., indicates that in case of formal hostilities there will be some tough fighting. We have reports that the American cavalry command in Mexico was practically wiped out, only seven out of the hundred returning to their post. Of course the American troops were taken by surprise, and the Mexicans won the initial advantage by this fact. In the same way Germany took France by surprise, with like initial results. But when France and the Allies woke to the situation the progress of Germany was speedily stayed and has been stayed ever since. Germany has made resistance, but no considerable progress. In like manner, when the United States settles down to its work we shall have no more 93 per cent. victories by the Mexicans. Uncle Sam will have the advantage of numbers and military supplies. But on the other hand, he will be fighting in a country whose intimate topography and strategic possibilities he does not know as well as the Mexicans. It is, therefore, to be reasonably assumed that in case of war the campaign will not, especially at first, be a walkover for the United States. While the Mexican munitions of war, which there is reason to believe Germany has helped provide, last, the "Greasers" will doubtless put up a pretty stiff argument. Of the outcome, however, there can be no doubt, any more than doubt of the outcome of the great European war. Mexico, like the Teutons, will have to meet disastrous defeat. In both cases the defeat must be so thorough that there will be no room for any difficulty in arranging satisfactory and permanent peace settlement. In the case of the European muddle we begin to get glimpses of the end; but we are only at the beginning of the Mexican trouble, if there is to be any beginning; and the affair may be longer drawn out than many think. It is reported that, as an analagous consequence to interference between the quarrel of a man and wife, the two factions in Mexico will make common cause against what is regarded as the common enemy. It is asserted that Carranza has received offers of support that indicate that 500,000 will be added to his forces. So far everything is contingent; there is yet no war declared, and it is possible that diplomacy may avert actual international hostilities. It is to be hoped so, in one sense, though, in another, it is evident that the time is ripe for a permanent settlement of the vexed Mexican question. The progress and peace of the whole continent, indeed of the whole western hemisphere, are hindered and imperilled by the chronic unsettlement of affairs in Mexico. The duty of enforcing discipline naturally falls to the United States, and perhaps now is as good a time as any for undertaking the work, which will have been forced upon her, after, on her part, great patience and restraint.

A STREET RAMBLE.

After more than half a century of trying, we have not got our municipal machinery, either on paper or in practice, in effective running order. No national or provincial interest in any country in the world has had to suffer so much from legislative tinkering as the interests covered and submerged by the countless amendments to the Municipal Act. And we are far from having it right yet.

Nor have we had much success in applying the Municipal Act in a practical way. We have not yet devised anything, in the least effective way, approximating a system. We do not look ahead; don't provide for meeting the demands which the experience of every past year repeatedly forces upon our attention.

This is especially demonstrated by the treatment of the problem of dealing with our streets, whether we consider them from the point of use for traffic purposes, or from the point of beauty and cosiliness and convenience of the ratepaying citizens. The question of tidiness and beauty is complicated with the question of treatment of street surfaces and sides in a very important way.

An indignant resident has called attention to what he considers the disgraceful and unfortunately, typical, conditions on parts of Wallar street. Not far west from Belmont avenue, on the north side, is a stretch of disgracefully untidy weeds and long rank grass. This is worth referring to because similar conditions are repeated throughout the whole city. A five-foot walk is nearly hidden by the rank grass, both inside and outside the walk. On Saturday night, after the rain, it (the damp grass) was drooping over the walk on each side, so that its usable width was reduced to three feet. Two ladies could not walk abreast without having their skirts drenched with water. In some parts the grass and weeds are fully three feet high.

Of course the city will, in due time, destroy this pasture field in the heart of a live city. Men will be sent out armed with dull scythes to mangle off the weeds, to be left to wither and form a continuous disfigurement.

Why should we have weeds at all in our streets, especially the space assumed to comprise the driving surface? We wouldn't have weeds at all, if the streets were properly treated. The reason is that the driving surface of our streets is far too wide. In most of our streets, for this reason, we have a narrow streak of gravel in the middle, while on each side is a wide stretch of useless surface allowed to remain ungravelled, and become a continuous mud-hole, or a plantation for weeds.

As a rule the drainage is defective, and here and there, after rains, we have standing pools of water. On Homewood avenue, on Saturday night; there was at one point, a pool of water at the side of the street, fifty feet long and ten feet wide, and on both sides there was a continuous mud-hole, and in this mud the rank grass grew lustily. But for the houses and the street lights the street presented the appearance of a country road in a back township.

Now, all this comes of lack of system or plan or thought in dealing with the streets. As a rule, the driving surface of the streets is too wide for proper treatment at a reasonable expenditure. The engineering department and the aldermen admit this. They admit that if the road surface between curbs were narrowed so that it would be practicable to gravel or metal the whole width, the whole width would be used, and there would be no place for grass and weeds to grow. There would be no mud-holes on either side where wheels sink in the mud and delivery boys carry it upon the walks and upon the verandahs of residences.

Knowing this and having known it for years, why does the City Council not provide the remedy and apply the practice which they, as well as common sense assert, is the right practice? Why do they even ignore it and perpetuate it?

A few years ago one street in the west end was widened, and by the shifting of the walls—there's a walk only on one side of Babb's lane—the road surface was widened about eight feet. That this widening of the driving surface was useless, though it cost between two and three thousand dollars, is shown by the fact that next to the walk on the north end there is a width of eight feet never touched by a wheel, and where to-day there is an eight-feet wide stretch of rank weeds. We paid good money to provide a bed for weeds.

It seems superfluous to refer to those things which everybody can see. But nearly everybody has become so accustomed to the sight from year to year that they do not attract attention, or arouse the thought that we pay taxes for perpetuating just such municipal monstrocities. They do not attract the attention of aldermen either, who, apparently, regard them as a heritage from preceding councils.

What is the remedy for this waste of money and the unsatisfactory results in maintaining undrained and weed-grown streets? Many aldermen, themselves, instead of tackling the situation, and improving things, fall back on a Commission to manage our city. A commission would doubtless do better—it couldn't very well do worse. We need not call for commission government if aldermen in every city would take their duties seriously—do civic business with the regard to plan, system and foresight and general business principles that every private enterprise has to employ in order to succeed.

Meditations Upon The Leadership Of The Conservative Government

Events seem to have determined as a fact that successful and effective political leadership in Canada must have one or two requisites. It must possess personal magnetism, the ability to win from its following, not alone admiration and adherence, but more—affection. Or, failing that, it must possess, in mammoth measure, character. John A. Macdonald and Wilfrid Laurier belong to the beloved. Oliver Mowat and James P Whitney conquered by conviction.

Even generosity, seeing through the party glass darkly, fails to find the cabinet "honorables" who compose the colleagues of Premier Borden a man who measures sufficient to either standard to give him a title clear to future leadership. Those, again, who look over from "across the way," regard the occupants of the treasury benches, speaking frankly, as most ordinary mediocrity. There are those on back benches who loom larger than many who clutter the councils of cabinet.

If Hon. Frank Cochrane had his old time health he would best fill the bill of heir apparent to leadership. Cochrane is not a parliamentarian—he does not shine in the House—but he is an administrator and an idealist, as is proven by his ceaseless efforts to make the oil of sound business methods mix with the water of the exigencies of party politics. Cochrane is of the Whitney school, strong, persistent, silent, but he is devoid of personal political ambition.

There are, then four possibilities—Foster, Rogers, White and Meighen. One does not have to drop Meighen. He drops himself. He is a "flute and piccolo" performer in Parliament, and party bounds his political horizon. White goes next. He has ability; he works—but he chatters. He is a sophomore—but wants to do all the lecturing. Neither White nor Meighen possesses political acumen or real understanding of the psychology of the folk about them. Then there is Foster, with all things needful, save one—and that the essential. The tragedy of Parliament is Foster.

This leaves Rogers, not by divine right of fitness, but by painful process of elimination. Hon. "Bob" never lingers upon the field of defeat. He does not let sentimentality dull the edge of business. He separated himself from Roblinism with the alacrity of a Reno divorcee, and when Borden came a-wooing in the autumn of 1911, Hon. Bob promptly married him—him and his success and his prospective promising political investments. Within a month the Man from Manitoba had his grip on the running of the new and more elaborate household.

Nowadays experience is held in modest repute. Energy and initiative are the universal passports to recognition. Bingers never worries over the niceties of precedents or formulas. He doesn't know—and doesn't care—much about these things. He wants what he wants when he wants it, and he goes about getting it in his own way. He doesn't waste time studying the classics. He studies the men about him. He is a man's man. He hasn't much use for politicians in petticoats and pink tea methods. Diplomacy wearies him; procrastination irritates him; ethical considerations simply "don't belong."

What he lacks in conscience he makes up in heart. The "boys" call him "Bob". They think of him as "Bob". They regard his as the essence of human good fellowship. That's his great asset—that and the big warm-hearted hand which perpetually is slapping them on the shoulder or gripping them with friendly and intimate cordiality. Macdonald owed much of his abiding hold upon his followers to the fact that he was always "John A." Laurier, to Liberals, the "the Chief" with affection and confidence tied to the title. The Man from Manitoba is "Bob". When the rank and file call the boss "Bob" the chances are that there is good feeling and good teamwork there. That's why Hon. Bob is the master of the Borden administration.

The weakness of Hon. Bob and his leadership is that he puts the party where the public ought to be. His loyalty to the cause is greater than his devotion to the country. Success comes first—hang the expense. The end justifies the means. The boys who gulp, and gag, and sweat, but come along at the finish and line up to vote Colonel J. Wesley Allison a hero and Sir Rodolphe Forget a public benefactor—these are Hon. Bob's patriots. The Andrew Broders and the William F. Nickles are poor misguided slackers who fail to respond when the party is in a pinch. The party can't be wrong, more particularly if Hon. Bob is in charge.

Hon. Bob isn't overburdened with personal convictions. He believes in success. He boasts of ability to win elections. Issues are, after all, secondary things, merely means to an end—necessary evils that concern ordinary everyday folk who have nothing better to do. Hon. Bob is bigger and broader than any issue. The party is his shibboleth. Wartime truces are a nuisance. Let's up and at them. Only in winning is public life worth while.—Canadian Courier.

$3.85 The Entire Cost of Furnishing Office of Patriotic Fund

In the appointments of the new office of the Patriotic Fund, Ald. Dobbin has originated a simple and convenient device for filing. In the first place this office has been renovated and made decidedly presentable at a cost of $3.85 and it looks as if $160 had been expended in the work. Mr. Dobbin filched, took, begged and otherwise acquired various furnishings which include two electric chandeliers that had done duty in one of the city offices, the electric light bulbs from the Utilities Commission, one of the old Council desks that was used before the City Trust re-equipped the Council Chamber, a book case that is on the way from the Toronto Savings and Loan Company, and so on. Through this office passes $100,000 a year, and just now it looks worthy of its prominence, but you would never imagine that it was appointed for $3.85 or thereabouts. However, the filing idea is a thing apart. While foraging for furniture, Ald. Dobbin discovered a section of a cashier's cage, in fact an entire side, with its interwoven wire grille, similar to the entanglement which bank boys throw up around them.

When Ald. Dobbin stumbled across this find, immediately his mind conceived in a flash the idea of attaching it to a wall in this office and on the crossed wires of hanging his files. If any business man desires to apply this idea in his own office he is at perfect liberty to do so. It was not patented, but it is guaranteed as a cheap, convenient and entirely satisfactory filing appliance, when economy is the watchword. Necessity is all that has been said of it in its maternity of invention.

And upon one of the desks was a little bouquet of carnations which the wife of some soldier had presented to Mr. Dobbin in appreciation of little services incidental to her receipt of allowances from the Fund. Evidently the fact that Peterborough's branch of the Patriotic Fund is one of the most economic in the country has worked no hardship among those who are entitled to its assistance.

Silver Jubilee of Rev. Dean McColl

Rev. Dean McColl, rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, will celebrate the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood on Wednesday, June 28th. High mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock at which Monsignor Casey of Lindsay will preach. It is understood that the clergy of this diocese are making a presentation to Dean McColl and that many of them will be present in recognition of his many good qualities and long service.

OFFERS HER TWO SONS.

Mother Repeats That Boys Are Ready to Answer Call.

DETROIT, Mich., June 24.—Mrs. D. M. Heuer, the Detroit woman who, during the recent visit of Colonel Roosevelt to Detroit, stood up in the meeting and offered her two sons to her country in case of war, yesterday repeated the offer, and said the boys were ready to answer the call to arms.

"If war is declared against Mexico my sons will certainly go," said Mrs. Heuer. "It is my country, and my boys are willing to fight for it. And besides, they would not go back on their mother. Their great-grandfather helped save the Union.

"They may fall in battle, but it is infinitely more honourable for them to die for their country than to stay at home and let others die for them."

COLLISION AT ORILLIA.

The freight was pulling off the main line on to a siding, and a sharp curve obscured the engineer's view. The rear freight car was wrecked and the front of the passenger engine damaged.

Joseph Collins, the express messenger, had his face cut, and the passengers were badly shaken, but no serious injuries resulted. After half an hour's delay the passenger train was able to proceed.

Kitchener Lost.—Like other men of prominence Lord Kitchener often came across the irrepressible party who always affects to be on terms of intimacy with notable personages. Always courteous, with all his sternness, the General had a profound dislike for this kind of nuisance. While out walking he was accosted by an effusive stranger, who grasped his hand and said,—"Hallo, Lord Kitchener! I'll bet you don't know me!" The general gazed at him unmoved. "You win!" he remarked laconically, and walked on.

Notice.—Mail for the following men is being held at Barriefield Camp Postoffice, insufficiently adressed:

Anderson, Robert; Clark, A., (3); Jones, W.; Johnston, Richard, Johnston, Willie; Smith, A.

Mr. Fred McNeely, Assistant at the Y.M.C.A. who left for Barriefield camp this morning to report for duty with Queen's Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps was presented with a very handsome fountain pen at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night accompanied by the following address.

Mr. Fred McNeely,
Y.M.C.A. Assistant,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Fred,—You have enlisted to do your "bit" in the service of your King and Country. You the to wear the uniform that clothes the best manhood that Canada can produce.

You are one of about two hundred boys on the honour roll of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association and we are proud of you and every one of our brave boys who have heard the call and who have freely responded, sacrificing every interest that might have held you from doing your duty.

You have been associated with the unsigned members of the employed staff of our Y.M.C.A. during the past seven months and while we are to continue to bear the burdens of the home duties we are pleased to feel that our circle by means of you may be linked in the active service of our Empire.

You have the personal esteem of each one of us and our Association membership at large and our prayers will follow you wherever you may go.

That we may have messages from you while absent from us and that you may have with you a little token of our regard we ask you to accept this fountain pen and as you carry it kindly remember the boys at home and ever be true to the Christian ideals of our Association. Our farewell word to you is remember Jesus Christ who will be your help in every time or trouble.

Sincerely yours:—
C. N. Meserve, General Secretary.
G. L. Gelley, Boys' Secretary.
G. H. Roper, Physical Director.

Among the recent promotions in the 93rd Battalion is that of Pte. Palmer Wiley to be Lance-Corporal in the Signallers' Section.

Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, who has been home on leave, returned to Barriefield this afternoon. Major Davidson officiated at Lakefield yesterday in the absence of Rev. A. W. McKenzie.

Lt.-Col. Johnston returned to Barriefield on Saturday.

Woman Sought in Drug Case Missing

NEW YORK, June 26.—Efforts of an officer of the Essex County court in New Jersey to serve a warrant of arrest upon Mrs. Maraget Hill, of No. 208 West Fifty-fourth street, charging administration of a narcotic by Mrs. Hill and A. Sidney Rosenthal to Miss Gertrude Claypool in the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark, two weeks ago, have failed. Mrs. Hill could not be found by the New Jersey officer nor by Detectives Cunniff and Gallagher, sent by the District Attorney of this county. Mr. Rosenthal was reported by his office associates to have notified the District Attorney of Essex county that he would appear there whenever wanted and without extradition.

In the apartment of Mrs. Hill the detectives found a negro servant, Freda Johnson, who, after an examination by John T. Dooling, Assistant District Attorney, was detained at a witness. The clothing of Mrs. Hill had been removed, and the janitor informed the detectives that Mrs. Hill left two days ago, saying she would not return for along time, and directing that her furniture by sent to storage.

Among the articles found in the Hill apartment were packets of a white powder, which the detectives declared is used in combination with cocaine for administration of that drug through the nostrils. The substance has been sent to Dr. Otto E. Schultze, chemist and pathologist of the District Attorney's office.

Papers taken from Mrs. Hill's apartment included affidavits by Carl Johnson, an actor, whose stage name is Waldsworth. He had told the District Attorney that he was lured into signing them, and attacking J. W. Baxter, of Oscawana Lake. Miss Claypool's friends charge that she was the victim of a plot to alienate her from her family and friends and induce her to attack the will of her uncle, John W. Bookwalter, one-time Governor of Ohio, who left an estate of about $12,000,000. Mr. Bookwalter left $100,000 to Miss Claypool, which she declined to accept. Mr. Baxter was a large beneficiary under the will.

Samuel Sobel, a lawyer who has figured in the affairs of Miss Claypool recently, took to the District Attorney's office yesterday several documents Miss Claypool had signed. Mr Rosenthal was made Miss Claypool's attorney by one of these papers, though his powers are confined to his dealings in regard to the will and estate of Mr. Bookwalter. Another paper which Mr. Dooling obtained is an agreement by Miss Claypool to pay Mrs. Hill ten per cent. of any sum she might obtain by contest of the will of Mr. Bookwalter.

Friends and relatives of Miss Claypool declined to discuss her case yesterday. She has suffered no permanent ill effects from the drugs alleged to have been administered to her in Newark, which was the subject of the New York indictment.

WIFE'S CAT CAUSED ROW

Says Pet Was Killed, She Asks for a Divorce.

Mrs. Laura French Losey, 28, of Indianapolis, Ind., has filed a petition for a divorce from Frank S. Losey, 36, charging him with desertion after a quarrel about an Angora cat she received as a wedding present.

The cat, it is alleged, drove Losey's hunting dog away, killed his ferrets, ate up a steak he bought, and turned over a bottle of milk.

Then Losey hit the cat with the stove poker and killed it, starting a quarrel. Mrs. Losey asked the restoration of her maiden name, Laura F. French, and judgment for $800 alimony.

OTONABEE CHAPTER EXPRESSES THANKS

The Regent and members of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., are desirous of expressing their sincere thanks to all those who, by their kind assistance in various ways, helped to render their recent garden fete such an unqualified success, viz.:

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, Mrs. Greer, of the Egg-O Baking Powder Company, Mr. J. M. Greene, for the use of an Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph, Mr. W. E. Conway, Mr. Charles Coleman, Mr. Higgins, Messrs. Campbell & Best, The Warne Drug Co. for chocolates, Messrs. the Woolworth Co., Messrs. W. J. Oke & Co., Messrs. Douros, Longo, Minnecola, Long, and all others who so kindly gave donations to the various booths, or in any way assisted in this undertaking.

It will, no doubt, be a great source of gratification to the Commanding Officer, officers and men of the 93rd Battalion to feel that though they are no longer with us, those left at home are still working for their comfort and welfare.

A Peterborough Business College Boy Beats Them All

D. Howard Anderson, 592 Aylmer Street, not only alphabetically, but in achievement, stands ahead of all the business college students of Canada.

At the annual type-writing test, held under the auspices of the United Typewriter Company, in the Underwood Building, Toronto, on June 22nd, Howard Anderson won the gold medal and championship of Canada, over twenty competitors from other Canadian business colleges. He wrote 710 words in the ten minutes allotted him and other competitors and, with ten errors, scored a total of 66 words per minute—59 words or 40 words net, above his next highest rival.

The Business College contest was open to students who began typewriting since last September; and the fact that Howard Anderson only entered the Peterborough Business College and began typewriting on December 6th, and became typewriting champion of Canada after only six months' study, is a high tribute not only to his celeverness and application, but an equally high tribute to the thoroughness of the teaching methods of the Peterborough Business College; for, without excellent teaching, the young man, clever as he is, couldn't have acquired gold medal proficiency without first rate teaching.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 26.—The stock market sold downward during the first hour to-day while brokers watched Mexican developments closely.

Mexican petroleum and industrial alcohol lost over two points each reading was down 1 1-2 and corn products broke six points. U. S. steel sold off fractionally and coppers were weak.

Steel sold down a point, at 83 1-4, but later recovered a half point. Reading sold at 97 1-4, off 2 points.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Stock market reflected Wall street sentiment regarding Mexican situation late this afternoon by selling off 1 to 5 points. Reading dropped five points to 94 1-2 U. S. Steel was off 1 1-8 at 82 7-8; Crucible lost 4 1-4 at 74. Losses of a point or more were made by some railways and coppers.

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

THE BEST WAR PICTURE EVER SHOWN

Endorsed By Ottawa Government

This Most Thrilling and Realistic War Drama Will be Exhibited in 9 Reels

THIS PICTURE not only shows what the Huns did in Belgium, but what would positively transpire should the Germans ever get to Canada's shores or the United States.

It shows what would happen to Canadian homes, women and children should the Germans ever get to this continent. The Star Theatre, Toronto, did the largest business in the history with "The Battle Cry of Peace," and its manager expresses through the press his highest admiration for this wonderful patriotic film.

It not only shows the danger of German aggression, but displays in unmistakable words, Canada's and the Empire's necessity for preparedness and a stern resolve to defend our homes and ourselves.

The Strand ran this picture for two full weeks with crowded and delighted audiences and was compelled to play a return engagement for another week.

CANADIAN ENDORSEMENT

Lieut. Col. J. C. Might, O. C. of the 169th Battalion (O. S.), under official heading of the Dept. of Militia, strongly endorses this picture as the grandest war film, with historical and educational interest, ever produced. He tells how, by showing German atrocities in Belgium, taken right on the spot, Zeppelins in action and other real war scenes, it should greatly assist in recruiting. It, according to his statements, shows the absolute necessity for "preparedness" in Canada. Another part of his letter says: "This picture should be seen by every man not in khaki and if the women, too, could witness the awful sights so vividly depicted, it is difficult to believe that they would hold back any longer from letting their men do their duty."

Mayor Church of Toronto, over his signiture, in an autograph letter, praising "The Battle Cry of Peace" and advising every man and woman to see this splendid 9-reel war picture, says that it will go down in history as an epic.

MUSICIANS IN THE WAR

PARIS, June 25.—Since the beating of the drums called France to arms, comparatively little martial music has been heard at the rear. Those who have been allowed to visit the armies have occasionally met a regimental band, with drums and brass instruments slung over their shoulders, plodding along the road toward the first line. Musicians go with the combatants and are subject to all the dangers of the war.

The strains of the "Marseillaise" one day revealed the presence of a regimental band among the ruins of a town still under bombardment and close enough to the German lines to require measures against gas. All the musicians had their masks on, giving them a grotesque appearance, but not interfering with lung power.

The Coldstream Guards Band, direct from Arras, and the Royal Italian Caribineers Band, fresh from the Isonzo, brought a little of the atmosphere of the front to the Trocadero, recently, and reminded Paris of the martial strains that stirred the city during the first days of the war. They were greeted by big crowds with the same enthusiasm as prevailed on the boulevards in the memorable first week of August, 1914. The immense auditorium itself was crowded long before the announced hour for the opening.

The bandsman at the front is not a mere musician; after inspiring the troops with martial strains, and when the shot and shell have done their work, he drops his instrument, and, with the Red Cross on his sleeve, goes out over the field to pick up the wounded. Sometimes he helps to bury the dead, and in some emergencies he brings up supplies and ammunition.

At the assault of Vauquois, in February, 1915, the band of a regiment was ordered to execute the "Marseillaise" from shelter, but at the moment of the charge the Colonel assigned an uncovered spot to the band which became a standing target for the enemy, only 300 yards away, but continued none the less ardently its mission. It played the "Marseillaise" eight times during the engagement. Not a man was killed.

Enticingly Pretty

New Dresses

A splendid assortment bought in New York this week and just put on display. All models are exclusive to the Hall Store in Peterborough.

These dresses show the most recent--and we believe the cleverest---style changes. They are the newest to be found in the city. And they're the prettiest! Why? Well, perhaps it's because of the supremely effective new style wrinkles they reveal. And perhaps it's because of their unusually graceful lines. And perhaps it's because---well, you'll find reasons enough for liking them when you see them.

F. E. Wilson Got Judgment For $172.05 Against Robt. Hooten

And Jas. Akey's Action For $500 Against the Township of Otonabee for Damages to His Automobile Was Dismissed.

Judgment for $172.05 was given by His Honour Judge Huycke this morning in favour of Mr. F. E. Wilson, of Springville in his action against Robert Hooten of Cavan, for damages for the sale of paper which had been sold by Mr. Wilson to Mr. Hooten. The judgment won by Mr. Wilson included the costs of the action. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Mr. Wilson and Mr. Robert Ruddy, K.C., appeared for Mr. Hooten.

Akey Case Dismissed.

At the same sittings of the court James Akey's action for $500 damages to his automobile was dismissed, each party paying the respective costs. The affair happened in October, 1914, when the plaintiff drove into an open ditch on the road leading to Wallace's Point. Judge Huycke found that there had been recklessness on the part of the driver and also some negligence by the township. Mr. Gordon represented Mr. Akey and Mr. P. D. Kerr appeared for the township of Otonabee.

FLOWER-SUNDAY WAS OBSERVED YESTERDAY

Flower Sunday was observed yesterday morning by the Sunday schools of the George street and Grace Methodist churches, in a service as memorable and beautiful as any that has yet marked the celebration of that annual event. The classes from the Sunday schools occupied a large part of the auditorium of the church, while the remainder was completely filled by the parents of the scholars and others interested in the schools as well as in their picturesque and inspiring service. Each member brought a bouquet of flowers, which were used to decorate a large design at the front of the church. The design consisted of a cross and a cannon, and when completely covered was an extremely beautiful floral creation. Flowers of every kind and colour helped make up the general pattern, and it was worth attending the service just to get a glimpse of so many pretty flowers so beautifully arranged. The design was symbolic of the present war, and was unusually appropriate since many of the Sunday school pupils are serving with the Canadian overseas forces.

On the platform were Dr. J. E. Middleton, Superintendent of the George street Sunday school, Mr. A. F. Hagerman, Superintendent of the Grace Sunday school, Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Asst.-Supt. of the George street school and Rev. E. Peever, all of whom had platform, all of whom had a part in a part in the conduct of the service.

The Sunday school orchestra was present in full strength and their selections, very well rendered, constituted one of the most pleasing features of the morning's programme.

In his talk to the assembled schools Rev. Mr. Peever referred to the floral design, remarking that the cannon and cross were symbolic of two great and opposite ideals — sacrifice and force. The great war was caused by the selfish ideal, and the only way of purging the nations of the world of this selfishness was through the spirit of sacrifice.

He compared the youthful listeners to the flowers everywhere about him on the platform and called their attention to God's promise that "They that be planted in the House of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of God." The nearest place on earth to God's heart, he said, was a garden. He asked that the children, like the flowers, should grow up pure, sweet and responsive to purify the world. The children should remember what a benediction a bouquet of flowers could be to those who are ill. The red rose was spoken of as an emblem of personal liberty, and the Mayflower as an emblem of person purity—liberty from personal sin.

After the evening service the flowers were distributed among the ailing members of the congregation and others who are ill.

Death of Former Local Resident

Albert Sargent Who Was Born in Peterborough Took Part in the Civil War

The death of a well known former Peterborough resident is referred to in an issue of the Washington County News-Times, Oregon, as follows:

Albert Sargent, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of the west part of the county, died at his home in Gales Creek last Saturday evening, aged 76 years. Funeral services were held at the late home Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, under the auspices of the local lodge, I.O.O.F., and interment was in the Gales Creek cemetery. His wife, and one son, Walter A. Sargent survive him. They have the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends in their bereavement.

Albert A. Sargent was born in Peterborough, Province of Ontario, Canada, in 1840. Just before the civil war he came to the United States and enlisted in Company L, 50th N. Y. Engineers, and had a complete and honourable record throughout the war. At its close he went to Holton, Kansas, where on August 11, 1868 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Falter. One son, Walter A., was born to them. The family came to Washington County in 1888 and has resided here since that time. With the exception of a short time he has been engaged in business in Gales Creek, conducting a general store there.

A SERVICE OF COMFORT IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The service at St. Paul's church yesterday morning was designed specially to comfort, those who have recently lost boys at the front, and stay the minds of all present upon God and His promises in these times of great trial and sorrow. The text chosen was the words of the Master in John 14:2, "I go to prepare a place for you". Rev. Mr. Pogue said in part:—

Anything that will throw light upon the mystery of death is welcomed today. It is not that death is new, or that people did not die before the war. It is rather the awfulness of the circumstances in which our boys and friends die. They die for your home and all they hold dear, with no one to close their eyes, or whisper a last word of love and hope in their dying ear.

"We country folk are gentle with our dead.
We lay them white robed on a spotless bed;
And folks from round about came in and see,
And gaze upon that pale tranquility.
But this is new, so shocking, dreadful, strange,
To lose my lad and realize no change;
No limbs to stretch, no tender face to love,
No gift of loving tears beside the grave.
I only knew from what his captain said,
Who spared the time to tell us he was dead;
That on a shell torn height he gave his life,
And that he prayed a Britain's part in strife.

The very newness and strangeness of our experiences and the fact that so many young men, in the very flower of their manhood are giving their lives for us, compel us to think often of the dead to-day, and to ask ourselves, what is the nature of the life everlasting?

The "life everlasting", is first, a continuation of the present life. There is no break in the soul's consciousness through the act of dying. One moment we are on the earth; the next we are in heaven. One moment we are in the presence of our earthly friends; the next we are in the presence of our Saviour, and of the spirit of just now made perfect. One moment we are in the temple of the body; the next we are in that 'house not made with hands eternal in the heavens." The thing that survives after death is the personality. That is clear from many Scriptures. It is implied in the words of the Master: "I go to prepare a place for you." It is implied in the words of Paul: "To depart is to be with Christ which is far better". Surely it could not be better to pass into unconsciousness. "To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord". The moment of absence is the moment of presence. The boys who died fighting our battles, died in Christ, have not ceased to be. The moment of death was but the moment of birth in to a fuller, richer, larger, happier life."

Then, the "life everlasting" suggests mutual recognition. The most passionate and pathetic instinct of yearning of which our human nature is capable is the yearning for recognition of dear ones in heaven. Now is that yearning doomed to disappointment? Assuredly not. David's words after the death of his child imply recognition. He said: "I shall go to him though he shall not return to be with me". David would have found no comfort in the thought of going to be with his child had he not believed that he would know him when he should see him. Recognition is also clearly implied in these wonderful words in the 14th of John—"That where I am there ye may be also". God does not mean to break the quivering threads between two souls, though "separate, mystified". He wrought unto one. No, "My lost, my own and I shall have so much to see together by and by".

Then again, the "life everlasting"—is a life of service. We read: "They serve Him day and night on His Temple". What the nature of the service is we do not know. One thing we do know, it will be service without weariness. "They rest from their labours", from those earthly labours that brought weariness, rest from the tension of sorrow and the tortures of suffering". But there will be work for them all in heaven. "My Father worketh hitherto and I work". Put that Scripture with this one. "they serve Him day and night in His Temple", and what is the picture of heaven which we have? That it is a place of ceaseless activity. Heaven is being peopled to-day by hundreds of thousands of young men cut down in the very prime of their manhood. Their mental powers were just reading perfection. Their spirits were ardently exploring the different fields of knowledge. They had so many questions yet unanswered! So many plans not worked out! So many dreams yet unfulfilled!

We cannot think of all this energy suddenly coming to a stop! Nor will it. "When we have dropped the clay and the veil of flesh, we shall all stand out with unmeasurably increased powers of perception, and going with our Lord as our personal conductor among the wonders of unveiled truth and all the splendors of glory, with our unmeasurably intensified powers, we shall find countless kinds of new and unimaginable delights break out before us on every side."

Then, lastly, the "life everlasting" will be one of growth. Our spiritual powers will grow into ever fuller and richer experiences as the cycles of eternity roll their everlasting rounds. Not growth in holiness, for we enter Heaven cleansed from all the defilement of earth. The souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness. God washes the soul in the river of lethe so that it forgets all past contact with sin. I notice many are perplexed concerning the fate of the young lives cut down at the front—who may have been unprepared. What one of us can say whether they were prepared or not? If the dying malefactor found "life in a look" at His Saviour who being beside him on the cross, surely we may conclude, that tens of thousands of our boys who went away careless and have been made serious by their experiences at the front would find life and salvation as quickly as He as they lifted their dying gaze to Him who died for them! And then when they were received into the Master's presence they would continue to grow in the knowledge of God. "This is life eternal to know God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent." How much greater and wider will our knowledge of Him be when we are taken under the immediate tuition of God Himself. Here we see through a glass darkly, yonder face to face. Here we search for explanations, yonder all things are revealed in the perfect light of the Master's presence. "We shall be satisfied when we awake in His likeness!" "Forever with the Lord, Amen. So let it be!"

Playgrounds Will Open July 1st

Net Receipts From the Rags and Paper Collection Amounted to $210

The ladies of the Playgrounds Association are glad to report that the net receipts from the rags and paper collection amount to $210. At the same time they wish to thank all those housewives who held their rags until they could be collected by the ladies, and they hope that when they collect the rags next fall the collection will be more promptly made.

The two playgrounds, one at the King Edward, and the other at the Central school will be open and ready for the children about the first of July. The Association has been very fortunate in securing two excellent supervisors for the girls' department of the playgrounds, Miss Littlefield of the Y.W.C.A., and Miss Dora Smith of Toronto. A number of applications for the position of supervisor of the boys' department have been received, but no definite selection has yet been made.

The Playgrounds' Association earnestly requests the housekeepers to start another rag bag for a collection in the fall, at which time only rags and old rubbers will be collected, as the Ashburnham ladies have already announced that they will collect old papers, and the Playgrounds' Association does not wish to hinder the work in any way. In fact if the housekeepers will only save all their sewing clippings and worn out clothes very carefully, the committee would like very much to be able to make not only enough money to run the playgrounds, but also to contribute part of their money to patriotic organizations.

County Finance Committee Report of This Year's Demands

The report of the Finance committee of the County Council presented during the recent session by Reeve Fitzgerald of Lakefield, chairman, was as follows:

Gentlemen.—I respectfully beg to submit to you the amounts required to meet the various disbursements for the year 1916.

The general rate of 4 mills for 1915 left as a deficit, currently speaking, $7,034.00, and in order to cope with the same I ask your approval to levy 4 1-10 mills for the present year.

The total for 1915 was $36366.02.

The total for 1916 is $37272.74.

This is an increase of $876.72, although as stated the deficit at the end of last year was $7034.00. I would also remind you that the equalized assessment to strike from is $8,000.00 less, due to allowances made to Otonabee from the fact that the new rifle ranges are exempt.

The special patriotic grants require the sum of $23,182.00 to meet the same, made up as follows:

Grant, December 1915	$ 1250.00
Grants, 1916	18150.00
Grant subsequent	2100.00
Estimated interest	682.00

To meet the above, 2.44 mills will have to be levied.

FIRE DESTROYS A LARGE SHED

Fire Department Was Called out at Noon on Sunday—Damage Will be $400

At noon on Sunday the Fire Department received a call to number seven storeroom of the Peterborough Lock, where a shed belonging to the Department of Railways and Canals was discovered to be on fire. The blaze was speedily extinguished but not before the shed had been practically destroyed. The damage is estimated in the neighbourhood of four hundred dollars. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Has Secured Employment

Another Peterborough soldier, who has returned to the routine of civilian life, after several months at the front, is Pte. Arthur Phipps. The latter was one of the few Peterborough survivors of the second battle of Ypres. He is now identified with the Prudential Insurance Company of which Mr. John I. Allen is local superintendent.

Madame Butterfly At the Empire

To-night Mary Pickford Will Be Seen in Photo Play in This Famous Love Tale

It is rarely indeed that the motion picture public has been privileged to witness so exquisitely artistic a performance as that of Mary Pickford in the Famous Players Film Company's screen adaptation of John Luther Long's immortal classic, "Madame Butterfly." The screen version of this famous enhanced all the poetic beauty and tenderness of the original. As the forsaken Cho-Cho-San, the little maid of the Flowery Kingdom, patiently waiting through the long months for the return of her faithless American husband, Mary Pickford presents an innocent, confiding, pathetic figure, who proceeds through her many sorrows with unconquerable courage and endurance. Only an actress of Miss Pickford's remarkable magnetism and dramatic power could have presented a pantomimic impersonation of this famed character that will stand comparison with the artistry of the stage and operatic standards already established. For pure pathos and dramatic appeal, the photo-production of "Madame Butterfly" has few equals in the whole realm of fiction, stage or screen.

BELIEVED TWO YOUNG MEN DROWNED AT EUGENIA

THEIR UPTURNED BOAT FOUND IN HYDRO LAKE—SEARCH BEING MADE.

FLESHERTON, June 26.—Two young men, Wm. Wilson and Chas. Smith, aged about twenty years, sons of Adam Smith and the late Wm. Wilson of Eugenia, are believed to have been drowned in the Hydro-electric lake at Eugenia. They went out in a boat, and not returning a search was instituted for them, when the upturned boat was found over a mile from where it was launched. Search is being made for the bodies. Smith has a brother a prisoner of war in Germany.

323 VISITS DURING MAY

Interesting Figures in District Nurse's Report

The report of the district nurses of the Peterborough Health Association for the month of May is a very interesting one, indicating the wide scope of the work. The report shows during May in tubercular work, 21 cases, with 8 others under observation, and 146 visits, while in general work there have been 36 cases and 207 visits.

Interesting Letter From A Member of The 2nd Battalion

Corp. Roy MacDonald Refers to Lieut. G. Grahame Who Some Time Ago, Spent a Brief Furlough in Peterborough—Strenuous Times at the Front

The following interesting letter is from Corp. Roy MacDonald, of the 2nd Battalion, First Canadian Contingent, who has been in England for some time suffering from an injury to his knee, received in the trenches in France:

The Station House,
Great Wishford, Wilts,
England.
June 5th, 1916

It is now quite a time since I have written anything but I shall try to again appear with something of interest to your readers.

At present I am stationed at the Canadian Casualty Assembly Centre, Folkestone, which, by the way, is somewhat more pleasant than the billets which I was accustomer to in that portion of the globe we call France, and I really believe that a spring bed is just as good for the health as mother earth or a cement floor, such as we had more than once while staying at that pretty town which is usuall termed "Somewhere in France."

It is not by any means the pretty snap that some seem to think it is for the boys engaged here, as all the casualties from the hospitals in this part of England pass through here, and it gives one the heart ache to see the physical wrecks of what were once men in the flower of manhood, go hobbling along on crutches or by the aid of two sticks; here we see the real horrors of war; it is not at the front that it is so terrible because we are more or less hardened to all that, but here so far away from the stern reality of it.

Never Been Wounded

Oh, before I forget it, let me inform you that Ross MacHeard is now wearing a crown above the three stripes on his arm. He is looking as fit as they make them now and to see him in a game of push ball on the roller rink a few nights ago one would think he had never been wounded. I understand he is also slated for a tug of war team to pull for the 12th Battalion. He told me that he had a notion of going back to the front to have another crack at the Huns, but somehow I do not think he will go as they need instructors in the reserve battalions, and the man who has been out there once is the man who can tell the boys what they may expect and how to prepare for it; that is something that no one who has not yet been out can do.

Lieut. G. Graham also looks fine and to see him out walking one would not think it was the same man who, a short time ago, was sent to Canada to recuperate after being wounded. Of course I do not see Lieut. Grahame as often as I used to when he was a private, but one thing is certain neither getting a wife nor a commission has in any way affected him, he is still the same Grahame he used to be in camp.

One of our old officers was over here on leave a short time ago and told me the boys were catching h—— up where they were now, but they were sticking to it like old veterans, which indeed some of them are as they have had more than a year of the hardest kind of warfare to contend with. There have been heavy casualties and there will be more before old Fritz is put where he belongs, but we hope that the time will come when we can say with perfect truth that we have at last driven the Huns out of the lands they have laid waste and that we may lay aside the rifle and return to the land from whence we came.

A Fine Country.

That little scrap in the North Sea is not to be taken as any great naval battle as the German fleet as soon as a few large British war vessels appeared took to their heels and beat it in a great hurry. It was only the light squadron of the navy engaged and the Huns, like rats, ran out when they thought there was a chance to take a bite at something they were afraid of, then hiked back to their lair. The British navy can wallop them so bad that they will think they were always walloped if the Huns will only stay out long enough to give anything like a real fleet a chance.

England is surely a fine country, but it is no country for the young man. Everywhere one goes these signs meet the eye, "Private, trespassers will be prosecuted." There is no room; the land is all built on and the farms are so small that it would be almost impossible to work them as farms are worked in Canada. Villages are so close together that one does not realize he has passed one until he is in another; although in spite of these faults England is very beautiful and it is no wonder that an Englishman is proud of his country. To see the hedgerows all in bloom in the spring is a sight for the gods; to drive along the country roads is a treat in itself; but for all that give me the land called Canada, for although it is a new land and there has been practically no money spent on it it is a wonderful land, full of promise, and there we can enjoy a freedom which England can never enjoy.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must in order to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which then assumes the responsibility.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was surprised to read an article in your evening contemporary on Saturday night entitled "Col. Williams and the farmer" in which the writer argues that the farming class has done its duty by enlisting for the present war, and that if Col Williams can find any available men in this rural section he is more argus-eyed than the farmers in that section. Now Mr. Editor I am not at all argus-eyed, but I am quite sure that I could find many available men in Smith, Douro and Enniamore. I know of one instance of a 200 acre farm where there are nine sons (six of military age) only one married, not one of whom has offered to do his bit. I know of many other instances of a father and three, four and five sons farming 100 or 150 acres, and making the farm an excuse for not doing a man's duty. Men have gone from the rural districts to do their bit on the fields of Flanders, but they have not been the farmers, nor yet their sons but they have been almost without exception the hired men. Your contemporary states "that it was well that at Thursday night's meeting, the farmers had champions amongst the city residents". Why, Mr. Editor I heard their chief champion address the farmers on the Market Square one Saturday morning less than three months ago, when he told them very candidly that the farmer was not doing his duty as he should do it, and he also asked what value their farms would be to them if the Germans got possession of Canada? and if that event did take take place wouldn't they feel very sorry that they did not come forward and when they had the chance to fight for them?

I have not noticed any very great rush of farmers sons into the ranks of the 93rd since that speech was made. Let us leave the hired men out of it and I wonder how many representatives Douro has in the 93rd or how many Enniamore? Smith has done a little better, but not as well as they might have done. We are all very proud of the 93rd, but some of us are not proud enough of it to get into it. We could go down to the G.T.R. to see them entrain for Barriefield, but God forbid that we should go with them. I am firmly convinced Sir, that there are plenty of men available in the county to not only fill up the 93rd but also to fill another Battalion after that, look at George Street on a Saturday evening between seven and ten o'clock, young men walking up and down in groups, casting eyes at the girls who pass by, while many of their old school fellows and play mates are lying on the blood-stained fields of Flanders.

I am sure that it is not cowardice it is only want of thought, and in a good many instances, it is the fault of their mothers, who keep their sons back. It is the Canadian mothers who need to be convinced Mr. Editor and then the young men will step forward. I have heard many women (with sons of military age) say that this is England's war and let England fight it, and whilst that spirit prevails among Canadian women you cannot expect their sons to step forward. Of course conscription would be the remedy, but there is no chance of that being passed, and we have got to do the best we can under the present circumstances. Thanking you for your space, I am,

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

How to Protect Your Rose Bushes From Green Fly and Other Insects

Mr. W. H. Young, [illegible] Chamberlen street, points out to those who have rose plants that they should guard them against green fly and other insects that particularly attack them. The following is a wash that may be applied about once a week. The materials are sold in most drug stores: Four ounces of quassia chips boiled for fifteen minutes in one gallon of soft water; strain, and when cooling dissolve four ounces of English soft soap. To this add two gallons of water. Apply with a brush or syringe. A more even distribution of this wash can be secured by the use of a good syringe. If this quantity is greater than required, the ingredients may be proportionately decreased.

Whale oil soap also effectually cleans the bushes and sulphur counteracts the mildew which the rose in cold and damp weather has caused.

The feet of young chickens can be easily skinned by pouring boiling water over them. They can then be skinned and boiled, and you will have a delicious broth.

Dog Stands Vigil Over Boy's Body in Old Foundry

LITTLE JOHN BOYLE, MISSING SINCE JUNE 10, FOUND UNDER DOOR THAT HAD FALLEN ON HIM.

New York, June 26.—The body of John Boyle, 10 years old, who disappeared on June 10, was found under a heavy oak door in an abandoned iron foundry building near his home, at No. 127 Fifty-seventh street, Bay Ridge. Near it, standing a lonely but faithful vigil, was a starving dog, a "yellow cur," that had been the playfellow of the small boys in the neighborhood.

When the boy failed to reach his home the evening of June 10, his father, James Boyle, a bookkeeper, asked the police to find him. A search was made but no one had seen the boy and the disappearance was put down as an unsolved mystery, while the parents grieved.

Workmen were sent to the old iron foundry yesterday to place it in order for operation. When they opened the street door they were greeted by the dog, who was hardly strong enough to wag his tail. Near the dog the men saw the hand of a boy protruding from under a door that had fallen upon him. They lifted the door and found the body of the missing John Boyle.

Other boys say that John had been playing with them the afternoon that he disappeared. It is believed that a ball had rolled under the door of the foundry and when he went in after it the door fell upon him.

Says British Have 4,000,000 In France

American Surgeon, Just Back From Base Hospital, Tells of Plans For a Great Offensive

NEW YORK, June 24.—Dr. Frederick C. Jacobs of Chicago, who returned yesterday on the Holland-America liner Noordam, after spending a year at the British base hospital in Etaples, France, said that England had 4,000,000 troops now in Northern France, and a big offensive would begin along the western front as soon as the fighting in Verdun was over.

"Of that number," the doctor continued, "about 2,500,000, who have been held in reserve around Calais, Rouen, Havre, Boulogne, and other British bases, have not seen any fighting so far and are practically fresh troops. The front of 160 miles is being held by 1,500,000 troops. The men do three days' trench duty on the western front and then go to the rear for three days instead of having seven days in the trenches continuously as they did at first."

Dr. Jacobs added that the British and French were erecting numbers of base hospitals along the western front to care for the wounded when the big offensive movement begins. Forty-five of these hospitals have been erected near Ypres since the early part of the year.

Dr. John G. O'Malley came with Dr. Jacobs on the Noordam. He said that estimates of losses in the engagements before Verdun before he left France had been about 45 per cent. of the men engaged. The losses of the Germans in the taking of Forts Vaux and Douaumont were computed to be fully 150,000 men in each case.

Another passenger on the Noordam was Dr. Charles F. Fitzgerald of New Haven, who served with the Austrian army from the opening of the war until the differences between the United States and the Central Powers over the U-boats, when he resigned.

The high prices for food in Austria had been much exaggerated, he said. A breakfast, consisting of an egg, bread and butter, and coffee of good quality in Vienna cost 16 cents. It was the cost of meat and lard which brought the average cost of living up.

All the mail was taken off the Noordam at Kirkwall, the officers said, and the passengers and cargo manifests were inspected there and at Falmouth.

Puzzles of The War Map

How Russian War Names Really Sound—Spelling of Famous Places in the Battle

Most of us gasp at the hard names mentioned in the Russian theatre of the war. Not only do the names appear unpronounceable, but the same words appear at times in many different spellings. The confusing spelling arises from the attempts of different pens to represent by English letters sounds which really do not exist in our English tongue.

Perhaps this list of pronunciations may be some sort of guide for our friends in school and in the home. The words have been written down as they were pronounced for us by a from Liege University. he has left in the war everything but honour and courage. First we give the ordinary spelling, and then the pronunciation, as nearly as it can be rendered:

Bzura—Ba-roora.
Rawka—Rahv-ka.
Pilica—Pee-leet-sa.
Opocsno—O-potch-no.
Donajec—Doonah-yets
Tarnow—Tarnoff.
Cracow—Krah-koff.
Jaslow—Ee-yas-lo.
Sochaczew—So-kah-cheff.
Lowicz—Lawvitch.
Woclawek—Vwatz-lahv-vek.
Dobrzyn—Dob-shyn.
Kutno—Kootno.
Sochaczew—Sock-hatch hoff.
Mlawa—Mullava.
Tuschow—Tooshoff.
Lapkow—Leap-koff.
Pincow—Peench-off.

The word remains—Przemysl. Perhaps the nearest that English can get to the actual sound is: Pee-shay-mee-sul.

The first syllable is very short as if one were saying "pishay" with the "pi" barely uttered. The last syllable, too, is short, really like "meesel" with the "meece" accented and the "l" only just heard. All the Russian and Polish names are difficult to English eyes, but when written down in English as they sound when spoken by a native they at least appear possible. Such a spelling as "Skierniewice" is simply absurd, for it conveys no suggestion of the true sound. "Skiver-nee-ovtsee" may seem crude, but it does tell us how a Russian says the word."

The flowers on the altar were in memory of Mr. W. Coleman, a former chorister.

TO BUY STANDARD IDEAL.

Understood That a New Company Has Been Formed.

It is understood that a new company has been formed to buy the property of the Standard Ideal Company at Port Hope, Ont., when it is sold under foreclosure on July 20 The company has not paid its bond interest since the beginning of 1915, and at a meeting of the bondholders in May of that year, it was decided to give the company two years grace, but the right was retained to foreclose at any time during that period that might be considered advisable.

The bondholders are to meet in Toronto two days before the date of the foreclosure sale, which has been decided upon for the purpose of considering and adopting if deemed advisable an extraordinary resolution authorizing the Montreal Trust Company as trustees for the bondholders to accept in satisfaction for the purchase price securities of a company formed for the purpose of taking over the property.

The Standard Ideal Company was hard hit by the slump in the building trade in 1914, and any hopes of pulling the company through its financial difficulty seemed hopeless when the war broke out. The property is a valuable one, and it is believed that the industry, that of manufacturing sanitary enamelled goods, bathroom fixings, etc., will revive with the advent of the improving business conditions and the resumption of building operations after the war.

Peterboro' People Visit War Camp

A WARM WELCOME

The visitors from Peterborough were given a warm welcome to camp by all ranks. The boys were anxious to show all the points of interest to their friends and many personally conducted excursions through the lines were the result. In addition a programme of sports had been arranged. This was to have included a ball game, between the 93rd and 146th but a smart shower at 2 o'clock prevented the game although the down pour only lasted a few minutes. The football enthusiasts had better luck, however, as they saw the now famous 93rd soccer team clash with the 155th of Belleville in a league game. The Peterborough soldiers won in hollow fashion by 13 goals to nil. The Belleville team never had a chance and were hopelessly outclassed. Playing two men short at the go in the 93rd scored goal No. one in less than a minute. At half time they were in front 5 to nil and the second half was even easier. West was again the shining star his trickiness and bullet-like shooting making him stand out prominently. The goals were scored in the following order:—

Stockdale, Williams, Monks, King, West, West, West, West, Stockdale, Williams, King, Hardie, West.

During the afternoon the Band of the 93rd, under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes, played a number of selections in their usual effective style. Among the band's offerings were the overtures "Raymond" and "Poet and Peasant." The different numbers were loudly applauded. In the recreation tent a number of boxing bouts were put on by Pte. George Lilly and other members of the 93rd, including Bandsman Worrall of the Peaceful Valley Quartette. A little later an informal sing-song was held; with Sergt. Leader at the piano. Ptes. Hatcher, Proctor and other members of the Battalion.

On Sunday the 93rd attended divine service with the 1st Brigade, composed of the 109th Lindsay, and the 130th, Smith Falls. Capt. Dodds, Chaplain of the 155th, conducted the service while the band of the 130th accompanied the hymns. Captain Dodds is a native of South Monaghan and well known in Peterborough, having attended the Collegiate Institute here.

Yesterday afternoon many of the officers and men of the 93rd and their visitors took advantage of the opportunity afforded for a beautiful sail through the Thousand Islands on the steamer America. It was their first trip on the St. Lawrence for many of the soldiers and they enjoyed the outing immensely. The steamer returned to her moorings shortly after 9.30 amid the men of the 93rd and other battalions fell in and marched out to camp in a body.

A number of visitors returned to Peterborough Saturday night but the greater part will be home to-day.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM G. L. SMITH.

The death occurred this morning of Wm. G. L. Smith at the home of his uncle, Mr. Geo. A. Helson, 643 Bethune street, after an illness of three or four months. The deceased had been a sheet iron worker employed at the Micks shop. His mother and his sister, Mrs. Ed. Rowe, reside in Edmonton. The funeral will be held on Wednesday at 3 p.m., service at Mr. Helson's home at 2.30, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery.

RICHARD GILLESPIE.

After an illness extending through the past year, Richard Gillespie passed away on Sunday morning in his 51st year at the home of his sister, Mrs. Alex. Houston, Coldsprings, Otonabee. The deceased had resided for a number of years at Hamilton, where he was prominent in Oddfellowship circles. He was a member of Unity Lodge No. 47 and of Burlington Encampment No. 7. His wife predeceased him about ten years ago, but he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Peter Gillespie, and by three brothers.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery from his sister's residence, Coldsprings.

BANK WRECKED AT VILLE MARIE

Would-be Robbers Blow It up With Dynamite. $30,000 in Safe Untouched

Five Men Ride Into Village About Midnight, Cut Telephone Wires, Put Out Lights, Shoot Bank Manager in Leg and Get Away.

COBALT, June 26.—A sensational attack was made on the Quebec Bank in Ville Marie, Que., early Saturday by armed bandits. The building in which the bank is situated was blown up and wrecked by dynamite, with the evident intention of getting the $18,000 in the safe.

Haileybury and North Timiskaming are the two nearest points on the railway to Ville Marie, and both are ten to fifteen miles away. While the bandits made their escape for the present, it is believed they will have difficulty in getting out of the country. There were two or three explosions, and the building took fire and was gutted. At present no trace of the miscreants has been found. On a search of the ruins the safe was found overturned, but it had not been opened. As far as can be learned no cash or bills were missing.

Five men rode into Ville Marie about half an hour after midnight, and immediately there were shots. They rode to the bank and put out all the lights in the vicinity, then proceeded to set off charges of dynamite, which destroyed the bank. The Manager of the bank, Mr. Lemarche, was shot in the leg as he was climbing out of a window to give the alarm. All telephone communication with the outside world had been cut earlier in the night. The robbers rode away while the building was still burning.

The Provincial Police throughout the northern part of Ontario are searching for the bank robbers. Police officials said it is a long time since robbers operated in Ontario or in the surrounding districts, and a determined effort would be made to run them down. When it is known that bank robbers are about police and bank officials take extra precautions to avoid outbreaks.

The leading private detective agencies in Canada and the United States also co-operate in following up robberies of the kind just reported from Ville Marie, Quebec. One of the agencies already has men at work upon this latest robbery.

Woman Fights Negro Burglar

New York, June 26.—Although the condition of Mrs. John S. Chandler was such that it was known she had had a hard struggle for life, it was not until yesterday she was able to give the details of an encounter with a burglar in her home, No. 631 Newark ave. Elizabeth, N.J., in which several times she believed she was to be killed.

Mrs. Chandler, whose husband is a supervisor of engine drivers for the Pennsylvania Railroad, was alone in her home on Wednesday afternoon, when she found a tall heavy negro searching the dining room.

Before she could scream the burglar seized Mrs. Chandler by the throat, and struck her in the face with the other fist. From the wall the burglar obtained a civil war sword and holding that over Mrs. Chandler he threatened to cut her head off if she did not tell where her money was.

Mrs. Chandler then was lying on the floor after the negro had knocked her down, and when she felt him place the sword blade to her throat she told him where he would find the money. Then the fellow picked her up, carried her upstairs to her bedroom and threw her on her bed. He jerked off her leather belt, and Mrs. Chandler believed he was going to kill her, and she began to fight.

In this struggle they staggered about the upper floor and Mrs. Chandler was knocked down many times, but she found strength to rise, believing her life was at stake, until the last time, when he threw himself upon her, and she was too weak to throw him off. With her belt he tied her hands back of her, tied her feet together with a silk waist and then gagged her with handkerchiefs.

In the bathroom the burglar obtained Mr. Chandler's razor, returned to Mrs. Chandler and jerked her chin up. She was certain he was going to kill her. She was too weak to fight further, but she employed strategy by feigning death. She heard him throw the opened razor across the room and curse, then she fainted, but her fingers still held tufts of the negro's kinky hair.

When Mrs. Chandler recovered her senses she worked her way loose from the bindings, but she was still so weak that when she reached the front door, she fell forward. She was trying to crawl across the lawn when neighbors saw her, removed the gag from her mouth and soon had her in bed with a physician in attendance. The burglar obtained $300.00.

British Prisoners' Rations Cut In Two

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 26.—In official announcement in the Commons to-day Lord Robert Cecil said the British Government had received authoritative information that the rations of the British military and civilian prisoners in internment and prison camps in Germany had been reduced one-half, and unless some assurance is given Britain within one week that full rations would be restored, the Allies would consider it necessary to take similar action with German prisoners in Allied camps to enforce the proper treatment of British prisoners by Germany.

A Big Victory For General Smuts

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON (Bulletin), June 26.—General Smuts' British South African troops have achieved another big victory over the Germans in German East Africa, it was officially announced to-day. In a battle forty miles south of Handeni on Saturday the Germans were heavily defeated and retired, leaving several hundred prisoners and guns, with large munitions and stores in British hands.

BERLIN, June 26.—To-day's official state says:
"Fighting activity in the west on the fronts occupied by the British and the north wing of the French army was important and has been for the past two days."

HOUR FOR ACTION COMES.

Premier Briand Saw Gen. Haig on Saturday and Sunday.

Paris, June 27.— Premier Briand returned to Paris after a conference with the British commander, Sir Douglas Haig, on Saturday and Sunday at the British front.

"The hour of action for the allies is here," says the Matin. "Attack succeeds defence on many fronts.

It says the outstanding facts are that the allies have increased enormously their material supplies, and by close exchange of views have implanted a common directive idea into the operations now beginning along all fronts.

War May Be Averted

United States Troops Have Been Withdrawn From Several Points in Mexico---Definite Announcement on Question of "Intervention" Expected To-day

"MILITARY STRATEGY"

WASHINGTON, June 27. — While American troops are to-day heading for the Mexican border from practically every state in the Union, it is notable that General Pershing's American advanced guards have been recalled from the Mexican towns they occupy and are also heading for the border from other side.

The recall of Pershing's men was matter of 'military strategy,' said the authorities here.

At the same time it is a well known fact that the United States' cabinet is not altogether united on the present momentous question. Some of Wilson's advisers held that it has not yet been proved that the United States troops were not responsible for the affair which resulted in heavy casualties for the tenth cavalry.

Some definite announcement on the question of "intervention" is expected to-day.

VERA CRUZ, June 27.—The entire American colony of Tampico and the surrounding oil district is now en route to Texas points aboard oil tankers. Conditions in Vera Cruz are unchanged.

The city is quiet and orderly. Several hundred refugees from the interior are awaiting the arrival of transports.

MEXICO CITY, June 27. — The evacuation of San Geronimo and Machinlva by American troops who moved northward aroused high hopes here to-day that President Wilson is preparing to withdraw Gen. Pershing's expedition from Mexico.

The War Department gave no explanation of the move. A telegram from Gen. Trevino, announcing the evacuation and declining his purpose to attack Americans if they attempted to reoccupy the towns, was given out.

Notwithstanding the statements in American newspapers that war is imminent, a strong optimistic sentiment persists among the Mexican leaders here.

DRUNKEN GERMANS INSULTED FLAG.

Unity, Sask., June 27.—At a picnic at James Horseman's homestead here, a number of Germans attended and brought with them a large quantity of liquer, which affected them so much that they pulled down a British flag. The police are trying to find the ringleaders.

Kelly's Sons Defy Crown

English Architect Tells How Government Refused to Allow Him to Supervise the Work

WINNIPEG, Man., June 27. — In opening this morning the second week of the trial of Thomas Kelly, the Parliament Building contractor, Mr. Justice Pendergast asked that Horwood, former provincial architect, be kept within reach of the court, since he proposed to recall him on his own responsibility. The trial may end on Wednesday.

Joseph Bell, secretary-treasurer of the Rat Portage Lumber Co., testified he supplied 70,080 feet of lumber, at a cost of $1,755.06, to Thos. Kelly and Sons, between July 1, 1913, and February 28, 1914.

ARCHITECT'S EVIDTNCE.

F. W. Simon, the English architect, who won the competition for plans for the Parliament Buildings, said that some time in May, 1913, he discussed pile foundation with members of the Government. It was decided to change from piling to caissons. On July 9, 1913, he urged on Hon. Mr. Coldwell the advisability of him, as architect, having supervision of the construction, but with no result. It was decided that Horwood should have supervision. Later Simon suggested to Horwood that they share the supervision, Simon to get a fee of half of one per cent. When tenders were received Simon advised the lowest, that of Kelly, be accepted. He had suggested to Horwood that the tenders were very low and the contractors would require a lot of watching. Simon attended a meeting of the council in July, at which it was agreed to set the building farther back from the street and to raise it farther from the ground. Simon was also told again he had no right to supervision, though if he saw anything wrong he might call attention to it "like any other citizen."

PLANS WORKABLE.

Simon told of discussions and correspondence regarding the dimensions of the wings. Detailed plans showed increases in width of four to ten inches in the wings necessary, said witness, but Horwood told him Kelly claimed the increase in the size was included in his contract, and the Government would follow the old size. However, the wings were constructed on revised plans. Simon declared there would have been no difficulty in the construction of the building in all respects as designed by him.

DOCUMENTS NOT PRODUCED.

Lawrence Kelly, son of the accused, was called to the witness box, but not sworn. J. B. Coyne, for the Crown, explained he had been served with a subpoena to produce certain documents. "Have you got them here?" asked Coyne. "I have not," replied Kelly. "I consider it unfair and inhuman that the Crown should ask me to come here and give evidence against my father, or to make a production of documents. The Crown would not have dared to call me if my father had been defended by counsel."

JUDGE'S CAUTION.

Chas. B. Kelly, another son, took the same attitude, and Coyne asked both to return to court this afternoon. The judge suggested that if Coyne was decided on his course, he would prefer a motion to be made at once so that he might have the recess to consider it. "I have not any doubt" replied counsel, "as to the impropriety of their conduct." He wanted time to consider the matter. The judge remarked that he hoped the Crown would be governed by "obvious consideration," and would not press their rights to a point where harshness would be shown.

...rpet Confession Read in Court

...AS OF INTERVIEW WITH MARIAN LAMBERT NIGHT OF DEATH.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., June 24—Two ...the State's final blows in the prosecution of Will Orpet as the murderer of Marian Lambert were delivered yesterday in the admission of ...letters to the dead girl and reading of his confession that he was with her at the death scene.

...the confession, as read to the ... by Harriet Wadsworth, the ste-nographer to whom it was dictated, Orpet said, in response to questions:

"I was in Lake Forest February 8. I walked around all night Next day, Wednesday, I saw Marian Lambert at the Sacred Heart Convent. I was on the edge of the woods. She saw me. She knew I was going to be there, because I had called her up the night before.

"We walked to the ravine, and stopped and talked. We could not get anywhere in the discussion. Then we walked to the 'three trees.' She asked me if I was going to continue the acquaintance, and I told her I was through.

"She became angry. I started to go away. I don't remember what she said. I wanted to break away. She called me. I went back twice. The last time she said there was no hope. So I beat it. That is the last I saw of her."

T. E. Frizanza, Chicago Examiner reporter, who got an interview with the defendant by causing his own arrest and incarceration in the jail with Orpet, told of Orpet's admission that he saw the girl drink poison. He also told of the confessed engagement with Celestia Younker.

"I never told her I loved her or that I intended or ever thought of marrying her," Orpet was reported to have told Frizanza.

Indict 2 After Drugging of Woman, Heir To $100,000 From a $12,000,000 Estate

Case of Miss Gertrude Claypool, Who Was Returned Half Dressed and Semi Conscious to This City After Telephone Call Interrupted Alleged Plot, Presented to Prosecutor

New York, June 24.—In response to a formal request from John T. Dooling, Assistant District Attorney of this county, the District Attorney of Essex county, New Jersey, last night reported that the Grand Jury of that county had returned an indictment against Mrs. Margaret Hill, of No. 208 West Fifty-fourth street, and A. Sidney Rosenthal, a lawyer of this city, charging them with assault in the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark, early this month, upon Miss Gertrude Claypool, by the administration to Miss Claypool of a narcotic drug.

The indictment unfolded to public view a story of intrigue with a large share of a twelve million dollar estate as a lure used to induce Miss Claypool, heir to $100,000 of the same estate, to listen to new counsellors, and discard for them her friends of a lifetime.

Miss Claypool is 42 years old and lives in the Great Northern hotel. Her mother dead for many years, was a sister of John W. Bookwalter of Ohio, who died in Italy last year leaving an estate estimated to be worth from $8,000,000 to $15,000,000. Mr. Bookwalter quarrelled with his brother-in-law long ago, but remained friendly with his niece, Miss Claypool, and made her a fixed allowance of $2,000 a year, and sending her additional sums readily whenever she asked for them. Her father also has contributed to Miss Claypool's resources and she has lived about the world, in Europe and in this country, but making her home most of the time in this city, for twenty years.

Judge J. M. Sheets, of Ohio, who represents the lines of nephews and nieces, other than Miss Claypool, among whom Mr. Bookwalter's will divided his estate, has been active in the recent efforts to protect Miss Claypool. In her childhood she suffered from infantile paralysis, which permanently affected her full control of one arm. While of nervous temperament Miss Claypool is described in official reports made to District Attorney Swann, as being entirely able to conduct her own and the ordinary affairs of life in travel and at home.

DECLINED $100,000 BEQUEST.

James F. McKinney, a lawyer, of Grout & McKinney, yesterday presented to Mr. Swann all the evidence in his possession concerning the strange experiences of his client, Miss Claypool, for such action as the District Attorney and the Grand Jury might take. Mr. McKinney said that Mr. Bookwalter's will had cut off Mr. Claypool entirely and left Miss Claypool the $100,000 bequest, and that the will had been admitted to probate. There are reports of another will but as they emanate from sources associated with the Newark experiences of Miss Claypool, which led to the indictment there that phase of the affair is not attracting immediate attention.

Miss Claypool declined to accept payment of the $100,000 willed to her uncle when tender of that sum was made recently. This became known, and a reporter interviewed Miss Claypool, obtaining from her statements published later that declared that her mother had been buried with jewels worth $50,000, and that she, Miss Claypool, proposed to make a contest for one-fourth of the estate of her uncle, Mr. Bookwalter, which she valued at $15,000,000. The publication of that interview revealed the place of residence of Miss Claypool in New York.

At the Great Northern, seeking an interview with Miss Claypool, there appeared a man who introduced himself as a brother of a cousin in Indiana of Miss Claypool, who said that his name was Whitehall. That man went into a long discussion of Miss Claypool's claims to a larger share in the Bookwalter estate.

Almost on his heels a woman called at the Great Northern to see Miss Claypool, but she had gone out. She left her card and flowers. At the end of the startling series of experiences of which that was the beginning, Miss Claypool slowly recovering from the effects of a drug and a taxicab ride in her nightgown, with an overcoat over it, from Newark to New York, two weeks ago, declared that Mrs. Margaret Hill was the woman who had sought her acquaintance in the Great Northern. She made that statement to Miss Grace H. Cannon, a dressmaker of No. 106 East Eighty-first street, when a taxicab deposited Miss Claypool, half clothed and half conscious, at Miss Cannon's door at 2 o'clock in the morning of June 5th. Miss Claypool had been driven in the taxicab from the Robert Treat Hotel, in Newark, that night first to Patterson, back to Newark, and then to New York.

MRS. HILL BECOMES COMPANION.

Miss Cannon repeated to Mr. Dooling last evening those statements of Miss Claypool. She had made dresses for Miss Claypool. Before Miss Claypool arrived in the taxicab that morning Miss Cannon received a telephone message which she said was from Mrs. Hill, notifying her that Miss Claypool would arrive, that she was semi-conscious and asking Miss Cannon to arrange to get Miss Claypool out of the taxicab and into her own home. Miss Claypool said, Miss Cannon reported to Mr. Dooling, that Mrs. Hill had left the taxicab at Forty-ninth street, and Sixth avenue, after riding from the Newark hotel with Miss Claypool, saying that she had to get $100 to pay the chauffeur.

Friends of Miss Claypool were notified by Miss Cannon and they went to her home. Miss Claypool was not in a condition to be removed until 10 o'clock that morning when her friends took her to the Waldorf Astoria, and later she returned to her rooms in the Great Northern.

Following the introduction of herself to Miss Claypool, after the first visit when she left flowers and her card, Mrs. Hill became a constant companion of Miss Claypool. They went together to the office of Dr. L. L. Seaman, No. 247 Fifth avenue. Dr. Seaman, an old friend of the family, had held for several years a power of attorney from Miss Claypool under which he attended to her business affairs.

Mr. McKinney reported to Mr. Dooling yesterday that he had interviewed Dr. Seaman and the latter reported his repudiation of Mrs. Hill and the proposals made when she and Miss Claypool paid him a visit. Miss Claypool turned against Dr. Seaman after that interview and was more constantly than ever with Mrs. Hill, who soon took up her residence with Miss Claypool in the Great Northern.

Two telegrams which arrived for Miss Claypool not long after that were opened by Bettie, the maid in the apartment, who through long service had assumed a motherly attitude in regard to her employer. Miss Claypool. The telegrams were not delivered because of conclusions in regard to their origin at which the maid had arrived. They appeared to have been sent by Miss Claypool's father in Indiana, and warned Miss Claypool that he had learned of a plot to kidnap his daughter by their heirs under the Bookwalter will, because of her threatened contest.

DISCHARGES THE MAID.

After Mrs. Hill reached the apartment with Miss Claypool, and the latter's request for mail had not caused the maid to deliver the telegrams, Mrs. Hill and Miss Claypool were together and presently Miss Claypool demanded the telegrams. The maid procured them and was discharged.

Evasion of the alleged kidnappers may have prompted the swift changes of residence by Miss Claypool and Mrs. Hill immediately afterwards. They went to other hotels and to the office of Mr. Rosenthal. Mr. McKinney reports that a revocation of her power of attorney to Dr. Seaman was executed by Miss Claypool in Mr. Rosenthal's office and another power of attorney was then made by Miss Claypool to the lawyer. From information received from Miss Claypool, Mr. McKinney reports, he believes that Miss Claypool also executed an agreement to pay Mrs. Hill $50,000 out of the money she expected to receive from her uncle's, the Bookwalter, estate.

Affairs began to move faster the first week of this month and the friends of Miss Claypool began to watch all her companions. A nurse from St. Vincent's hospital was questioned as she came from Miss Claypool and reported that she had declined to remain, believing that there was some illegal proceeding in progress.

Friends of Miss Claypool were startled to receive a telephone message from Bettie, the maid, who had been restored to her place, late one night. The maid said that her employer had been drugged, and when she had tried to protect her a man, who is named elsewhere in the complaint, had pushed the maid into another room and then locked the door. The telephone happened to be in that room.

Through that early notice friends of Miss Claypool learned that she had gone to the Robert Treat Hotel in Newark, with Mrs. Hill. When they located her there and telephoned to the proprietor, two men who were in the room next to that occupied by Miss Claypool, were ordered out. Miss Claypool and Mrs. Hill then disappeared from the hotel.

That astonished the proprietor at first, because all their baggage and effects were left behind. He discovered that they had descended several floors by the fireproof staircase and been driven away in a taxicab.

Mrs. Hill sought to replevin her baggage and other effects in the Newark hotel but Miss Claypool's friends had engaged Mr. McKinney to represent her in the meantime, and he had communicated with the hotel proprietor, and the Essex county authorities. The effects of Mrs. Hill were seized and a packet of white powders was discovered sewed in the folds of a skirt. Witnesses were obtained, the Grand Jury was summoned to meet at nine o'clock in the morning, and an indictment was returned. All the effects of Mrs. Hill and of Miss Claypool found in the hotel rooms were sent to a safe deposit box of the county prosecutor.

Mr. Dooling arranged last evening to have these papers photographed today for use in this jurisdiction. They are expected to reveal more fully the direct object of the plot of which Miss Claypool is believed to have been the intended victim.

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tiffonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NO MORE WAGONS FOR THE GYPSIES

Ride in Motor Cars; No Longer Trade Horses or Tell Fortunes.

SALINA, Kan., June 24.—The motor car has taken the place of the wagon with the gypsies. A band that passed through Salina a few days ago was not in any sense a band that is usually seen on the streets of the Kansas towns. This band was living in style and the long white road, with its camp fires, fortune telling and nomadic thrills, is a thing of the past.

This particular band is soon to lose its princess—Princess Mary, who is going to Paris to study. Mary Matrine, or as she preferred, Princess Mary, is a real princess of the Romany Rye, and with her parents is en route to New York, where she will take passage for Paris to get an education. The father, father, several sisters and brothers are making the trip from the West overland in a large car, eight twinder, as completely equipped as a Pullman.

"I've been with the wagons since I was a tiny baby," said Princess Mary, who is pretty, with the olive complexion, beautiful teeth and black eyes. "You know my father was king for a while and I have the royal blood in my veins and I want to be educated and live like you Americans; have training in music and languages—and just think, I am going to get it!" She is now 17 years old, and is very enthusiastic over her future prospects. She speaks French, German and English fluently, and her instructors have been her parents.

"No more gypsy wagons for us," said the Princess Mary's papa. "This is good enough for anybody. If we had had motor cars long ago there would have been more gypsies. The motor car is handy in many ways for our style of travel; we like it and will never return to the wagons of old. We are more comfortable in this manner of travel and we enjoy it. Many people imagine that we are naturally dirty, but not so; we love to be clean and can be so with the car, but not with the wagon. No more wagon for us."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Power of Song

By F. A. MITCHEL

There was a girl of one of those states which now compose the Balkans whose ambition was to emulate men in athletics. Expert in throwing the discus, she won contests against those who were champions in this game. She was the best chariot driver in the kingdom and had won many races. But her most remarkable feats were in running. In this no one was found to beat her.

So proud was she of her swiftness on her legs that she made a vow she would marry no man who could not beat her on the cinder path. Having many suitors, this only added to the rivalry among them. But since an ability to run fast does not argue that a man is otherwise attractive, those whose muscular development warranted their entering the list were not likely to win the girl even if they won the race. Several fleet runners came so near beating her that if she had chosen she might have thrown the race without appearing to do so.

One day a young man came to the village where this girl, Eudoxia, lived and announced that he would enter the list against her, only he made the provision that should he win the race she must marry him. He sent a challenge, and Eudoxia dispatched her brother to look the man over and report to her whether he would likely outrun her. The brother returned and reported that, while the challenger was shapely, he was not muscular, and his physique did not warrant the inference that he could beat an ordinary runner.

The slight risk of being beaten by one whom she would be pledged to marry and yet might dislike tempted Eudoxia to consent to the terms. So an agreement was drawn up between her and the stranger, who called himself Boris, to race, and if he beat her she was to marry him. This agreement was signed by Eudoxia without having been her suitor.

The race was to take place on a track in the form of an ellipse, the length being half a mile and there being seven laps. A large concourse of people were gathered to see the race. The stranger stepped forth in a pair of short running pants such as are worn at the present day. One thing about him was noticeable—his manly beauty. It was evident that he was not built for fleetness. But what astonished every one was that he held in his hand a harp. Eudoxia was attired in the same fashion, with the addition of a shift falling only to the thighs.

When the two confronted each other it was noticed that the stranger's manly beauty, which all agreed rivaled the statues of Apollo, made a marked impression on Eudoxia. When she saw the harp in his hand she was surprised, and when he did not lay it aside before taking his position for the race she wondered.

The signal was given. Eudoxia started off so fast that she did not know that Boris was walking slowly. She heard behind her sounds from the strings of the harp, soothing rather than inspiring. When she had made three-quarters of the first lap there, directly opposite her at the other end of the minor axis of the elliptic course, was Boris, walking and striking his harp. Then he began to sing.

Eudoxia, who had nothing to fear from such a tortoise, stopped to listen. Boris was singing her praises, the love he felt for her, pleading that she would not turn a deaf ear to him. She listened till he had gone out of hearing, and then she proceeded to the other end of the minor axis and waited till he had come around to the point where she had been listening to his song.

It seemed that in the meanwhile it had grown sweeter. He was walking very slowly, putting all his feeling into it. Again Eudoxia went on till she reached the point at which he had been singing, while he proceeded till he took her place. Here both stood still, the man singing of the beauty and the virtues of the peerless Eudoxia, she seeming to be spellbound. Then he went on singing, "Wait for me, fair one," repeating the words again and again till he came around to where she stood, and the two walked side by side.

In this way they proceeded, the girl rapt in the song, till they came within a few yards of the goal, when Boris, still singing, turned and walked backward, keeping his eyes fixed on Eudoxia, till he passed over the goal.

Then the spectators, who had appeared to be enthralled as well as the girl, drew a long breath and burst into a cheer.

And so Eudoxia was won, not by fleetness, but by the power of song. As soon as he had won the race Boris announced himself to be the son of a powerful noble of what is now Montenegro, and, without holding Eudoxia to her contract, appeared himself as a suitor for her hand, which, after a period of maidenly reserve, she gave him.

Many of the people who were not cognizant of what passed after the winning of the race believed that the stranger was Apollo, who had come down from heaven to win an earthly bride.

After the wedding Boris and his wife disappeared and when they reached his home were received with as much interest as had attended the race. For Boris had been in Greece and, hearing of the girl who must be won in a foot race, had stopped on his way back to see her. He resolved to win her by making love to her in song.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting results.

GERMAN MILLS FEEL PINCH.

Textile Plants Need Raw Material—Output Cut Down.

German textile mills are suffering greatly from the shortage in raw material and the limitation of their output, and their stockholders face the prospect of reduced dividends, or none at all in many cases, according to the following excerpts from a recent issue of the Monats-Schrift fur Textile-Industrie.

"The administration of the Eilenburg Calico Factory states in reply to inquiries that the fixing of a dividend this year will be more difficult than last year, as the situation in their branch of the textile trade is growing very critical. So scarce is raw material that shareholders must reckon with the cessation of work for the greater part of the coming fiscal year.

"From Meerane, Saxony, we have the following report: Since last year's report no improvement has taken place in the situation. It is undoubted that work for the general customer other than the army, has shrunk still more. It is with the utmost difficulty that manufacturers can produce raw material. Materials for ladies' dresses is exhausted, and the ordinary lines of cotton yarn are amply unobtainable.

"From Munchen-Gladbach: For private manufacture, other than military orders, work is at a standstill and it is evident that we must shut down with only two or three days' work per week. If things go on as at the present time total closing of the works will be unavoidable."

LADY WILLIAMS-TAYLOR'S SPEECH TO AID RECRUITING

Great Enthusiasm at Open-Air Meeting on Dominion Square

MONTREAL, June 24.—The most enthusiastic of the series of recruiting meetings held in Dominion square in aid of the Irish-Canadian Rangers was that addressed by Lady William-Taylor. A crowd estimated at 3,000 gathered about the trench and duguout and Lady Williams-Taylor's stirring speech was cheered to the echo. A concert followed the address, in which Mme. Donalda and Lieut. Foley took part with Fred H. Blair and Pte. Gordon Stuart as accompanist.

Lady Williams-Taylor, who was introduced by Capt. Campbell Stuart of the Rangers, said:

"Though heart and soul with this movement, when I was first asked to speak here to-night I refused, in terror, and I'm horribly nervous now.

"Then there came to me the memory of a young man's face I saw in peaceful Virginia a month ago, just home from Flanders, a leg gone—his face still grey from the surgeon's knife—an American of Irish descent. I asked him what took him to our war. 'It's not your war,' he said, 'it's the fight of decency and honor against murderers and brutality. I passed my boyhood, in Germany, and was there when the war broke out, at first lulled into comfortable neutrality by happy associations and convincing friends. But one day one of these friends, the son of a von something, high in power; showed me a copy of the order sent by one of Germany's greatest generals to the military governor of Poland, preparatory to the state entry into poor, beaten, crushed Warsaw. Among other instructions was that to have ready seven hundred riding horses, so many cases of wine, so many thousands of pounds of food stuffs, so many head of cattle, and so many young polish women.'

HUMANITY'S CAUSE.

"Do you wonder that I came here to-night? That I have came in the name of humanity to beseech of you—in the name of the woman you love, or in memory of one gone and watching you from far, far above—to ask you to do what this boy did, to stand for decency, for the right, and to rid the lands of our noble of these unspeakable brutes?

"I was told yesterday that 'this sort of thing is not women's work.' If it is not, then what is a woman's work? Haven't women's souls to shrink with horror at such atrocities as this world has never known? Haven't women homes to cherish? Haven't women hearts and souls to sicken at the treatment these Huns have meted out to our sisters of Belgium, France, Italy and, worst of all, Poland?

"And with our children's, our Empire's, in fact with the whole world's future ever before us, don't we, with breaking hearts, strained eyes, choking threats, send forth our sons, fathers, brothers, our very life's blood into that sea of seething, hideous strife? So haven't we women the right to be here?

"We Canadians faced this war with unflinching fortitude from its declaration. And God knows the finest of our men, native born, and adopted, have faced the Hun, and his every fiendish device, with the same undaunted spirit.

"Valcartier, thanks to that vital force, Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, was transformed in four weeks from a wild valley set in the Laurentian hills, to a camp, for 35,000 men, of such perfection that it evoked admiring and amazed comment from that experienced American soldier, Gen. Crozier.

ONLY SON THERE.

"It grew cold in September in that far northern Valcartier, water froze at night, the men laughed and broke the ice to wash; heavy rains fell in torrents; they dug little trenches about their soaking tents and sang as they digged: Roads, towards the end of September, became almost impassable. They dug out the gun-carriages, they hoisted, mended, contrived, and faced every difficulty with the same cleverness, the same fine quality, I know, for I was there—you see my only son was there and I watched it all from August 16 until those men sailed from Quebec in October.

"And I saw them again in November, uncomplaining as ever, on those flooded plains at Salisbury, with ice-cold water deep underfoot, and a chill wind blowing and the seadrift driven overhead by the gales from the Bristol channel. And as they marched through mud and sodden earth, and waded through that filthy water, those men of ours sang "O Canada." They joked, they laughed. Tents were blown to pieces. The one recreation hall blew into its original boards. That camp was a horror. And I know, for I lived nearby, two miles from it, until in February they marched out of it. And as they splashed along those water-silvered Wiltshire roads into the mist-veiled distance on their way to embark at Avonmouth, there floated back to us left behind, to the rhythm of their marching, once again, the haunting 'O Canada' and 'It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary.'

"Those of you who have not felt the proud glow of putting on the King's khaki, or thrilled to the rhythm of marching shoulder to shoulder with your fellowmen—join to-night. Think of broken, betrayed Belgium, of blood-drenched Flanders, of that fair Northern France, that garden of peace and plenty, now a shell-ploughed field of sudden death.

"Think of the broken altars and desecrated shrines, and think of the foul orgies now held, where but two years ago the novice prayed. Again and again I ask you to think well, and if you are men with red blood in your veins you'll follow that English Tommy, who, recovered from wounds and just medically passed, sang gaily down Piccadilly as he swung along with his comrades;

"So back once more to the barracks,
As soon as I've passed the test,
And they'll give me a nice clean ribbon
To wear on my manly chest.
And we are drillin' and shootin',
And I reckon we're quite O.K.,
If you're still 'oldin' back from your duty,
Just chuck it, and step this way.
So here we are a merry crew,
An "up-and-at-'em" army,
Lawyers, bankers, wealthy rankers,
Novel writers, slayin' the blighters,
Good ole British Army."

LIQUID CATARRH REMEDIES USELESS, ONLY RELIEVE, NEVER CURE

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the lining of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages, by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it you send the richest pine balsams right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness, coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for Catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, get it to-day, but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size containing two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

LACK MONEY TO REBUILD CITIES

British headquarters, France.—The idea that enormous quantities of material will be immediately in demand to rebuild the destroyed sections of France and Belgium once peace comes, seems mistaken.

"We will not be able to buy many things until we have something to sell which will bring us money to buy with," said a citizen of Ypres, the most ruined of cities, and where the wreckage is still pounded by shells.

No civilian inhabitants are allowed to live in the city; but an indication of how reconstruction will begin is evident in the shanties which have been built near the front, often in the zone of shell fire. Boards, discarded oil cans beaten flat, salvaged tiles or bricks and any other kind of material that can be procured at no expense, are used to make a shelter for a man and his family.

When the refugee returns to his ruined village or town in the fighting zone his first object will be a roof over his head before he sets out to reclaim acres which have grown up to weeds, and are pock marked with shell holes or if he is in business he will want any kind of temporary premises on the site of his old place of business, which he will occupy because it is his and because it is there that his old customers may expect to find him.

The simple wooden houses which the army has built for "rest camps" for the soldiers when out of the trenches, will become squatter settlements. Only less amazing than the amount of material which the army will leave behind because it is not worth transporting back to England, will be the use the thrifty French and Belgians will make of it. For up to the very moment of peace, whether it comes this year or five years hence, the army must have ample material in reserve for continuing the war.

Lumber, wooden supports for barb wire, timbering for the trenches and dugouts, all will be adapted to their necessities by the impoverished who have suffered from the loss of property and enforced idleness. Any funds they have saved will be needed for immediate capital to buy stocks of goods or farm implements and animals. It probably will be years before the permanent buildings will take the place of temporary shelters.

The restoration of such splendid public buildings as the Cloth Hall at Ypres and the Hotel de Ville in Arras, will come only when civic prosperity will permit unless an indemnity or a government grant is distributed for the purpose. Even in that case the first practical use of money and labor will be to restore business to something like its normal functions.

This Garden Hose Can't Kink

So there's no excuse for having that hose that soon appears leaks from breaks in the rubber and fabric. And the pliers of thin hose can't separate, so water, wear and weather can't loosen and ruin it like common hose.

GOODYEAR

Nero Hose

The crowning triumph of Goodyear experts in making a low-priced hose that defies destructive forces. Comes in any length up to 500 feet.

Reliable Hose

The best wrapped-fabric construction because the fabric edges are stitched—not just a mark. Comes in 3 weights.

C. P. R. MILITARY CROSS HERO

HOW LIEUT. McARTHUR CAPTURED A TRENCH AND 45 GERMANS, DECORATED BY THE KING.

It was announced recently that Second-Lieut. William B. McArthur, of the 1st Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers, second son of Mr. and Mrs. McArthur, of Dunsbury, Mostyn road, New Malden, has been awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry at the Front. The deed for which he received the award is officially described as follows by the "Surrey Comet," of May 20th last:—

For conspicuous determination when in charge of a working party.

With twelve men he captured and brought back as prisoners over forty armed enemy.

The gallant officer, who is 22 years of age, returned on leave from France last week, and by Royal Command, attended at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday morning to receive his decoration at the hands of His Majesty the King, along with a number of other young officers.

The full story of the young officer's gallant deed may now be told—a deed in which he displayed a coolness and presence of mind which enabled him to extricate himself and his small party of men from a perilous position and at the same time capture as prisoners-of-war no fewer than 45 armed Germans!

In the early morning of March 27th it was decided to explode three mines in the St. Eloi salient, and Lieut. McArthur, with twenty men of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, were entrusted with some dangerous work in the vicinity of these mines. Before the Lieutenant and his men could return to safety the mines exploded and the contour of the ground was so altered by the explosions that in the darkness the party lost their way. As they were proceeding cautiously in what they thought was the direction of the British trenches, five figures suddenly appeared in front of them. Immediately on Lieut. McArthur challenging the strangers, "Who goes there?"—an illuminating shell burst and revealed the helmet of a German officer who was the leading man of the five.

"Halt!" shouted Lieut. McArthur, at the same time drawing his revolver and dropping on his knee. Two shots rang out in the darkness, and the German officer fell, mortally wounded; with the remaining three rounds an equal number of the officer's companions were accounted for. A corporal with the party then came up from behind, and Lieut. McArthur, telling the corporal to rest his rifle on his (the Lieutenant's) shoulder, the fifth man was disposed of.

While the German officer was lying on the ground he called for the "brave British officer" to come to him. Suspecting treachery, however, the officer not having been disarmed, Lieut. McArthur deemed it advisable not to comply with the request, and proceeded with his duties. As the call for the British officer was repeated, the corporal eventually went to ascertain what the German officer wanted. On reaching him the German took an iron cross off his breast, and handed it to the corporal with the request that it should be given to his officer.

Lieut. McArthur then made his way cautiously ahead, and to his surprise came upon a trench full of Germans! Maintaining his presence of mind, however, he turned to his handful of men, which now numbered six, and shouted, "Come on, my lads, give them a volley!" The click of the rifles proved sufficient for the Huns, who shouted, "No shoot, no shoot, camarade," and threw up their hands in token of surrender.

With an empty revolver in one hand and a cane in the other, the brave young officer advanced to the edge of the trench and made signs to the Germans to get out of it, which they gladly did—45 of them, all fully armed! The remainder of Lieut. McArthur's little party now came up, and the Germans were disarmed, made prisoners and marched to the British trenches.

Dawn now commencing to break, the advance of the little party with their prisoners became extremely dangerous, and on one occasion they had a narrow escape of being shot down by the men in the British trenches, being mistaken for an attacking party of the enemy. However, this danger was ultimately averted and the party arrived safely at the British trenches with their prisoners, and their appearance naturally caused no little surprise.

Lieut. McArthur was connected with the Passenger Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway in London, Eng.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

How They Cure

PLESSISVILLE, QUE.

"I suffered from Kidney Trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that Juniper, without alcohol, is excellent for the Kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more bad humor—increase in weight—clear eyes—fresh color—more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me."

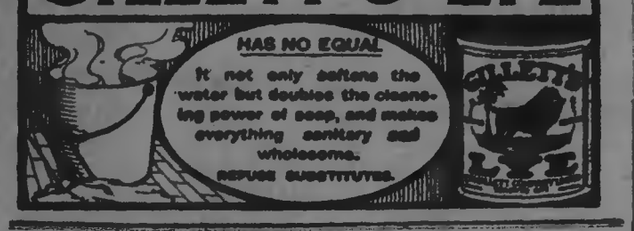
GILLETT'S LYE



An Interview With The Emperor of Germany

It is Not Easy to Enter the Prussian Capital, But There is a Way Which is Not Often Used---The Balkan Judas

It is not easy to enter Berlin, but there is one way which is not often used. It lies, I need hardly state, through a neutral kingdom. The frontier of that kingdom can be crossed by those who know the language and can secure the necessary talisman.

I need not describe my adventures in this land. They might appear incredible to those who have never been there. It is enough to say that it was there I met the person who introduced me into the presence of the All-Highest War Lord.

Let it be understood that my conversation with the Kaiser was carried on without a single eye-witness, or ear-witness. It is possible that the Kaiser will deny that he ever received me. In that case it is his word against mine. Further, I wish to explain that I used a false name. The Kaiser alone knows it. I venture to predict that he will never reveal it.

I was naturally forced to dissemble my love for the Kaiser and his brood. A single rash word might have cost me my life. Oddly enough throughout the interview I did not feel a tremor or fear. Looking back upon the scene I can scarcely believe that I possessed the hardihood to carry off my imposture. It was only after my safe return that I trembled at my own audacity.

RUSSIA AND VERDUN.

I was shocked by the physical condition of the Kaiser. I had expected to see a pale, emaciated, white haired wreck. The man who shook my hand was erect, vigorous, and if anything, rather obese. His hair and his horrent moustaches were not white. Nor where they grey. They were a brilliant auburn. They dye better in Berlin than in London.

After a few conventional remarks, about the weather, I congratulated the Kaiser upon his dazzling victories. He frowned.

"Victories," he grunted gutturally. "What victories?"

"Russia," said I, "is down and out."

"I wish Hindenburg though so," he retorted. "I wish I thought so. The Russians have so many men that they are sending legions to France."

"Phantoms!" said I. "Do you believe in that old myth?"

"Look at this," he cried, showing me a sheaf of photographs taken at Marseilles. "The camera cannot lie."

"Do you forget your victories at Verdun?"

"Forget them!" he screamed. "Am I likely to forget them? Are my people likely to forget them? My friend, when I die they will find the word Verdun graven on my heart. Harden told me yesterday that after the war he intends to change the title of his paper from 'Zunkunft' to 'Verdunft.' Vernunt is the future of Germany. Do you know that Verdun has cost me 300,000 men."

"At any rate," said I, "Turkey is triumphant."

THE BALKAN JUDAS.

"Optimist!" he sneered. "Are you aware that old von der Goltz was murdered? Are you aware that the Russians have taken Erzrum and Trebizond, and before long they will cut the railway below Bagdad? Do you know that the Turks are threatening to make peace if I do not send them more money, more men and more munitions?"

"But Bulgaria is immovable," I hinted.

"You are right," he snarled bitterly. "Bulgaria refuses to move. That scoundrel Ferdinand is trying to sell me as he sold Serbia. My only comfort is that nobody will buy the Balkan Judas."

"Roumania will soon join you," I remarked.

"I do not care for your jests," he replied. "Roumania will rush to the rescue of the victor. I am tired of Roumania. When she joins me I shall know that I have won. Her motto is 'Wait and see.' The longer she waits the less hope I see."

"I fear you have joined the pessimists," I said.

"I have been a pessimist since the French won the battle of the Marne, and banged, barred and bolted the door of the west in my face. My good air, I am like Sterne's starling. I cant' get out of my iron cage."

"The German eagle caged!" I cried. "Impossible!"

"Caged and starving to death," growled the Kaiser.

"Nonsense," said I; "you have plenty of food. Your organisation is the wonder of the world."

"I'm organised to death," said the Kaiser. "My people are on rations."

"They like it," I said. "The lower the diet the higher their spirits. Remember how long Paris held out in 1870. Your Bradenburghers can hold out forever."

"Visionary!" he muttered. "A beleaguered city is one thing, a beleaguered Empire is another. Seventy millions on short rations that grow shorter every day! I do not like to think of Paris. The comparison is odious. The cards of Providence are not all made in Germany. In 1870 we starved the French. In 1916 the English are starving us.'"

"But your submarines will soon starve the English into surrender. They cannot fight much longer."

"Fairy tales!" said the Kaiser. "I know more about the English than they know about themselves. They are always straffing each other for being lukewarm and lethargic. Heavens! If they only knew what they have done to me!"

"What have they done?" I asked.

"Ruined me!" said the Emperor. "They catch my submarines as fast as I send them out. Their seas are alive with devilries. Have you heard of their .....2. The worst of it is that they never blab. Our submarines go out and they never come back. It has got on my nerves. And my German pigs imagine that my underseas boats rule the waves! I dare not undeceive them. They would kick me off my throne if they guessed the truth. And those internal Yankees want me to abandon my last bluff! I must give up something I haven't got! Bah!"

"Will you fight America?" I then asked.

"How can I fight a nation of a hundred millions? Do you think I am mad?"

"The English are weary of the war," said I, mendaciously.

"Rubbish!" said the angry man. "I know the English. They stick and stick. They thrive upon disasters. They flourish on defeats. I pounded them at Mons. They grinned. I pounded them at Ypres. They grinned again. They pretend to be downhearted, but they don't bamboozle me. Their armies grow and grow. Their ships breed and breed. Their money chokes me everywhere. And in England the people hardly know they are at war."

"You seem to admire the English," I said.

"They are the greatest nation on earth," said Wilhelm. "They are also the wiliest and craftiest. They deceived me—even me! They duped me. They cheated me out of my war, and gave me their war. Do you think I was a fool to trust them to keep out? You don't! Well, I was a fool, and they knew it!"

"Your Zeppelins have terrified them."

"Don't be rude," said the Kaiser "They laugh at them. Nothing terrifies the English except their politicians. Let me tell you the secret of the English. They are never satisfied, and they are never beaten. When they win the war they will try to persuade the world that they have lost, and the Germans will try to persuade the world that they have won it."

"You think the English will win," I said.

"They have won," said the Kaiser, "but they don't know it. The Germans have lost, but they don't know it. Good morning."

Our talk was conducted in Dreamland, but I believe in dreams.

THE PROPER REGIMENT.

During breakfast in a large munition factory on Clydeside, where nearly every nationality is represented, a group of workmen were discussing Lord Derby's scheme and the different battalions which they would like to join. After various opinions had been given as to which was the best, Sandy said "If Ah hev tae join, gie me the Scottish Rifles." "A'll join the Royal Scots," said Geordie. "Ah think them the best." "What about Isaac here?" inquired another workman. "Oh," replied Geordie, "Isaac's gaun to join the new battalion—the Jordan Highlanders."

LOST.

A professor was touring the Highlands, and one day went with a big Heilin' chief for a row on the loch. "Do you know anythig about theology?" he asked the chief. "Naw, not me," said Mac. "Man, you're lost," said the professor, "but do you know anything about physiology?" "Not I," said Mac. After asking several questions and receiving "No" for his mate's answer, and always telling the Highlandman "Man, you're lost," the boys happened to capsize, and while struggling in the water Mac shouted "Can you swim?" "No," was the professor's answer. "Man, you're lost," answered Mac.

HAD A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN COULD NOT SLEEP OR WORK

Is Now Cured and Attributes His Recovery to the Use of Dr. Chase's Medicines

Some splendid results have been reported to us from the combined use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. It complicated cases they work together with great success.

While the Kidney-Liver Pills arouse the action of liver, kidneys, and bowels, and so overcome, derangements of these organs, the Nerve Food enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the system in a general way.

Mr. R. B. Hillman, Purbrook, Muskoka, Ont., writes: "About four years ago I was all run down and could not work, and as to writing a letter, I could not do it on account of my hand shaking so badly. My nerves were unstrung and I was troubled with a nervous breakdown. I could not sleep soundly and would start up so suddenly so to almost jump out of bed. My kidneys were bad, too, and I had awful pains in the back all day. I doctored with our family doctor, but he did not seem to know what I needed. I was recommended to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and could sleep well three nights after, starting the use of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I take great pleasure in recommending these medicines as I have proved that they do all that is claimed for them."

When used together the Nerve Food should be used after each meal and at bed-time, and the Kidney-Liver Pills only as often as is necessary to keep the bowels in healthy condition. Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S BLOUSE.

By Anabel Worthington.

If you would be convinced that the designers are trying to give boys' blouses an unusual style effect, just look at this one. No. 7,777, a smart and serviceable blouse in combination effect; either the low, flat collar, which appears to be in one with the blouse fronts that are faced to form revers, or the standing, turn over style may be used to advantage. In the illustration the collar and revers are of striped material; so are the cuffs on the short sleeves and a pocket in the left front is trimmed to harmonize. If the turn over collar is used work buttonholes in the neckband. In all one material this garment will give substantial satisfaction. A box plait down the front for the closing is a detail of interest and a back yoke is another feature of note.

The pattern may be had in sizes 6 to 14 years. To copy the design in size 10 will require 1¾ yards plain material in 36-inch width and ⅝ yard striped material in same width. In all one material just 2 yards will be necessary.

To obtain the pattern send only 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 20 cents.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else containing too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Choice Recipes

EGG PANCAKE

Here is a splendid pancake for breakfast for a small family: An ordinary portion for two people is made of four eggs, a pinch of salt, and a tablespoonful of flour wet with a bit of milk to rub the lumps out, all these beaten together until light and frothy and one cup of milk added and beaten again. Pour this into a hot greased skillet and cook over a slow fire. Both sides should be browned. This pancake ought to puff up two inches. It may be eaten with jams, jellies or syrup.

SOUR CREAM PIE.

Two eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup chopped raisins, 1 1-2 cups sour cream 1-4 teaspoon soda, 1-4 teaspoon ground cloves, 1-4 teaspoon allspice. Put altogether in a large kettle and cook until the foam settles, when it is ready to put in your crusts. Whip the white of the two eggs for the top. Have the crust cooked before hand. This will make two large pies.

POND LILY SALAD.

This salad uses three eggs to every two people. Cut the whites of the hard-boiled eggs into lengthwise pieces, about six to each egg, and arrange them in small lettuce leaves to form the petals of a pond lily. Nasturtium leaves may be used, if desired. Grate the yolks mix them with chopped olives and celery, and then pile the mixture into little mounds in the centre of the white petals. Serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Caper Sauce.

Make a cream sauce of one pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch and two of butter. Rub the butter and cornstarch together and add to the milk. Allow to cook in a double kettle until the sauce is of the desired thickness. Then drop in three dessert spoonfuls of capers and serve hot.

A DELICIOUS SANDWICH.

Two cupfuls of cold cooked beef, eight or ten pimentos, two tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise, one half teaspoonful of salt, white and graham bread. Run the meat and olives through the meat-grinder, using the medium cutter. Add salt and mayonnaise, and mix thoroughly. Spread between slices of white and graham bread. The tougher portions of the roast can be utilized in this way in a very appetizing manner.

TERRIFIC BOMBARDMENT BY THE BRITISH

BIG OFFENSIVE EXPECTED ON WESTERN FRONT

BRITISH GUNS ARE HAMMERING THE HUNS ALONG A 100 MILE FRONT

Although Nothing Official Has Been Given Out From the War Office Belief is General in London That Big Events Are Transpiring on the Western Front---Berlin Reports Intense British Artillery Fire on Both Sides of the Somme

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON (Special Cable), June 27.—That big events are transpiring on the British front in Flanders is believed here, although nothing official has been reported from the War Office. It is known, however, that a terrific bombardment by the British, Canadian and Australian artillery has been progressing along a hundred-mile front south from Ypres for nearly three days.

French reports say this has been very effective. Such bombardments invariably precede massed attacks by infantry, and news is expected of such attacks at any moment. There is considerable tension here.

FRENCH MAKE ADVANCE NEAR THIAUMONT FORT

Examiner Special:

PARIS, June 27.—The French official to-day says we made an advance near Thiaumont fortifications and captured German works at this point in the course of violent night fighting which spread to the region of Fleury village. Fight for possession of the village is still on.

West of the Meuse, German grenade attack against a trench west of Hill 304 was checked.

The French also repulsed a German attack against Nouilly, on the upper Meuse.

BRITISH ARTILLERY FIRE IS INTENSE, SAYS BERLIN

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, June 27.—Intense British artillery fire on both sides of the Somme was reported in this afternoon's official statement from the War Office. French attacks west of Thiaumont works and southwest of Fort Vaux were without result.

Continuing their successful counter offensive against the Russians, the Germans stormed enemy lines west of Sokul, taking several hundred prisoners, it was officially claimed this afternoon.

Italians Recapture Number of Positions

Examiner Special:

ROME, June 27.—Italian troops have recaptured the strongly fortified towns of Arsiero, Posina and nearly a dozen other positions from the Austrians in the Trentino, it was officially announced this afternoon.

Further Evidence in Casement Trial

Examiner Special:

LONDON, England, June 27.—Witnesses in the Casement trial to-day gave practically the same evidence as at the preliminary investigation. In cross-examining several Irish Constabulary witnesses, the counsel for Casement quoted from speeches circulated in Ireland, showing that their members of Parliament wer determined to resist Home Rule.

The Crown rested its case against Casement early this afternoon. Solicitor Sullivan for defense, then argued a motion to quash the indictment on the ground that it specified that the alleged treasonable acts were committed within the realm of the Empire, whereas the testimony showed they were committed outside.

TO EXTEND CREDIT TO MUNITION MANUFACTURERS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 27.— Sir Thomas White and Canadian bankers will meet at the capital this week to consider the questions of further advances by bankers to Canadian munition manufacturers. It is expected no difficulty will be experienced in arranging for additional credit of fifteen millions. Canadian bankers have advanced seventy-six millions for the purpose up to the present.

A Protest Against American Intervention

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 27.—In half-page advertisements in most of the New York newspapers to-day, the American Union against militarism declared it would be a "blot upon American history" if America refused mediation of the Mexican embrogho.

The advertisement re-printed Captain Morey's report of the Carrizal encounter, calls attention to his "forming for attack" before the town, and holds this incident does not constitute a just cause of war."

Lincoln Committed On Forgery Charge

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., June 27.—Ignatius Trebitsch Lincoln, former M.P. and alleged German spy, who was brought back from the United States, was today indicted for forgery following his preliminary hearing at Old Bailey

LANCE CORP. JOHN ARTHUR FRANKISH, a Lakefield boy, who has been killed in action. He enlisted in Calgary and was a member of the 2nd Battalion, C.M.R.

MAN ASSAULTED ON HUNTER STREET LAST EVENING

Was Left Lying on the Sidewalk in an Unconscious Condition and Later Removed to the Hospital

ASSAILANT ESCAPED

After assaulting an elderly man by the name of William McKee, Lansdowne street, a man said to be in the uniform of a soldier, struck a man by the name of Harry Thompson and left him lying on the sidewalk in an unconscious condition. The affair occurred shortly before nine o'clock last evening. The scene of the assault was Hunter street, outside of the Palace Hotel.

Thompson was removed to the hospital in Comstock's ambulance. The police have instituted an investigation and feel confident that they will be able to locate the assailant.

Face Badly Cut.

According to the statement of a couple of spectators, Thomson was remonstrating with the soldier for striking McKee, when he was similarly attacked. He was knocked down and his face badly cut. Police Constable Wigg arrived on the scene a few minutes later, but not before the assailant had departed west on Hunter street. He is said to have been accompanied by a girl.

Dr. Gallivan was summoned and medical aid rendered to the injured man, after which he was removed to the hospital.

Vote Will Be A Light One

The vote on the Bonner-Worth industrial by-law promises to be a small one. During the day little interest was shown at the various polling sub-divisions throughout the city, although it is the consensus of opinion that the by-law will carry by a good, safe majority. Up till noon one sub-division recorded thirty-five votes with only two or three against. The by-law requires three-fifths of the total vote polled to carry it.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

In this morning's police court Hugh Connors appeared on a charge of stealing one hundred and thirty pounds of lead, valued at a little over nine dollars. Through his counsel, Mr. F. D. Kerr, the accused declined to elect and with the consent of all parties concerned, was committed for trial without any evidence being offered.

Crown Attorney Hutton appeared for the Crown.

Overseas Club Tobacco Fund

An urgent appeal is being made for funds to send our boys in the trenches some comforts in the way of "smokes." The fund has grown smaller, instead of larger, as it ought to as double the number of our boys are at the front that there were last year. It is possible that we who are staying at home enjoying ourselves, are so callous, that we would deny the boys who are fighting for us—yes, dying for us—some little comfort in the way of smokes. If you won't fight—pay. Do something—make some sacrifice for your country in the awful struggle. Help the boys who are fighting for you. A meeting of the overseas club will take place in the Bank of Montreal Chambers to-night at half-past-eight o'clock. Come and support the club.

PTE. LAWRENCE OF THE MOUNTED RIFLES KILLED IN ACTION

Another Peterboro' Boy Gives Life For the Empire---Fears For Safety of Corp. Fred Stanley--Recruits For 93rd, 74th and Queen's Field Ambulance Leave For Barriefield---To-day's General Military News.

Mr. Ernie Lawrence has received word that his son, Pte. Harold Lawrence of the 8th C. M. R., has been killed in action. The news will be received with great regret in Peterborough, as the young soldier was just a few days under eighteen when he became a member of B Squadron. He enlisted here on July 29th, last year, and on August 3rd celebrated his eighteenth birthday. Pte. Lawrence was born in Peterborough. He was a member of No. 2 Company, 57th Regiment, for a short time before enlisting for overseas service.

Grave anxiety is felt over the fate of Corp. Fred Stanley, a Peterborough, member of the Mounted Rifles, who left Peterborough with B squadron. A letter has been received from his brother, Trooper Horace Stanley, who also left with B Squadron, stating that he has been unable to get any trace of his brother, although some of his comrades had reported that he was wounded in the arm. The two brothers, although they left with the 8th, were in different Mounted Battalions at the front. They are sons of Sergt. Wm. Stanley of the 139th Battalion, and brothers of Sergt. A. Stanley of the 93rd Battalion.

Recruits are leaving Peterborough almost every day for the camp at Barriefield. On Saturday morning Geo. McKenzie, H. McMaster and D. W. Gerow left to join the 93rd. Yesterday morning another recruit for the 93rd left for Barriefield, in the person of Lou Lebar, Charlotte Street. This morning saw the departure of two more 93rd recruits, Ptes. Herbert Ireland and Frank Grady. Other Peterborough men to leave for Barriefield yesterday were Fred McNeely, to join the Queen's Field Ambulance, and Wm. Gray, to report to the 74th Battery. The latter unit sent another recruit down to-day, in he person of Samuel A. Choate. On Saturday, three Peterborough recruits left to report to the Army Service Corps, making a dozen men to leave for Barriefield since Friday night, of which six went to the 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Willis of the 93rd Battalion, who has been on sick leave since the Battalion left Peterborough, left this morning for Barriefield, to report for duty with the 93rd.

Sergt. Toone of the Orderly Room of the 93rd Battalion, arrived home from Barriefield yesterday, on a few days' leave.

Among the 93rd officers who are home on leave from Barriefield, are Capt. J. H. Eastwood and Lieut. V. Eastwood, Major Watt, Lieut. Armstrong and Lieut. McNab have returned to camp after a few days' leave.

Lieut. W. G. Hamilton an old Peterborough boy, son of Mr. Frank Hamilton, superintendent of Dominion Bridge Company's works at League Point, cabled to his father that he has been wounded in the thigh and is now being treated at the Bagal Tree Hospital, London.

Lieut. Hamilton joined the 5th Royal Highlanders of Montreal for 1st Contingent who went overseas and has gone through many battles uninjured. We wish Lieut. Hamilton a speedy recovery.

Barriefield War Camp, Monday, June 26. (From the Kingston Standard).—Yesterday was a busy day in a portion of the camp. The 139th Battalion who left to-day for Valcartier, were all busy packing equipment and tents and forwarding the same to the city for shipment. All day long the waggons of the transport section of the C.A.S.C. were carrying big loads across the camp ground and men and officers were active in cleaning up the lines. The leaving of the 130th is the first break in camp, which will be followed by the 136th, 139th and the 146th. This will leave in camp the 93rd of Peterborough, the 109th of Lindsay, the 154th of Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry, the 156th of Belleville, and the 166th of Brockville, together with the various departmental corps. Up to Saturday morning it was hoped that the 146th Battalion would be permitted to remain at Barriefield camp until sent overseas, but the definite word of the Minister of Militia on Friday, followed by the announcement that Sir Sam Hughes left for the west on Saturday morning, to be absent from the capital for two weeks, has settled the matter of the 146th Battalion, and Kingston will part with its fine battalion reluctant and regretfully.

The Kingston Standard says: "Colonel Hemming and staff are proud of the showing made by the big parade on Saturday. In spite of the fact that many were on pass and some of the camp bands were also absent on pass, the parade was sufficiently large to make it the biggest military demonstration Kingston has ever been privileged to witness. Later on Col. Hemming will arrange another such parade, and if only a week's notice can be given, thousands of people can be brought to the city to see it.

Sunday, June 18, 14 cases; Monday, June 19th, 40 cases; Tuesday, June 20th, 35 cases; Wednesday, June 21st, 28 cases; Thursday, June 22nd, 41 cases; Friday, June 23rd, 29 cases; Saturday, June 24th, 31 cases; total for the week, 218 cases.

The above is a remarkable showing for a camp with nearly 11,000 men, and with such weather conditions as Barriefield has experienced ever since the camp opened.

The Kingston Standard says: "A great many of the excursionists from Peterborough who came to the city on Saturday, visited the camp on Sunday, and spent much time with friends and in seeing the camp in general.

PETAWAWA CAMP, June 27.—With every battery turned out looking its best, it was gala day at Petawawa Camp to-day, when H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, reviewed on Drury Plain, five thousand men of the Dominion Overseas Artillery, now in training here.

Following C Battery were batteries in numerical order from every part of the Dominion, starting with the 46th, 47th, 48th and 49th, from Toronto, the 50th, 51st, 52nd, 53rd and the Ammunition Column from Kingston; the 55th and 56th Ontario Agricultural College Batteries and those from the Western Provinces and their ammunition columns.

That the artillery men in camp are fast rounding into shape to go overseas was quite evident from their smart appearance and the way they went through their manoeuvres.

WILL NOT RESIGN

LONDON, June 27.—It was stated authoritatively to-day that Lord Lansdowne would not resign, though it had been rumoured all Unionist members intended to quit the Cabinet on the Home Rule issue.

GRAND OFFENSIVE IS NEAR AT HAND

PTE. HAROLD LAWRENCE, Peterborough boy, who has been killed in action. He left with B Squadron of the 8th C.M.R.

PTE. BLAKE OF THE MOUNTED RIFLES ON MISSING LIST

Peterboro' Boy Who Enlisted Here With B Squadron, 8th C.M.R. Has Not Turned Up Since the Big Battle at Beginning of the Month

LETTER FROM HIS BROTHER

That Pte. Leonard Blake, a Peterborough boy, who enlisted here with B squadron, 8th C.M.R., is missing, as a result of the recent heavy fighting in France, is the news received by his relatives here in a letter from his twin brother, Pte. Arthur Blake, who also enlisted with B Squadron. The two brothers joined the Mounted Rifles last year and went overseas with the 8th. There has been no official news from Ottawa in regard to Pte. Blake, but his brother's letter states that Leonard is missing. Before enlisting he was employed as a baker by T. H. Hooper.

Captain J. Harris McClellan, Supt. of Big Military Camp

Stated To-day That 45,000 Troops Were Expected at Camp Borden This Summer

Captain J. Harris McClellan, superintendent of Camp Borden, was in the city to-day on his way to Ottawa. He stated that the first regiments will begin to arrive at this big Canadian camp on the shore of Lake Simcoe on July 1st and it was expected that 45,000 troops would be assembled there this summer for training. The camp is practically completed in its equipment for soldiers and everything will be in readiness for their immediate drilling and other instructions as soon as they arrive. Capt. McClellan remarked that the "Piney Plains" would surely afford a thrilling spectacle when all the troops arrive. With all the apparent equipment of a military officer, including leather "Sam Brown," Capt. McClellan who is an honourary captain as Colonel Allison and numerous others constituted the corps of honourary colonels appointed by Gen. Hughes, was complimented by old acquaintances upon his Joffre proportion and general appearance. Previous to his present work he had a position in the Militia Department at Ottawa.

340 WERE KILLED IN DUBLIN REVOLT

LONDON, June 27.—It was officially announced that 116 soldiers, sailors and policemen and 224 civilians were killed in the Dublin revolt.

Events On All Fronts Point to the Fact That the Hour of Action For the Allies Is Here—Russian Advance in South Continues.

THE ITALIAN SUCCESS

LONDON, June 26.—At last the long-heralded and much-delayed grand offensive of the allies seems to be at hand. Indeed, if events rather than official announcements mark its opening, it is already well under way.

Paris and London have said nothing with regard to the important operations now developing, with the exception of the chronicling of attacks on German lines at different points along the British front. These may have been for the purpose of feeling out the weak spots preliminary to an attempt to break through, but it has been left to admissions from the central powers to establish their existence. Thus as against the silence of the British War Office, Berlin to-day chronicled the opening of "important battles" on the sector held by Sir Douglas Haig.

Vienna supplements this to-night with the admission of a twenty-mile retirement in the Trentino. "To retain our freedom of action," is the tribute the Austrian War Office pays to General Cadorna's offensive, which observers expect to spread rapidly to the Isonzo front.

In the east the Russians, while still held up in their advance on Kovel by the Germans, are continuing their advance against the Austrians in the south. Their flank now protected by the Carpathians, they have turned northward on their sweep through Bukowina and are now approaching Kolomea. They are already within ten miles of the town.

TO FORCE EVACUATION.

Thus, though the Germans do succeed in preventing progress from the north, they may still force the evacuation of Lemberg and Tarnopol by advancing from the south. Similar tactics were successful when the Russians took the city before.

To stem the Russian tide, the Germans have taken over the defence of the whole sector from Kovel down to Brody. They have replaced the shattered ranks of the Archduke Frederich with fresh regiments from the west front, who are called upon here to undergo the same artillary hell they experienced at Verdun.

Gen. Brussiloff's main efforts are

Interesting Baking Demonstration

The interest is increasing in the free demonstration of Egg-o Baking Powder, which are being given at P. Connal & Son's grocery, 392 George Street. Mrs. Greer, the intelligent demonstrator, has a happy faculty of showing the merits of this new household help. She gives lucid lessons, free, daily, in the making of bread, biscuits, and cake; and the products of her deft manipulation has earned praise from the lady spectators. Every afternoon, at 4 o'clock hot biscuits are made.

WORLD WAR.

We have been accustomed to speaking of this world war, an expression figuratively appropriate, but not quite literally. If the South American people get into the promised "scrap" in Mexico, it will be literally applicable; then every continent in the world except Australia will be in the war; it will be indeed world wide. And even Australia has been in the ring. At the beginning of the war she had some lively fighting in her waters, enough to give her a big measure of glory—to emphasize her fighting quality as well as demonstrate her spirit of imperialism and her sense of responsibility in respect of her place in the imperial family, by providing an efficient navy of her own, built in her own yards.

WANTS TO KNOW.

We are informed that Capt. J. H. Burnham is wondering "why Peterborough is not sending along men to raise the 93rd battalion to full strength." He might apply to head quarters for the facts that may allay his wonderment. Recruiting that depends upon the patriotism of private enterprise without official encouragement or backing, cannot be expected to maintain its initial rate in the face of comparative exhaustion of willing material. If the government refuses to take measures to establish recruiting upon a basis of system founded upon an exact knowledge of available recruiting material, it cannot expect the aimless appeal of abstract wonderment can have any tangible results. If recruiting is not as rapid as possible in Peterborough, it is not due to local causes, for there is a pause in other places and all over the country. The condition is general and it is reasonable to assume that the cause is general—the failure of the authorities to apply a general remedy such as thoughtful men who have had experience in recruiting and in their patriotic efforts have pretty well exhausted the resources of spontaneous volunteerism consider necessary.

WAR RUMOURS.

The Scriptures declare that there shall be wars and rumours of wars. War, itself, is bad, but the rumours of idle tongues, moved by senseless brains and conscienceless hearts, can, for the moment, be the cause of as much uneasiness and heart-breaking suspense as the official reports of bloody doings. On Sunday, a wild and baseless—and base—rumour was circulated in Toronto, which grew with every telling, till it had the number of Canadians "gassed" or made prisoners by Germans, increased from 15,000 to 35,000. What is more remarkable is that it appears one minister, from his pulpit, dealt with the rumours, and gave them a new life centre of propagation and exaggeration proportional to the numerical size of his congregation. The toll is ghastly enough as to the ravages of this terrible war, and the unthinking reprobates that originate such rumours cannot be classified except by themselves. The wives and mothers of Canada have enough suffering of mind, enough agony of suspense, enough heart-breaks over true news of happenings to their dear ones without the gratuitously cruel suffering from false rumours. We can't always believe all we read in the papers about the war and war happenings. The newspapers can only print what news they receive. But, in the main, the newspapers are to be depended upon; and the baseless Sunday rumour is the only one that flourishes beyond the next edition of the newspapers. The week day rumours are nipped in the bud by prompt and, if necessary, "extra," denial. In such condition Sunday newspapers would fill a useful place. We might keep a more level poise in relation to the acceptance of war news if we trained ourselves to sift the false, the palpably false, from the true, or probably true, versions of events, and were less hysterical and excitable. It is a pretty safe rule in appraising the value of our news, to consider its source. We have found that we can nearly always depend upon news bearing the official imprimatur of the Allied powers. We have found that they have been generally reliable; that they have not concealed bad news, nor unduly magnified good news. We have also learned to distrust nearly all the news proceeding from Teutonic or Turkish sources. They have almost invariably proved false. The reason for this difference is that the Allied powers apply to their news announcements the principles of honesty, good faith and national veracity, for which they are fighting. The Teutonic powers infuse into their news reports the same spirit of unfaith and false honour that have marked their diplomacy, their international relations, and their conduct of war. The people should, as far as possible, maintain a calm attitude, and school themselves, as far as possible, to patience, and to refuse to be excited over mere rumours that are not supported by a semblance of responsible or reliable authority.

CANADA CAN.

The Government is to be entirely commended for, if the report is correct, establishing a factory for the manufacture of artificial limbs for our soldiers who have, or shall have, lost one or more of their members in fighting for us. We could not do less, and be even decently recognizan of the services our soldiers have rendered. The best, and the most we can do, for our soldiers partially disabled, falls far short of their deserts, and is a poor compensation for the individual losses sustained—the sacrifices made. Not only has the Government done the right thing, or taken the direction of doing the right thing, for our soldiers, but has practically demonstrated its faith in the capability of Canada's industrial skill and resources. If we can make arms to destroy arms and legs we can surely make artificial arms to replace the limbs lost in war. This should be a lesson to the Government that it might enlarge its faith in Canadian skill, Canada's resources, and Canada's capability generally. If we can make those complicated and wonderful artificial limbs that can almost perform the functions of the original limbs they replace, we can do simpler things. It certainly requires more mechanical skill, more delicate adjustment in making an almost human artificial limb than building a simple thing like a warship. If we can make Ross rifles, the best arms of the kind in the world if Sir Sim says, we can certainly build warships, and merchant ships. We have shown that we can refine zinc and copper ores, and it follows that we can refine our nickel ores in this country. We only need Government leading and Government encouragement to take our place as splendidly in self-development, in development of our industrial, commercial, and natural resources, generally, as we have done in defending the Empire, and adding a brighter blason to the name of Canada in the eyes of the Empire and of the world. What our soldiers have done in the fields of war our Canadian people can do in the fields of industrial and commercial enterpdise. Our Government has done wonders in equipping and preparing our military forces for splendid achievements. If the Government took an energetic action in mobilizing and equipping the industrial forces and developing the natural resources of Canada, we would not only be making artificial arms and legs, rifles and shells, but we should be building navies, building merchant ships, and refining all our metallic ores in Canada. We should bank and build upon Canada's ability to rank with the best fighters in the world, and regard it as an inspiration to take our place industrially, commercially and in every other way in the front rank, alongside the most progressive nations of the world. Canada can, should be our watchword, much more in keeping with our resources and the spirit of our people, than "Canada "can't"—say, "build warships in fifty years."

True Significance Of Verdun Situation

The London Spectator, one of the exceptionally intelligent and well-informed journals of the world, has rendered the Allied cause good service by a timely article explanatory of Germany's purpose in her persistent attacks on the "fortress' of Verdun. On what the Romans would have called the "lucus a non lucendo" principle, it is called a "fostress" because it is not a fortress, has a series of strong places, skilfully entrenched and pepper-boxed all over a mountainous landscape, which includes the site and environment of a small and now abandoned city: Verdun. As The Spectator, propounding the only reasonable attitude for the British people to assume, says:

"We British must console ourselves with the thought that our time is coming, and that the longer the battle of Verdun goes on the more worn out the German forces will be and the less great will be their power of resistance when our opportunity arrives. People who take short, superficial, and unsound views of war may talk about our supineness. Anyone who has a military instinct, or even a few grains of common-sense, will understand that by refusing to allow plans that have taken months to mature to be thrown over in a moment of generous exaltation we are causing the most deadly anxiety to the German General Staff. Our imperturbability may well prove their sentence of death."

The Spectator raises and answers the question, What would happen if "Verdun were to fall" into the hands of the Germans? The answer is: "The Germans would gain nothing, because they would not have upset the battle plans of the Allies." It should never be forgotten that those plans govern the movements of all the military commanders: Generals Joffre, Haig and Cadorna in the west and south; Generals Sarrail, the Grand Duke Constantine, and General Lake on both sides of Constantinople, and the Russian Generals on the east front from Riga to the Carpathians. "Verdun is not the real German objective. . . . The blows of the Germans there are intended to prevent the development of a great attack by the Allies. They hope, by pressing the French hard at Verdun, to force the Allies to do the very thing the British people are being urged to do by the unthinking impulse of the moment; they want to compel us, and the French also, to throw our whole line into confusion, to alter our battle plans, to give up all our carefully-thought-out enterprises, in order to send divisions and corps pell-mell to the assistance of troops now engaged at Verdun. It is safer to leave the details of the co-operative plan to the Military Council in Paris and the fighting commanders in the various fields.—The Globe.

214 INCHES OF NEW SKIN.

Eight-Year Old Girl Recovers From Burns After Two Years.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Pearl Guerin, 8 years old, went home to 87 Garfield Place, Brooklyn, yesterday well and happy after two years and three weeks in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital.

In that time 214 square inches of skin had been grafted on her body to replace that lost when she was burned in a bonfire. Mrs. Guerin, Pearl's mother, was operated on five times and gave 186 inches of skin. The father was operated on several times and gave the rest.

For more than a year the child was compelled to lie face down on her cot with a wire frame holding the bed clothes from her body.

GERMAN JUNK EXPEDIENTS TO OVERCOME SHORTAGE OF MATERIAL FOR MUNITIONS

Some New York bankers have just arranged to give Russia a credit of 50 million dollars to be expended in the United States for war materials. It sounds a lot of money, but it is not enough to pay for two days' shipments to Europe of war materials from the port of New York. One day lately the record of shipments of war supplies was broken at New York, and the supplies sent out on that day amounted to 27 million dollars. No wonder some good Americans find their sleep disturbed by dreams of an untimely peace. That the Mexican war, if it comes about, will seriously affect this huge business with Europe, is not to be feared. All the war material the United States army could use would be but a drop in the bucket compared with the European consumption.

It is only one step from the sublime to the ridiculous. We are constantly being told of the abundance of lead and the substitutes for copper in Germany, but a recent memorandum issued from the German General Headquarters suggests that the Huns are getting short not only of lead and copper, but of money to buy them with. The order reads: "Troops, when moving to the rear from trenches" (it seems that occasionally the German troops do advance to the rear) "are directed to be in extended order and to search as they walk for French rifle bullets, which being made of a copper alloy, are of special value to the German munition factories." The spectacle of ten thousand be-spectacled Boches running for their lives, but stopping every now and then to pick up French bullets from the grass, must be a sight for the gods. To compensate them for any risk that they run in stooping to gather bullets as they would pick daisies, they are to receive a reward of ten pfennings for each two pounds of spent French bullets thus gathered. The order says: "When one considers the tons of bullets fired every day from the French lines there is money to be earned by their recovery." Yes, but not very much money, and very much earned.

The pfenning is the one hundredth part of a German mark, which in the piping times of peace is worth an English shilling. What a mark is worth today, or whether it is worth anything above the price of silver, not even Berlin knows. But taking the mark at its face value the Boche who runs the risk of a bullet or two planted in his rear anatomy as he stoops to gather bullets from the grass, can earn two and a half cents by picking up and taking into camp two pounds of French bullets. Now, the question naturally arises, when a surgeon extracts a bullet from a German's anatomy will the bullet belong to the soldier who recovered the bullet from the grass or to the doctor who recovered it from the Boche who brought it in?

The memorandum also embodies the liberal offer of five pfennings for each body of a French 75 MM. shell recovered. It adds the explanation: "The greatest prizes for the German soldiers are the bases of the big English and French shells with their thick copper bands, the rewards for such being computed by weight." The German soldiers will not get beastly rich by this kind of prospecting. Colonel Allison made his money more easily, and more of it.—Montreal Herald.

WOOL COMBERS' STRIKE.

15,000 Textile Workers Around Bradford Are Idle.

Bradford, Eng., June 27.—The wool combers' strike now in progress affects 15,000 textile workers and is drawing in other industries, with resultant idleness on the part of hundreds of other workers. There is talk of Government intervention. Some of the leaders of the union condemn the strike. No strike pay has been issued.

The Employers' Federation has sent out a statement to the effect that the employers offered four shillings of the five shillings advance demanded, and also made an offer of arbitration. But these offers were rejected by a meeting attended by less than one-third of the operatives.

JUDGE HUYCKE ATTENDED FUNERAL OF C. C. JAMES

THE OBSEQUIES AT COBOURG

COBOURG, June 27.—The funeral of the late C. C. James, C.M.G., took place here yesterday. The services were conducted by Rev. A. H. Reynar, M.A., LL.D. The pall-bearers were Lieut. W. C. James, son of deceased; W. J. Crossen, Cobourg, owner of the Crossen Car Works, Mr. Justice Riddell, Rev. Dr. R. N. Burns, Toronto, R. J. Smith, Montreal, brother-in-law, and W. R. McDonald. Some twenty or thirty personal friends from Toronto came down also with the relatives, and many prominent citizens of Cobourg were at the depot to pay a last tribute of respect to one who was very highly esteemed here, where he received his early college education at old Victoria University. Among those present were Judge Huycke, Peterborough, a member of Dr. James' graduating class, Dr. L. E. Horning, Rev. S. J. Shorey, D.D. Methodist clergyman, Port Hope, Dr. Geo. C. Creelman, J. Lockie Wilson, representing the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Prof. Laing and Prof. Robertson, representing Victoria University, and others. Interment was in the family plot here.

MUSICAL ECKARDTS AND VAUDEVILLE CO.

Will Appear at "The Grand" on the Holiday

The management of "The Grand" beg to announce that they have made arrangements for the appearance here on Saturday, July 1, matinee and evening, of the Musical Eckhardts and a number of high-class Vaudeville Acts, including Dot Beatty, Dot Buhl, G. C. Eckhardt, comedian, and Master Teddy Boyl, known as the boy with the man's voice. Patrons are assured of a very pleasing entertainment and the management have arranged a very moderate scale of prices which should appeal to the theatre-going public. For the matinee, adults 20c, children 10c. Evening, (all seats reserved), 25c.; gallery 10c. The Musical Eckardts are very clever performers on a wonderful collection of varied instruments, while the other performers are entirely different from those artists usually seen in the cheap vaudeville houses. The seat sale for the evening performance will open at the Box Office, Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

WOMEN'S FEET NOW ATTRACTION

"BOB" JONES, EVANGELIST, TELLS OF SNARES SET ALONG BROADWAY BY SHORT SKIRTS.

NEW YORK, June 27.—"Up to the present attention usually was attracted to a woman's head, but now it is attracted to her feet," said the Rev. "Bob" Jones, the evangelist, in a sermon in the Madison Avenue Baptist Church.

"You can't walk up Broadway tonight without realising there is something wrong with the women. It is not that they cannot vote. I might say in passing that I do not mind their having the ballot." Mr. Jones implied the present thing "wrong" was the shortness of women's dresses and the conspicuous shoes they wear.

"The great problem of this country in the future is not going to be the liquor traffic. The fight is going to be for personal purity. The women to a great extent are responsible for the base human natures of men. And God will hold the women responsible at His judgment bar.

"The problem of Christian work is becoming more and more the problem of women. I believe if you were to interview the evangelists in America they would tell you, as I tell you, that the big percentage of their converts to-day are men. Until recently it was easier to get a woman converted."

Mr. Jones said women of this country were "looking for something exciting" all the time. He said there were "ten thousand hells in New York City."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By John W. S. McCullough, M.D., D.P.H., Chief Officer of the Provincial Board of Health

Now and again the writer proposes to talk about sickness in the baby. What we will say will be reliable and as simple as we can make it.

COMMUNICABLE DISEASE.

A sick baby, even a fussy one, who may just be beginning to be sick should be kept in bed. Don't hold him, and, above all, don't rock him. The quieter he is kept the better. Keep out visitors and the rest of the family except the mother and the nurse. One cannot tell at first what sickness may be coming on. It may be measles, diphtheria, scarlet fever, or something "catching." If it turns out to be of this nature it is just as well to have no more than one sick at a time, and no mother wants to spread disease among her neighbour's children. That is why when contagious disease breaks out in a house the health officer sticks a card on your door. It is not to condemn you, but to prevent trouble in your neighbour's family. If the doctor wanted to get more practice he would let you spread measles, mumps, smallpox, and other contagious ills all you liked. Keep the window open. The room should not be at a temperature of 80 deg. F Keep a thermometer in the room and have the temperature at about 65 deg. F. If the wind blows in too strong have a screen between the window and the bed.

Keep a record of what is happening, so that you can show it to the doctor when he comes, and thus be able to advise him at once of the baby's temperature — if you know how to use a thermometer — the number and character of the movements. (Save them for the doctor to see. Save a specimen of urine and be able to tell the doctor the quantity passed. Keep a record of food taken—amount and kind, the amount of water taken, the number of hours of sleep, the presence or absence of restlessness, crying, pain, coughing, also baby's colour and general appearance.

When the doctor gives his orders write them down and carry them out. When the baby begins to get well don't be in too big a hurry to put him on full diet, and don't be in a hurry to consider him well: let him take his time in convalescing.

TEMPERATURE.

The temperature of a well baby ranges from 98 to 99½ deg. F If it goes to 101 deg. F. get a doctor. The temperature should be taken in the rectum. It cannot be taken properly under the arm, and of course cannot be taken in the mouth. See that the index is shaken down, smear the thermometer with vaseline and gently insert it into the rectum for about an inch and leave it there for one minute. Mark down the height recorded.

CROUP.

Croup is one of the commonest of children's affections. Some children are very subject to this complaint. It seems to be provoked by the cold raw winds of fall or spring, and is often alarming to the mother. The affection, however, is not dangerous. It is a spasmodic condition of the larynx, coming on during the night with a characteristic harsh, metalic cough and difficulty in breathing. The face will in some cases turn a dusky blue colour. In severe cases it is best to produce vomiting, and this may be done by giving a teaspoonful of wine or syrup of ipecac. In moderate cases five or ten drops may be given every fifteen minutes. The inhalation of steam is very useful.

MEMBRANOUS CROUP.

There is another and severe form of croup known as membranous croup. This is a dangerous disease, as it is really diphtheria of the larynx. There is cough, difficulty of breathing, and a rise of temperature. Don't fool with a case of this kind. Secure a doctor at once and have a good dose of diphtheria anti-toxin used. There is no excuse for a child dying of this disease if it is recognized early and plenty of anti-toxin administered without delay. This costs nothing. The Provincial Board of Health supplies it free to the public.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Whooping Cough is another disease in which spasms of coughing is the main symptom. The whoop may not come on for a few days. This is a curious sound something like the "coo" of a pigeon, occurring at the end of a spasm of coughing. It is a contagious disease, and may last for several weeks. People are liable to regard this disease too lightly. It kills a great many fine children every year. Keep the sick child away from others.

GRAND OFFENSIVE NEAR AT HAND

now being devoted to overthrowing the Germans in their positions. He has brought his batteries which routed the Austrians to bear here. And despite six German assaults over a two-mile front yesterday he has not only held his own, but succeeded in pushing a wedge so far in the German line as to menace Brody.

The semi-official Paris Temps voices the view that the allies' offensive is at hand. Its military expert, regarded as one of the most competent in Europe, declares that "the hour of action for the allies is here. Attack succeeds defence on many fronts." It sees special significance in the visit of Premier Briand to the headquarters of Sir Douglas Haig, the British commander, on Saturday and Sunday.

THE SUPPOSED PLAN

The allies' plan, as it is understood here by military men is not for any combined assault on all fronts at once. Instead, they are perfectly content to allow events to take their course, and as weak links in the Teuton defence disclose themselves, strike with overwhelming might. This strategy was agreed upon at the allied conference in Paris and was subsequently developed in greater detail by General Joffre in his recent conferences here with Sir William Robertson, British Chief of Staff.

To aid in co-ordinating it with Russian plans is believed to have been the mission of Lord Kitchener when he lost his life in the sinking of the Hampshire while on his way to Petrograd.

The weakening of the Austrian lines in Galicia for their assault in the Trentino gave the Russians the first opportunity of taking the offensive. With their success here, the Teutons were forced to withdraw troops from the Italian and West fronts. Now the Italians, in turn, have resumed the attack.

The Germans have been slower in withdrawing men from the French front because they knew of the formidable massing of troops that has been going on behind the Anglo-French lines. In fact military observers declare that the Verdun assault has been prolonged in order to forestall any allied offensive. Against the British portion of the front alone it is estimated that the Germans have maintained in reserve no less than 700,000 men.

That these at last are being withdrawn, either to throw into the final effort on the Meuse or to stay the Russian drive, seems to be the meaning of the "important battles" which Berlin records as developing on that front.

CUT DOWN GAS AND ELECTRIC BILL

Some Practical Suggestions For Housekeepers Who Would Save Money

Some Practical Suggestions for Housekeeper Who Would Save Money.

How to reduce the bills for lighting and heating is a question in which everybody is interested. Here are several ways by which a considerable saving may be effected.

For instance, a change that will cut down your electric lighting bill two-thirds is to replace all carbon filament lamps with tungsten bulbs. The latter take one-third as much electricity to produce the same amount of light.

For the sake of the eyes be sure that the light is properly shaded and there is no glare. A frosted bulb diminished the luminous intensity, diffuses the light better, and gives a better lighted room.

For lights that burn all night, such as those in the hall and bathroom, use a hylo lamp or attach a socket dimming device.

When using such appliances as electric irons, coffee percolators, etc., proper management will show a big saving in the electric bill. As a rule, an efficient electric iron need not be "on" for over half the of the time it is in use. After it is once heated very hot disconnect the cord and continue ironing until it has cooled down too low for further work. Then connect the cord and heat very hot again. Following this procedure will give satisfactory service at highest economy. With other appliances disconnecting the cord before finishing with the device will save current and yet not affect the work, as usually there is enough stored heat to produce the desired results.

Reducing Gas Bill.

Reducing the gas bills depends almost entirely upon the individual, as there are very few devices that automatically save gas. Most gas appliances mainly require intelligent management, will prove gas-savers.

A heat distributer replaces the usual grates of a gas range and gives the top the appearance of the coal stove with its lids. This device gives the range a broad, flat, sanitary cooking surface, increases the cooking capacity and saves gas by making it possible to cook two or more articles by one burner, as the heat is deflected backward, so that the rear of the top is also heated and cooking can be done on it.

In the use of gas it is important to have proper combustion. Incomplete combustion is not only a waste of money, but a menace to health—even to life. Connecting the gas range to a flue is a good method of carrying off unburned gases, but it is less essential if the gas is burned with just the proper quantity of air. The air is admitted by means of a small regulator at the base of each burner. When the proper mixture is obtained the flame will be blue, with a bluish green inner cone of sharply defined outline. Attention to obtaining proper combustion is a wise precaution and also an economy, as unburned gas is an absolute loss.

Learn to read your gas and electric meters. The company representative will instruct you in this matter. It is simple and useful knowledge that enables you to check up your monthly bill and see how much electricity your electric iorn takes or how much gas your oven consumes by reading the meter before and after using.

LANCE CORPORAL ARTHUR (Archie) DE LA PLANTE.

GUNNER GODFREY DE LA PLANTE.

LANCE-CORPORAL ARTHUR DE LA PLANTE, recently promoted from private, came through the battle of Hooge unharmed. GUNNER GODFREY DE LA PLANTE, not yet eighteen, of the 33rd Battery, searched the C.M.R. billets when the remnants returned from the front trenches, found his brother, and both had a happy reunion. These boys are the sons of Mr. Ernest de La Plante, Westcott street.

KICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

"THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Thrilling Picture Will Be Shown Again To-night—What It Means To Be Under the Iron Heel of An Invader.

WHAT BELGIUM SUFFERED

A striking lesson in respect to preparedness is represented in the nine reel war picture that was shown at the Grand Opera House last evening. This is one of the most thrilling and realistic war dramas ever produced. It will be shown at the Grand to-night and to-morrow night with matinees each afternoon.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" depicts as nothing else can the stern necessity for preparedness and a stern resolve to defend our homes and ourselves. The picture is wonderfully accurate as to detail and realistic enough for the most exacting. It not only shows the danger of enemy aggression but displays in unmistakable words, that would transpire if a superior enemy ever got to the shores of Canada or the United States.

The picture opens with a pictoral presentation of Hudson Maxim's latest work on preparedness and carried the audience right through to a point where an armed force succeeds in gaining a foothold in the United States. New York City is the first city to capitulate and is followed by a number of others that form the solar plexus of the Republic. Large indemnities are levied and the country speedily passes from a stage of peaceful tranquility to that of inevitable submission to a superior force. This result is first accomplished by an enemy fleet which appears on the horizon beyond the range of the coast defence guns and proceeds to level the skyline of New York City.

The picture is one of the best that has ever been produced of its kind. It is full of thrills and teaches a wonderful lesson in present day methods of conducting an invasion.

Came Through Battle of Hooge Without A Scratch

Lance-Corporal Arthur (Archie) LaPlante Says It Was a Desperate Engagement—His Brother Joined Him When 8th C.M.R. Remnants Returned to Billets

Mr. Ernest La Plante, 287 Westcott street, has received word from his son Lance Corporal Arthur LaPlante of the 8th C.M.R. that he came through the recent engagement around Hooge without a scratch.

After the remnant of the 8th returned to billets Lance Corporal LaPlante was met by his brother Gunner Godfrey LaPlante of the 33rd Battery who was anxiously trying to locate him. The latter boy is not yet eighteen years old.

The letter follows:

Somewhere in France.
June 8th, 1916.

Dear Father and Sister,—Now that my nerves are settled down I thought it time to write and let you know I came through the big battle safe and sound without a scratch. If I was allowed to tell you all that occurred it would open your eyes. The pitiful sights I saw. I am very thankful to God for my safety through it all. Poor little Godfrey was down to my billets the day after I came back from the front line to see if I came through safely. We had a big shake-hands over it. He said he worried over it until he came down and saw that I was safe. Believe me I was thinking about him for fear he had to get out with the drivers because it's awful dangerous drawing ammunition under heavy shell fire. They say Fritz threw three times as many shells in this battle as he did in the battle of Ypres a year ago. Oh, it was something desperate. I don't know how a man could ever live through it. I think my prayers helped me a lot. We are out now for a month or more to get reorganized and that will take some time you know. I think after coming through that battle alive, I can go through almost anything. I received that parcel O.K. the morning I came down from the trenches and halved it with Godfrey. Everything is going along fine just now. I was a little shaken up and sore but now I feel fit and ready for another battle but I hope there's no more like the last one I came through. Well, I must close hoping to hear from you all soon and I will write again when I go to England on pass. Our officers said that every man that came through it must have a pass. That's a little bit of alright, eh?

Your loving son and brother.
ARTHUR.

SUMMER CAMP HAS BEEN CANCELLED

The Y.M.C.A. boys' camp, which was to be held at Sandy Point, Clear Lake, has been cancelled for this year. The continued wet weather has made it impossible to conduct a camp for a period of two weeks on account of the dampness of the ground. It is the intention of the 'Y' to conduct a local camp where the boys can spend a short time under canvas and have all the joys of a regular camp.

All that will be required of the boys will be for them to provide their own food, the Y.M.C.A. will provide the equipment and supervision. It is likely that the camp will be situated on the canal, about three miles from the city. The boys can receive all information about the camp from the Boys' Secretary's office.

The Boy Scouts of the Salvation Army had an enjoyable time in the 'Y' gymnasium on Monday evening. This is a fine troop of manly boys, and if they keep up their physical work in the 'Gym' they will soon develop into a fine specimen of Canadian manhood.

PORT HOPE'S BIG DAY

Port Hope will observe the 49th anniversary of Dominion Day by a monster celebration on July 1st. A feature of the attraction will be the presentation of the colours to the 136th Battalion by Col. Hughes of Toronto. The afternoon programme will consist of horse races, baseball tournament, acts by four of the greatest lady acrobats on the continent, wrestling matches and all kinds of athletic sports. In the evening there will be a band concert, acrobatic stunts and a regular Vaudeville entertainment. Two bands numbering seventy-five pieces will furnish music during the day. Special, after evening performance, leaving at 10.30, for Peterborough.

EIGHTY CONFIRMED AT ST. MARY'S CHURCH, LINDSAY

Address By His Lordship Bishop O'Brien—His Lordship Spoke Upon the Necessity of More Young Men Joining the Church

LINDSAY, June 27.—His Lordship Bishop O'Brien of Peterborough, administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to about sixty children and twenty adult members of St. Mary's Church Sunday afternoon, commencing at 3 o'clock. His Lordship paid high tribute to Monsignor Casey, the Sisters of St. Joseph's Convent and the teachers of the Lindsay Separate School for the manner in which the children were drilled in the Christian doctrine and their cleverness in answering many questions whith he propounded to them pervious to the receiving of the sacrament. "Their replies," said his Lordship, "would do credit to a theologian."

The acts of consecration were read for the boys by Master Baker, and for the girls by Miss Cote. The renewing of their baptismal vows and the customary pledges were taken by the children, to abstain from intoxicating beverages and follow a true Christian life.

Bishop O'Brien afterwards spoke to the congregation, delivering a magnificent address on the religions of the present day, and the necessity of more young men joining the church to assist in the labours for the promulgation of the doctrines of Christ and His apostles.

The beautiful ceremony concluded with benediction of the blessed sacrament.

The Sisters of St. Joseph's Academy and the young lady graduates furnished the choir music.

Chaplain Riddiford Closes Pastorate At Egerton St. Church

Nine Baptist Pastors Now in Training in London

ISSUE MUST BE FACED

ALL SHOULD DO EVERYTHING POSSIBLE TO AID EMPIRE IN CRISIS, SAYS FORMER PASTOR.

LONDON, June 27.—"My last words to you are: Get in union with God by accepting Jesus Christ," said Rev. W. C. Riddiford, chaplain of London's Own Battalion and pastor of the Egerton Street Church, in his farewell sermon to the congregation on Sunday night.

The preacher took as his topic "Union With God." He told of an argument he had heard as he passed between the lines at the camp on Carling Heights. It was whether prayer or powder would win the present war. By his sermon he showed that a union is heeded before this would be accomplished. "All of us," he said, "are either union or non-union men. If we are non-union it is because we disobey the commands of God."

TWO GREAT QUESTIONS.

"Every nation now," he said, "is facing the question, 'Are we right?' Every individual is trying to answer the questions, 'What is my relation to God?' and, 'What is my relation in this great struggle?' Christ is the way," he said.

"The other question is for you to reply to. I have answered it, and I do not regret my decision. I am a pastor no longer, but a plain man in the King's uniform, and I believe the time is not far distant when every man, woman and child will have to offer his services. Then there will be only two classes—those who have been accepted for service, and those who are ineligible."

He referred to the way in which the Baptist denomination had answered the call. "There are now nine Baptist pastors in the various training camps in London," he said. "The men who are in the trenches are men who have given up all thought of self and though they may not all be Christians, they are fighting in a righteous cause," he continued.

FACE THE ISSUE.

"I believe in peace. I pray for peace, but it must come by powder. let us face the issue bravely. What we need is powder plus prayer plus men." He made reference to a movment which was recently started in Scotland to cease the manufacture of munitions and war supplies for twelve hours while the workers prayed.

"Prayer for peace that would stop for one minute the manufacture of munitions or take one man away from the work would be sheer mockery," he said. 'Prayer will win, but we must get common sense coupled with the power of prayer.

"The great opportunity of the church is to-day. The religion of the men in the trenches is the religion that is brave enough to stand out for itself and help men to do brave deeds. They have caught a glimpse of the new democracy through their suffering, and a new religion is coming to us. Through prayer we will get power through power progress, and through progress eternal glory hereafter."

Toronto Has Sent 50,000

Mayor Church Shows Col. Williams' Figures to Be Incorrect

TORONTO, June 27.—Mayor Church takes exception very decidedly to the figures given by Lieut.-Col. G. H. Williams as to the number of recruits from Toronto. The chief recruiting officer put this city's contribution to the forces at 28,499. Mayor Church points out that the city has insured 36,468 at $1,000 each, which is 8,000 above Col. Williams' count, and his Worship estimates that the total of men from Toronto reaches 50,000.

Col. Williams makes no allowance for the reservists who left Toronto to go overseas, or of the 4,000 Italians reservists who were citizens of Toronto, or of the men who left Toronto to join outside units, says the Mayor.

He points out that men went from Toronto to many other towns and cities including Ottawa and Montreal.

It is evident also that the hundreds of young men who have joined the aviation service are not included in the 28,499 figure.

"Lieut.-Col. Williams' statement does not give Toronto credit for what it has done, and it hurts recruiting. I think it would pay the city to have a staff of clerks go down to Ottawa, if we could get permission to go over the books there, and pick out the Toronto names from the attestation records. I will suggest that to the Board of Control. Some time ago I tried to get a return from the House showing the Toronto men according to the attestation papers, but it was not given."

Had Relatives In Peterboro'

Nephew of Peterboro' Lady Died as Result of Wounds Received in Action

Official notification has been received by Mr. R. J. Blackhall, 171 St. Clair Avenue, East, Toronto, that his brother, Pte. Jos. Blackhall, who was serving with a Toronto battalion, has died of wounds received in action on June 14th. He had been in every engagement with the 1st Division, and shortly after the Battle of St. Julian wrote a very interesting descriptive account of the German onslaught. He had the warmest praise for his company officer, Captain Munts, who also died of wounds.

The late Pte. Blackhall enlisted in August, 1914, in the Queen's Own Rifles, together with his father, J. P. Blackhall, and a brother, Charles. Two other brothers, Victor and Thomas, are in training, the latter with the 127th Battalion, and the other with the 208th Irish-Canadian Battalion.

Private Blackhall was a nephew of Mrs. J. A. Sharp, 537 Homewood Avenue.

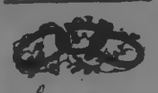
GEE DOCK GOT A LIVELY WELCOME IN THE RESORT

MONTREAL, June 27.—Gee Dock, a Chinaman, was badly beaten up by his fellow countrymen, who do not approve of his activities for the police. He is now at the General Hospital with several ribs broken, and suffering from a terrible mauling at the hands of a gang of Chinamen in the basement of a resort on Lagauchetiere street west. One of the wildest sights that Chinatown has had for years followed the appearance at the resort of Gee Dock and Chung Dock, with whom the Chinamen had a wordy combat in the Recorder's Court.

Gee Dock visited the resort, accompanied by Chung Dock, court house interpreter. Their appearance was the signal for a combined attack by the Chinamen present, who proceeded to do up the pair. Chairs, clubs and hatches were used until Gee Dock went down and out under a fusilade of blows.

Chung Dock escaped from the gang and notified the police. On his return he found that the inmates had fled, leaving his friend half unconscious on he stairs. The arrival of a patrol wagon found the two peaceful Chinese in possession of the building with not an assailant in sight. The victim gave a number of names to the police and arrests are expected to follow to-day. Gee Dock was a little better this morning though badly bruised about the head.



All members of Hiawatha Encampment No 66 I.O.O.F. are earnestly asked to attend the regular meeting Wednesday June 28th 1916, at 8 o'clock sharp. Important business.

Bad Associates To Blame
Russian War Minister's Ruin

LONDON, June 26.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Telegraph writes his paper as follows:

Persons well acquainted with the circle of friends and acquaintances in which the ex-Minister for War, General Sukhomlinoff, spent his leisure time, have furnished the great Moscow paper, the Russkoe Slovo, with some interesting particulars of the circumstances which led up to his arrest. Their account of the affair is prefaced by an acknowledgment of his usual military gifts, but it is added that he allowed himself to be influenced by people of the adventurer type, and that this was eventually his undoing. By degrees the unscrupulous gang who had surrounded him got him so completely into their clutches that escape was practically impossible.

STOLYPIN'S MURDERER

While still at Kieff, it is alleged, General Sukhomlinoff was very intimate with Kuliabko, Bogroff (the murderer of Stolypinn), and Myasoedoff (Russian plans to Germany), and all three frequented his salon. That it was Kulibko who gave Bogroff access to the theatre on the night of his crime was already generally known, but it is now stated that the murderer would never have been able to approach his victim if it had not been for the privileges he enjoyed as a friend of Sukhomlinoff.

When Sukhomlinoff moved to Petrograd, and took over the post of Minister of War, he was followed by the majority of his Kieff satellites. Among them was Myasoedoff. It is admitted that the ex-Minister for War probably had no linking of the true character of this double-dyed traitor. If he had had, it would probably have been all the better, for he appears to have reposed the greatest confidence in Myasoedoff and to have communicated to him not only all his private family news, but also many of the secrets of the department he was administering.

A DRAG ON PREPARATION

On the other hand, according to this account, a very considerable share of the responsibility for Russia's unpreparedness for war rests upon Sukhomlinoff, and on him alone. While Germany, from the very commencement of the campaign, took energetic steps to mobilise all the forces of the country, in Russia, on the other hand, not only was nothing whatever done in this direction, but the Minister for War promptly suppressed by force all attempts to raise the question of the desirability of taking action of such a kind. It is further laid to Sukhomlinoff's charge that, without consulting any of his official coadjutors, he formulated and put into execution a faulty scheme of defence, which involved the abandonment of the Polish fortresses. It is suggested that though this grave strategic change was made without the advice of his proper and responsible adviser sit was in all probability discussed in the domestic circle, and in that event, was no doubt, to some extent influenced by the arch-betrayer Myasoedoff.

OWN VIEW ON MUNITIONS

It is further stated that the persistency with which Sukhomlinoff "rattled the sabre" in the period before the war, and the constant assurances he gave of Russia's readiness to fight, had a particularly mischievous effect; for they inspired an unfounded feeling of confidence amongst the public which it took some time to shake, and thus prevented the prompt adoption of measures to rectify the consequences of his maladministration. As soon as the war had properly begun the Minister was deluged with appeals from the front for a more liberal supply of munitions. Such appeals are said to have reached him as early as August, 1914. Nevertheless, Sukhomlinoff obstinately refused to consider all the offers of war material which were made to him, either by foreign firms or by industrial enterprises in Russia. He adopted the standpoint that the manufacture of munitions was work which could only be undertaken by Government arsenals and replied to the petitions from the firing lines with the words: "Try to economise; the military works cannot make more."

WARNINGS UNHEEDED

Attempts were frequently made to enlighten the Minister as to the shady character of many of his associates, but he paid no heed whatever to these warnings. Indeed, he singled out those who gave them as his particular enemies, and treated them accordingly. Meanwhile possibly without exciting the least suspicion on his part, his home had become a sort of "general staff of the enemy's spy organisation." All the threads of German espionage in Russia thus came together in the very residence of the Russian Minister for War.

The conspirators, according to this account, made great use of Madame Sukhomlinoff, a young and very attractive woman, who gladly accepted the obeisances of the frequenters of her salon. It is said that more than once, when the General was beginning to feel dimly that the men with whom he had thrown in his lot were merely using him for their own purposes, and to chafe against their growing presumption, his wife stepped in as mediator and succeeded in restoring relations to their old footing. According to the account of the Russkoe Slovo, the character of eleven of the habitues of Sukhomlinoff's family circle has already been clearly established.

It is reported that ex-Minister for Justice (M. Schteglovitoff) and for the Interior (M. Maklakoff) are to be called as witnesses in the Sukhomlinoff affair. The inquiry into the administration of General A. A. Zuzmi-Karavaev, head of the artillery department, will, it is said, not be commenced until the preliminary investigation with regard to Sukhomlinoff has been concluded.

Some Hotelmen Say Wouldn't Return To Late Closing Hour

Hotelkeepers are reported to be more than satisfied with the 8 p.m. closing. It is doubtful if they would go back to the old conditions if they had the option for the principal reason that they are now able to have their evenings to themselves. The hotel premises are quieter during the last three hours in the day which used to be characterised by more or less noise and confusion even in the best conducted houses. While the bar patronage has been largely diminished in some cases, there is withal a steady business, fewer men becoming intoxicated, and if anything the bar has gained something of a respectability that could scarcely be said to have previously obtained. Now the bars are closed at eight and men who desire a mug or two of "here's looking at you", what ever that means, can get together, but within certain limits. The "won't go home till morning" idea has all but vanished. The old gang or what's left of it now turns homeward with the righteous, and the only nighthawks are the police, and they're paid for it. From all accounts the public is pleased with the eight o'clock closing, and if the hotelmen discover that it brings them certain satisfaction, the regulation takes on something of the quality of a community blessing for which every one might unite in being truly thankful.

Dog Barred From Hotel
Miss Hempel Goes Too

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 27.—Late last evening Miss Freda Hempel, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, arrived with the intention of remaining several weeks at the Griswold Hotel.

The German coloratura was on her way to the suite reserved for her when the eyes of H. D. Saxton, manager, fell on the German's little pet dog. It has a long pedigree, but under the rules of the hotel could not be admitted.

The star argued, but the manager could not be moved, so her automobile was ordered, maid and luggage gathered in and the party moved on across the river to the Mohican, where special privileges are granted to canine pets.

Miss Hemple's love for dogs has long been well known. When she first came to the Metropolitan from Germany she brought a fox terrier and an Irish terrier. The animal did not thrive in New York and a few months later she sent both back home. The following season she brought only the Irish terrier. The other left alone, died and the day the singer heard of its death the pet she had with her in New York died, too. For weeks the singer sang with a heavy heart. Now that she has a new pet she doesn't intend to be separated from it because of any hotel manager—not much.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt
Donates an Ambulance Train

Field Headquarters, Peekskill, N. Y., June 27.—Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Vanderbilt, of the Inspector General's Department, has given to the New York division of the National Guard a motor ambulance train, according to an announcement made by Lieut.-Colonel Wm. S. Terriberry, Chief Surgeon of the division. No estimate of the value of the train was made by Col. Terriberry, but it is believed that it cost in the neighbourhood of $35,000.

Col. Terriberry said that he had been advised that Mrs. Vanderbilt was willing to give a certain sum for the aid of some branch of the division, and that as the ambulance corps was in need of vehicles it was decided to give one powerful tractor and six trailers, equipped with standard ambulance bodies. One of the trailers will be used for the transportation of supplies, and Col. Terriberry says that such a travelling hospital train will be able to perform a service equipment to half of a hospital unit. The train will have accommodations for about twenty-four men, reclining, or sixty in a sitting position.

Save Woman In Leap From Ship

YOUNG MOTHER JUMPS OVERBOARD FROM THE ANCON AFTER FAREWELL TO HER CHILD

NEW YORK, June 27.—A young woman jumped overboard from the steamship Ancon, of the Panama Railroad Steamship line, when the vessel was several hundred miles from New York on Saturday afternoon. The woman had been crooning to her baby a few moments before, and then, laying the child upon the deck and with the baby's bottle clasped in one hand she clambered across the railing and threw herself into the water.

Shrieks of other women who had spoken to her a short time before attracted the attention of the look-out on the bridge and the vessel was immediately stopped. A boat was lowered and the woman, unconscious, but still holding the baby bottle was taken aboard. She had been in the water nearly twenty minutes before she could be reached and taken into the boat. She was put into the ship's hospital.

Her name was withheld by the captain and other officials. All they would say was that the woman had been sent north by her husband from Panama for treatment in New York. Her husband is a United States employe in the Canal Zone.

A Letter From Pte. Jas. Wallace
Peterboro' Boy is Recovering From Wounds Received in Recent Battle

Mrs. J. Wallace, 717 Harvey street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Private Jas. Wallace, who, a short time ago, was officially reported wounded. The letter follows:

"Just a few lines to let you know I got my first pass in eight months, and Number 2B General Hospital is where I landed. We were in a pretty hot scrap and I got a piece of shrapnel in the right shoulder. Am doing fine and the doctor says he is going to remove the piece this afternoon. Cheer up, mother, I am safer here and this is the best bed I have had since I left Kingston. It is just like being at home. The nurses are all American girls, and certainly good to us. It seems funny to be in a real bed again and have real civilized girls attending you.

"I received your last letter. I had a card from Peter. He is in England and expects to visit Scotland. I haven't heard or seen anything of the Clarke boys yet." Kind regards.

Big Circus Coming Here
Coop and Lent's United Monster Shows to Visit Peterboro'

General Contracting Agent E. F. Lampman, of Coop and Lent's United Monster Shows, Three Ring Circus, Museum and Menagerie, visited the city Tuesday, accompanied by an assistant, to prospect local conditions at first hand for the initial appearance here of these monster shows.

Before leaving Mr. Lampman expressed his gratification in stating the information he had gathered pointed to a splendid reception for his exhibitions. It was his firm belief that not all the country's prosperity was confined to the big cities, and he was pleased to announce now, definitely, the big circus would spread its acres of canvas in Peterborough, July 20.

This bare announcement will hardly fail of bringing joy to the hearts of our kiddies and to some few of the grown-ups for the matter of that, for rare is the anti-circus home. And when the great magnitude of this important combination is considered—its trains are made up of special double length cars to the actual number of forty—it is safe to predict this will be the mecca for unusual circus crowds when the big show arrives.

"RULES"

Matches consist of two sets played by each team of doubles or four sets in all.

Players must be members of the church or some organization of the church for which they play.

No player may take part in more than 2 sets against any one club.

Games may be played on home or opponents courts as mutually arranged by each team. Games to be played on schedule date or before next schedule game.

G. H. Roper, chairman Tournament Committee. E. Walton, Secretary.

NORWOOD TENNIS CLUB TO PAY A VISIT

The Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association have arranged a series of games with the Norwood Tennis Club for Thursday afternoon and evening of this week. The games will be played on the Association Courts, corner of Brock and Aylmer Sts., and will commence about 4 o'clock. Tea will be served from 6 to 7.

It is hoped that all members of the Association will be present to assist in making the occasion a success. A social hour will be spent after the games to give our new members a chance to get acquainted.

The Norwood team is one of the best in Central Ontario, and enjoyable and interesting games are sure to result.

The social committee in charge are: Mrs. H G Roper, Miss E. Bentley, Messrs. H. Meyers, and H. W. Nicoll.

BRITAIN'S WOOL CLIP.

Government Arranging Prices It Will Pay For the Same.

NEW YORK, June 26.—A cablegram received here yesterday gave results of a meeting, which took place the day before at the Hotel Cecil in London between the Executive committee of the National Farmers' Union, the representatives of the War Office, and the Board of Agriculture to discuss the Government's intentions with regard to the purchase of the 1916 clip of wool.

It is proposed to divide the United Kingdom into convenient areas, in each of which an executive officer will be appointed by the Government to organize the details of the purchase. The various interests concerned will be represented on local advisory committees in each area.

The War Office representatives announced that it was the intention of the Government to make up a schedule of prices for the different classes and grades of wool, based upon the prices ruling in the months immediately preceding the outbreak of the war with the addition of a fixed percentage of 30 per cent. to cover the expenses of farmers. The farmers' representatives unanimously asked that the Government should fix a more favourable price.

Burning the fingers can be avoided by equipping the metal knobs on pot and kettle covers with good sized corks wired on with bits of picture wire.

TOM SHARKEY BANKRUPT

FORMER PUGILIST OWES $300,000 ACCORDING TO HIS STATEMENT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 26.—Thomas J. Sharkey, former prizefighter, was adjudged bankrupt to-day in the Federal Court. He asserted that his liabilities were $299,556, and his only asset a note for $20.50 against a Sergeant of marines at the Mare Island Navy Yard. Sharkey says he loaned $30 to the marine a long time ago.

According to his attorney, Sharkey was worth $500,000 a year ago. At the time he was losing all his savings from the prize ring in real estate investments he was also running up debts by trying to run a hotel at Fourteenth Street and Third Avenue, New York. Sharkey had a twenty-one-year lease on the hotel at $1,000 a month. The enterprise was a failure, it is said principally because Sharkey was unable to get a saloon license.

GERMANY FEELING PANGS OF HUNGER AWAITS ON CROPS

Note—This is the fifth and last of the food stories from Germany which Shepherd secured by interviewing travellers from Germany at Rotterdam.

By Wm. G. Shepherd.

Rotterdam, May 29 (by mail).—Nobody ever has anything fried these days in German cities and towns unless a special feast is on and the householder or host has had a remarkable piece of luck in securing fat of some sort. Fats of every kind are very scarce.

Travellers from Germany to Rotterdam say butter is practically unknown. Now and then a householder may secure half a pound of margarine at a dollar a pound.

Lard is as scarce as butter.

Some months ago, when the shortage in fats became definite, a few good cooks discovered that olive oil might be used for frying meats and within a short time many foresighted civilians had laid in supplies of olive oil. At present the olive oil supply is exhausted.

GATHER ALL PEANUTS.

The governments experts in their efforts to obtain fats, commandeered all the peanuts in Germany.

"I'm very fond of peanut candy," said a German from Munich, who had come to Rotterdam to feed up, as he explained, "and every afternoon I used to drop a few pennies in a penny-in-the-slot machine near my office.

"One afternoon I ran out to the machine and found that the peanut candy slot had been sealed up with a government seal.

"I could not break it, of course. Later on a policeman came and collected all the peanut candy in the machine. He said the government was going to take the peanuts out of them and extract the oil from them."

The one greasy food that can be obtained in limited quantities in certain districts of Germany is the little canned French sardine. How it gets into Germany nobody seems to know.

"My grocer always had some sardines," explained a neutral lady who was going back to the United States, "where I can eat all that I want to. He doled them out sparingly without any government regulation," she said, "but a beefsteak fried in the fish oil was very unlike a beef steak."

NOT SHORT OF LEMONS.

There has never been a shortage of lemons and oranges, according to various persons from the different parts of Germany. The ally blockade, it appears, has not as yet shut off the supply of citrus fruits which reach Germany by devious routes from various warm climes.

Of sugar the Germans of course have an immense supply owing to their beet root industry. Salt abounds but pepper is scarce. Ham, bacon or pork is unknown to the civilians.

Eggs in April were 60c a dozen and laying hens were so valuable that no chickens were killed for food until their laying capacity declined.

A dressed chicken in a Cologne shop brought two dollars and a half. During the day while it rested in the shop window many persons stopped to look at it.

The shooting of pigeons on the streets or on the roof-tops is severely punished, but it is said that the pigeon population is being rapidly diminished. Zeppelin crews that have passed over Berlin at a low altitude have commented on the number of pigeon traps that they have seen on the roofs of the office buildings. On this account there is a joke current in Berlin that the porters of office buildings have the best fed families in the city.

Undoubtedly Germany has food—beef, pork, fats, oils and most of the other edibles that make eating worth while. Where do they go? Who gets them?

The soldiers. Behind the German lines are cattle sheds, always full of live stock. From all I could hear in Rotterdam, the German soldiers have no complaint to make of their food. A civilian in Germany these days is an incubus. More or less he must feed himself and his family as best he can.

The next three months—until crop time—will of course be the hardest of the year for German civilians. They are now struggling along with last year's leavings. All Germany is waiting with bated breath to see how the autumn crops turn out.

FRENCH PRISONERS WORK.

More than 600 French prisoners of war are working in the steel works at Dulsburg, Prussia, the skilled men receiving 48 cents a day and the unskilled from 12 cents to 19 cents, according to Alexandre Burnaut, Secretary of the Central Labour Union of Cherbourg, who escaped from Dulsburg on the night of May 6, and crossed the Dutch border.

Burnaut, who reached Boulogne a few weeks ago via Rotterdam and London, is also reported as saying that there were some Russian prisoners working at Dulsburg. He was taken prisoner at Maubeuge in September, 1914, and was kept in the [illegible] camps at Friedrichsfeld until April, 1915, when he was [illegible] at Dusseldorf.

Led Roosevelt Cheers; Now She Begs For Clothes

MRS. LIND, WHO STARTED PROGRESSIVE DEMONSTRATIONS, WANDERS SCANTILY CLAD AFTER NERVOUS BREAKDOWN.

MANISTEE, Mich., June 27.—Carrying a tiny twig in her hand, a scantily clad woman, who gave her name as Mrs. John Lind, of Kenilworth, a suburb of Chicago, stopped at a farm house and asked for clothing. Friends later identified her and declared she had led cheering for Theodore Roosevelt at the recent Progressive Convention. With the discovery of Mrs. Lind to-day first publicity was given to a case of mental relapse from which she has been a sufferer. Mrs. Lind, who escaped from her nurse, has gained a wide reputation. When the progressives convened in Chicago she was present and one of the most urgent supporters of Mr. Roosevelt.

Immediately after that convention she displayed signs of extreme nervousness and was sent by her father, Dr. Case of Chicago to a cottage at Hamlin Lake.

Stewed rhubarb is said to be valuable for rheumatism troubles.

Before bolting is sewed in a wash skirt it should be shrunk.

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

THE BEST WAR PICTURE EVER SHOWN

Endorsed By Ottawa Government

This Most Thrilling and Realistic War Drama Will be Exhibited in 9 Reels

THIS PICTURE not only shows what the Huns did in Belgium, but what would positively transpire should the Germans ever get to Canada's shores or the United States.

It shows what would happen to Canadian homes, women and children should the Germans ever get to this continent. The Star Theatre, Toronto, did the largest business in the history with "The Battle Cry of Peace," and its manager expresses through the press his highest admiration for this wonderful patriotic film.

It not only shows the danger of German aggression, but displays in unmistakable words, Canada's and the Empire's necessity for preparedness and a stern resolve to defend our homes and ourselves.

The Strand ran this picture for two full weeks with crowded and delighted audiences and was compelled to play a return engagement for another week.

CANADIAN ENDORSEMENT

Lieut. Col. J. C. Might, O. C. of the 169th Battalion (O. S.), under official heading of the Dept. of Militia, strongly endorses this picture as the grandest war film, with historical and educational interest, ever produced. He tells how, by showing German atrocities in Belgium, taken right on the spot, Zeppelins in action and other real war scenes, it should greatly assist in recruiting. It, according to his statements, shows the absolute necessity for "preparedness" in Canada. Another part of his letter says: "This picture should be seen by every man not in khaki and if the women, too, could witness the awful sights so vividly depicted, it is difficult to believe that they would hold back any longer from letting their men do their duty."

Mayor Church of Toronto, over his signature, in an autograph letter, praising "The Battle Cry of Peace" and advising every man and woman to see this splendid 9-reel war picture, says that it will go down in history as an epic.

$5,000,000 Voted For Secret Work

French Foreign Minister is Authorized to Begin an Active Propaganda.

PARIS, June 27.—The Chamber of Deputies last night appropriated 25,000,000f. ($5,000,000) as a secret fund for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. It was explained by Mr. Alexandre Ribot, Minister of Finance, that this amount was necessary to defend France abroad by means of an active propoganda against "a campaign of calumny."

The Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber discussed the latest violation of the Greek frontier by the Bulgarians, and it was declared that measures decided upon by the Allies must be energetically applied and military action must be taken at Salonika without delay. The committee also urged the government to take the necessary action to end what was declared to be a regime of terror in Syria.

FLYING CONDITIONS WORST POSSIBLE

AVIATION CORPS ALONG BORDER BAFFLED BY DRY AIR AND VARIABLE CURRENTS.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The difficulties met by the Aviation Corps of the United States army in Northern Mexico have smashed all the statistical data relative to flying under abnormal conditions, according to an American army officer who has just returned here from the Texas-Mexican border. His experiences with air craft there were given out yesterday by Henry Woodhouse, of the Aero Club of America.

"It was not until we had actual experience on the spot that we discovered new problems, due to different conditions," he said. "Practically all the difficulties of other places are united, so to speak, into one force against us in that part of Mexico where our men are. The elevation of Denver, the dry air of Minneapolis, the rising and falling air current due to deserts and soft light sands with low brush—those conditions are the worst possible.

"The chief trouble is with the propellers. Those which stand the test of several hours' running here go to pieces in a few minutes in the Mexican air. We appear to be dealing with an abnormal climate, and there is no existing data as a guide or even to suggest the possibility of such a condition."

New York Stock Market

Summary of To day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 27.—The stock market opened to-day with regular price changes, losses being more general than gains in the list. Losses of a point were sustained by United Fruit, U. S. Smelting and American can. Corn products advanced 1-2, crucible 3-8 and anaconda 3-8.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The recoveries of two and three points from the losses the stock market suffered yesterday were made this afternoon.

Crucible advanced 3 1-2 to 76 3-4 on reports of a big government war order. U. S. Steel sold to 83 7-8. Anaconda sold up 2 points to 80. U. S. Smelting and Mexican Petroleum advanced 2 points.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Report of a syndicate formed to buy steel shares thrown on the market by Europe sent Steel Common to 86 1-2 this afternoon, up 1 5-8 from the opening.

Anaconda continued its advance to 81 and Reading sold at 96 7-8. Trading was light.

SUGGESTS A FATHERS' CLUB

The suggestion is made to the Examiner by the father of a Peterborough boy in khaki that there should be formed in Peterborough a Fathers' Club, composed of the fathers of all local boys who have enlisted. Such an organization, it is felt, could do a great work in looking after the welfare of the boys at the front and could do good work in other ways.

OBITUARY

MRS. THOMAS FOSTER.

After a lingering illness there passed away early this morning a well-known and highly respected citizen, in the person of Arabella Ann Robinson, wife of Mr. Thomas Foster, 194 Reid Street. Deceased had been ill for some time with heart trouble. She was born in Port Hope fifty-seven years ago but has lived the greater part of her life in Peterborough.

Besides her husband, deceased leaves one son and six daughters to mourn her loss, namely, Richard, at home; Mrs. Burkhart of Oshawa; Mrs. George Mein, Mrs. F. Durieu, Nellie, Olive and Ethel, all at home. Her mother and three sisters also survive.

The funeral will take place on Thursday at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, Reid Street, to Little Lake Cemetery.

22 War Ships At Zeebrugge Base

GERMANS FIND MARGARINE AND BUTTER ON BOARD THE BRUSSELS, TAKEN TO PORT.

LONDON, June 27.—The British steamship Brussels, which recently was captured by German destroyers and taken into Zeebrugge, was commanded by Captain Charles Fryatt. She carried an all British crew of forty-four.

An unusually large number of Belgian women and children refugees were aboard the vessel. Included in the cargo were four hundred tons of margarine, quantities of fish, butter and yeast.

The Germans are reported to have as many as twenty-two torpedo boats and destroyers at Zeebrugge, which is protected by mine fields. These little warcraft make frequent excursions to sea.

30,972 WORKERS AT KRUPP'S.

Great German Gun Factory at Essen Has 13,623 Women Employes.

While the total number of employes of the Krupp Works at Essen nearly doubled from Aug. 1, 1914, to April 1, 1916, the number of women workers in that great gun plant increased more than tenfold during the same period, according to reports appearing in recent issues of German newspapers. On Aug. 1, 1914, there were 36,580 men and 1,214 women employed at Krupps, while on April 1, 1916, the figures were 56,949 and 13,023 respectively. From the beginning of the current year to April 1 the number of male gun and munition makers increased 1,366 and the number of female workers gained 2,066.

Before the war women were employed only in the shelling departments and as cleaners. How the hard work in the cannon factory affects the women is shown by the report of the Sick Benefit Fund for 1915, which gives the number of cases of illness among the women workers as 76.60 per 100, compared with 62.34 per 100 among the men.

Ques.: "What does your pay-roll amount to?"

Ans.: "Oh, say $10,000 a month."

Ques.: "Quite a wad. Of course you insure it?"

Ans.: "Insure it? What's the idea Frank?"

Ques.: "Well—you see, you're paying out $120,000 a year. Now you insure your building, equipment, stock, etc., why not insure your pay-roll, against loss—to you"

Ans.: "Ask me something easy. What's the point and what's the cost?"

Ques.: "The point is that your pay-roll represents your purchase of the greatest of all raw materials—WORKING TIME. Its subject to loss every day—four times a day—or every time your employees come in and go out of your plant."

Ans.: "Yes, but I employ a time-keeper."

Ques.: "Of course you do. But he's human. Who checks your time-keeper? And who checks the man who checks him? You need a cold-blooded machine for that job—so there will be no favorites or no mistakes."

Ans.: "There isn't any such machine."

Ques.: "Isn't there? Probably your keenest competitor to-day is using it and is just that much ahead of you. And it will cost you perhaps $3 a month to use it. I mean the International Time Recorder. It's the cheapest and best pay-roll insurance you can buy. Gives you printed, unchangeable, records, made under lock and key, that become your weekly pay-sheets. If you want real, inside facts and figures on the system exactly suited to your business write International Time Recording Co., corner McGill and Notre Dame streets, Montreal, or to their Head Office, Anderson Street, Toronto, for latest folders and prices."

THE SITUATION IN GERMANY GROWS BEARISH

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg Reported to Have Remarked That Austrian and Turkish Deputies Threatened Germany With Separate Peace

HER ALLIES RESTIVE

MADRID, June 27.—The German submarine U-35 brought three letters to King Alfonso from the Kaiser. Two set forth the German peace terms, which include a demand for the restoration of the German colonies and provide for the liberation of Belgium, although that country must not be fortified near the German frontier.

(By Charles F. Bertelli.)

PARIS, June 27.—"Our situation is bad. If everything goes well we can stay a few more months. If the people will be satisfied with small results we can last till March, 1917."

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg is reported to have made the foregoing statement at a secret council held in Berlin last week. It is published in The Journal, which states it obtained it from a confidential document drawn up by two Deputies who attended the council.

The Conservatives demanded the resumption of unrestrained submarine operations. In reply the Chancellor said:

"We have only twenty high-sea submarines, divided into squadrons of five. One of these squadrons is always in dock for repairs. Our other submarines are necessary for coast defence."

Short of Metals.

The Conservatives then demanded the instant building of more submarines. Admiral von Capelle replied that last year more could not be built because of the shortage of certain metals.

The Chancellor then said:

"Not a day passes but I am visited by Austro-Hungarian and Turkish Deputies, who threaten a separate peace unless we cease the submarine war. They fear that after the war the Allies and the United States will entirely paralyze their oversea trade."

Dr. Helfferich, the Imperial Secretary of the Treasury, remarked:

"Financially we can last through the war, but afterwards our bankruptcy is inevitable. We have already lost billions of marks in exchange."

Foreign Minister von Jagow then said:

"The only great power we are not at war with is the United States. Spain is favourable to us. The Swedish Government and big business interests are with us. Norway is hostile. The Danish Ministry is with us, but the people are against us. Holland is frankly pro-ally. Switzerland is not exactly among our enemies, but is rather against us."

One Means of Salvation.

Angered at the Conservatives' attitude on the submarine question, von Bethmann-Hollweg banged the table with his fist and exclaimed: "Remember, gentlemen, we have only one means of salvation. That is to detach France from the Allies. We must obtain a breakdown of the French confidence at all costs."

Thereupon the Conservatives demanded that a great blow be dealt France, no matter at what sacrifice.

The Chancellor pointed out that the greatest possible sacrifices were being made at Verdun without overcoming the French resistance.

Czernowitz Students Stuck To Classes To The Last Moment

BERLIN, June 26.—How the University of Czernowitz, which only re-opened this year, moved in a hurry is told by Professor Kelner, who has just reached Vienna. The legal and philosophical faculties had opened the summer term, but the lectures, attended by a hundred men and women students, had been frequently disturbed of late by the thunder of cannon. The constant whirr of enemy aeroplane propellors also handicapped academic work.

On June 4 the first real scare was experienced when Russian shrapnel burst in three parts of the town. Conditions became even less promising when refugees to the northwest corner of Bukowina began pouring in, with their pitiful household goods, cows and pigs, and telling of the frightful battle. The professors continued lecturing, despite the distraction of light rockets, searchlights, blazing villages all around, and violent cannonading until the rector of the university received a sudden order from the military authorities to clear out.

At one o'clock in the morning professors and students trudged with their baggage to the railroad station amid the roar of guns, and luckily caught one of the last trains out.

SOME THINGS GERMANY HAS SPECIALIZED IN

Reports State That a German Submarine is on Way to New York With a Peace Letter

We all realize now, that Germany had been preparing for this war for more than a generation. She specialised in several modern branches of war equipment: Zeppelins, U-boats, machine guns, and enormous cannon (busy-Berthas). Since the outbreak of war it is, of course, very difficult to get details of her plans or developments. But we may be sure that much greater developments have probably been made in many lines, since the beginning of the war. During the war Germany showed numerous unexpected and exceptionally important improvements in her submarines, and it has been continually rumoured that she has been developing and building a fleet of submarines perfectly capable of crossing the Atlantic, geting a cargo on this side, and then re-crossing. And these submarines are said to be large enough to carry quite a crew and a pretty fair sized cargo. It is well known that Germany has greatly increased the size of her U-boats since the war started—that is clearly proved by captured boats. But, about the most positive proof of the long-distance feature is the arrival of the German U-boat, U-35, at Cattagena, Spain. It was said about eight months ago, that German subs. had come from the Kell Canal around Spain and into the Mediterranean. That seems quite possible, in view of the trip U-35. The U-35's trip was, ostensibly, to carry an autograph letter from the Kaiser to King Alfonso, suggesting peace terms. On high authority, but unofficially, it is rumored that a similar boat with another letter, is on its way to New York. All told, it looks as though Germany probably has U-boats capable of making trans-Atlantic trips. It now remains to be seen what use she will make of them.

Liebknecht Bigger Man Than Kaiser

INFLUENCE IN GERMANY IS VERY POWERFUL.

There is one man in Germany today who is more powerful than the kaiser, says Financial America.

Dr. Carl Liebknecht, Socialist leader and member of the Reichstag, is giving public expression almost daily to opinions which if uttered by a person of less note would bring him face to face in double quick time with a firing squad. But the kaiser knows, and every member of the military party in Germany knows, that the execution—indeed the imprisonment—of Liebknecht would unleash the passions of thousands of Socialists in Germany of the Liebknecht type, and this would mean revolution.

No matter what his politics, Liebknecht stands for human equality, and it is men of his courage and vision who have been the fore-runners of great forward political movements.

Body of General Mercer Is Found And Burial Held

All Buttons and Decorations on Tunic Had Been Removed ---General Had Been Shot in the Leg and in the Head, Either Wound Being Enough to Cause Death---Quieter Conditions on Canadian Front---Two Decorated For Conspicuous Gallantry.

OTTAWA, June 28.—Details of the death and burial of Major-General M. S. Mercer, and the work of the Canadians at the front, are conveyed in a cable received at the Militia Department from the Canadian representative in the field. It states:—

"The body of Major-General Mercer was recovered from a demolished dugout in the Armagh Wood. All the buttons and decorations on his tunic had been cut off, but the rank badges had not been touched. Examination showed that the General had been severely wounded in the leg and had also received bullet wounds in the head, either of which would have been sufficient to cause death.

"General Mercer's body was carried back and buried in a military cemetery close to Popering. A large number of officers, including the corps commander and the late General's staff, attended the funeral. Some of the latter had travelled all night.

CONDITIONS MORE QUIET.

"During the past few days quieter conditions prevailed on our new front. All ranks have been busy settling down in the new area recently taken over. The late occupants had left the trenches in the best possible order.

"Enemy parties were reported both day and night, and were more than once dispersed by our fire. A patrol of an eastern Ontario battalion dispersed a German working party with bombs. At various points the enemy concentrated a number of trench mortars on our front trenches, but on each occasion his fire died down under heavy retaliation from our trench mortar and howitzer batteries.

"Our patrols have maintained their activity and accomplished much good work.

"An enemy patrol which endeavoured to approach one of our advanced posts under cover of darkness, were detected and driven off with bombs and rapid firars. One German was seen to be wounded. On another section of our front an enemy relief was caught in the opening by our machine gun fire and dispersed.

"The Distinguished Conduct Medal has been awarded to Private J. G. Hood, 5th Western Cavalry, attached to Canadian Signallers, and the Military Medal to Lance-Corporal D. Gibbs, cable section Canadian Signallers, for gallantry on June 2."

GERMAN POTATO SUPPLY IS LOW

Berlin, June 28.—The prohibition of the use of all meat in July and August is impracticable owing to the scant fat and potato supplies for these months, but the prohibition may be resorted to in September according to Herr Adolph von Batocki, president of the German Food Regulation Board, in an interview in the Tageblatt.

Herr von Batocki said his department was now considering a nation-wide regulation of meat rations through uniform meat cards. An imperial central station for butter, margarine and other fats, will be opened for their distribution, and the regulation probably also will be by means of a uniform fat card. A change in the breadstuff prices after the coming harvest, Herr Batocki said, was out of the question. The price to which wheat and barley will be reduced in the future had not yet been decided. To encourage early threshing special premiums will be paid for grain threshed in August.

Herr von Batocki was optimistic over the prospects of the harvest. Cereals promised an average yield and there was an especially favorable outlook for fodder stuffs. He declared there could be no talk of under-nourishment among the people. Investigations, especially in the industrial regions, found the women and the children looking healthy. Many of the municipalities were opposed to the idea of communal eating houses, but nevertheless their establishment was greatly desired.

An interesting feature of the interview is Herr von Batocki's statement that his department also is charged with overseeing and regulating the transition from war to peace conditions. This problem has not yet been approached but will be taken up during the winter. The principal thing for solution, Herr von Batocki said, was the adjustment of imports an' exports in such a manner that money rates will not be further unfavorably affected. Efforts would be made, he added, to render Germany independent of the outside world for agriculture and raw stuffs. Especial encouragement will be given to the raising of fruits yeilding oils.

When Little Fritz the Coward Escaped to French Trenches

(By Herbert Corey.)

IN THE ARGONNE FOREST — My companion is an American, given to American habits of speech. He regarded Fritz heavily for some minutes when that unattractive specimen was led out before us. He heard what Fritz had done. Then he delivered judgment.

"You gotta hand it to him," said he. "He don't look the part, but he certainly put it over. You gotta hand it to him."

Because Fritz is a successful deserter from the German army. There is no more dangerous task in war than the accomplishing of a successful desertion. Some one is always watching from both sides. The deserter stands an excellent chance of being shot in the back by his jilted comrades as he runs, and a more than excellent chance of being shot in front by the other fellows. The mere fact that an enemy soldier comes hooting "Kamarad" through the fog does not guarantee his good faith. He may merely be the live bait of a new ruse.

Sure Was Frightened.

"Certainly I was frightened," said Fritz when interrogated. "Mein Gott!"

Fritz is an undersized little runt of a man. When I saw him, surrounded as he was by tall, slender, good-looking young officers of a certain French staff, he looked even smaller and more worm-eaten than he really is. His weakened little face is decked by a fringe of foxy-red and uncared for whiskers. He wore the "field-grau" recently issued to the German soldiers and which is of such mediocre quality that it fades and wrinkles quite shamelessly His blue eyes were cunning and hard and shifting.

"All the time I was frightened," Fritz added, "by the shells."

But He Will Be Shot.

Incidentally "Fritz" is a generic name for German prisoners. They are all Fritzes. The name of this particular Fritz will not be given, because he may escape being propped against a German wall and shot when the war is over. It is difficult to see just how he will escape. He will be exchanged, with the rest of the German prisoners of war, and somewhere in Germany Fritz's dossier is to-day crossed by a line telling of his desertion in the face of the enemy on a morning of May, 1916. Still, he may escape. He is very hopeful.

"The chance is better than lying between the lines where those others lie," said Fritz, with a shudder. "With the rain beating on their faces and turning them gray. And the rain beating on them at night—"

He is one of the Ersatz regiments. These are composed of men who escaped military service before the war for one and another reason. In Fritz's case the reason is evident. He is too small to be worth incorporating in an army during time of peace. The top of his head seems hardly to come to the shoulder of a man of ordinary size. Ten months ago Fritz was impounded and taken to the barracks. He blames himself severely for this. It did not occur to him, he says, that Germany would ever call for his services. He might have escaped across the frontier long ago.

Drilled Ten Months.

Ten months he drilled and goose-stepped and right-shoulder-shifted into the semblance of a soldier. One morning a draft left for the front. Fritz was in it. He was not in fear, he says. He had been worked and fed until he was in the prime of condition. The other men grieved a bit because they were leaving their families and were a bit nervy over what might come. Fritz doesn't worry about any family he may have, and he has not imagination enough to imagine what the front might be like. He reached "the back of the front" and stayed there for a few days. One night his detachment marched for hours. At last they reached the front line trenches.

Ten days before an attack upon the French trenches had failed at this point. A French counter-attack had likewise been repulsed. Between the lines were the grim evidence of that double failure. Fritz watched them, fascinated, through his loophole. Sometimes shells fell among them, so that the dead seemed to stir uneasily in their sleep. The sight made him physically ill. He tried to retire decently into his dugout, but his comrades would have none of it. Most of them were veterans. They had no patience with men who suffered from queasiness.

"Two days I watched them," said Fritz. "At night it seemed to me I could see candles moving about their heads."

Then the French began to shell. In the Argonne the French shell with a sort of joyous abandon. If the Germans make a serious reply the storm of French shells is redoubled, for here they send two shells, at least, to the Germans' one. For three days that shelling was continued. Fritz saw men fresh killed in his trench. They lay there for hours until they could be carried away. He learned the scent of new blood. He heard the wounded men cry. He began to suffer—actually to suffer—from fear. It is probably quite impossible for the normal men to appreciate what the congenial coward feels at such times. His sergeant kicked him, and his comrades heartily approved of the kicking. No matter, Fritz continued to be inexhaustibly ill.

Trying to Make a Man.

One day he was put on sentry duty at a "listening post"—a spur trench which had been run toward the French lines. His officer perhaps thought to cure Fritz of his cowardice or kill him. Maybe he thought such a shameless coward would be a better listener than a better man. The shells fell faster that day. Bullets whistled overhead. It was cold and foggy, and a raw wind blew. Fritz coughed and shivered and attended to his blue and swollen nose, and listened. At last he could stand no more. He threw down his rifle and leaped out of his trench and ran toward the French trenches.

"Kamarade," he yelled, frantically holding his thick little hands high above his foxy red head. "Kamarade, Vive la France!"

Both Sides Fire.

Both sides fired at him, but by a miracle he was unhurt. He tumbled breathless into a trench filled with equally breathless Frenchmen, who for a time believed he was but the forerunners of some new German trick. Ever since he has been anxiously responding to each question put to him by the French staff in the hope that he may gain merit in their eyes.

"Do you believe him?" I asked. A French officer laughed and bade me listen. He stepped to Fritz's side.

"Has the Kaiser been wounded?" he asked.

"Yah," spattered Fritz happily. "Yah, yah, yah. He was wounded at—"

The group of officers laughed and turned away and Fritz spattered up a gritty and dripping street, knee deep in mud, between two stalwart French guards. A cold rain was being driven by a raw wind through his cheap looking gray uniform. He had no overcoat. Great beads of rain water ran through his stringy red whiskers. That night he might sleep in a stone stable on a pile of hay. My American companion nudged me.

"Happy little cuss," said he. "Look at him smile."

SUGGESTIONS TO SICK WOMEN

How Many Are Restored To Health.

First.—Almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements, pain in the side, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Second.—The medicine most successful in relieving female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates and strengthens the organism, it overcomes disease.

For forty years it has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

Third.—The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Fourth.—Every sick woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, and may bring health and happiness to your life.

AN ODE TO JUNE.

Sweet June, thy glorious advent fair to greet;
Ten thousand charms around thy pathway meet.
Earth dons bright robes of flower besprinkled green,
In gala pomp befitting regal queen.

With joyous footsteps, over hill and plain,
Lightly trips gay summer, with her beautious train;
Orchards abloom like banks of fragrant snow,
With incense laden, softest zephyrs blow.

Roses bedecked with glittering dews of morn;
Enwreathed, as diadem, thy brow adorn;
All nature's dazzling smiles combined appear:
To crown the loveliest of all the year.

Glad radiant nymph, beneath thy beaming glance,
A sprightly measure, dimpling streamlets dance;
And warbling tribes, their blithest notes attune,
In rapturous strains to hail enchanting June.

But now that face, so wont to brilliant smile,
With grief's dim clouds is overcast the while;
What secret sorrow at thy heart can be,
That makes thee thus, a mourning Niobe.

Say, are those gushing tears, in pity shed,
O'er Europe's reeking fields of carnage red;
And for our sons by war, untimely slain,
Those gentle eyes weep showers of copious rain.

Yet soon will roll the darksome shadows by,
And hope and sunshine, gild the lowering sky;
Thy vanished smiles return again full soon,
And make thee, as of yore, delightful June.

WOMEN WANT PROHIBITION.

Thousands March in Edinburgh and Work Up Big Petition.

Edinburgh, Scotland, June 27. — The culmination of a womans campaign for prohibition while hostilities are in progress was marked Saturday by a procession of several thousand women with banners inscribed, "Follow the King," meaning the example of total abstinence set by King George.

The petition, signed as a result of the campaign, bore the names of 40,000 women in the Edinburgh district appealing to the Government to enforce prohibition during the war.

To Get Rid of Blackheads.

To get rid of blackheads wash your face every night with a soft brush and soap, rubbing it well and using very hot water. When the pores are open rub in some good cold cream, then with a flat side of a key press the blackheads until the dirt rolls out. Then slash with cold water into which you have put a little tincture of benzoin.

Steaming the face is decidedly good for the complexion, provided it is properly done. You can steam with a tea kettle if you place the spout on a level with the face and cover the head with a coarse towel. Steam only ten minutes once a week. Before steaming the face should be cleansed thoroughly with the cleansing cream. After steaming press out the blackheads, then massage for ten minutes. Wipe off, then dampen a towel with the toilet water and wipe the face.

RAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.

Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the hands of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the corners behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the badness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adélard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Sailor's Confession

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

There is a record of the ship Julia Sturdevant having been burned at sea with all on board except five of the crew, who were picked up in a lifeboat while the vessel was burning off the coast of Korea. This happened many years ago when I was a young man. I am now a ninety year old hulk, laid up at the sailors' snug harbor, ready for the junkheap. The Julia Sturdevant was set afire, and I applied the torch that burned her. Before sailing on my eternal voyage I have to confess this fact and tell how I came to do it. There is no sin on my conscience in that burning, but there are others that are a hundred times worse than burning a ship.

When I stepped on the Julia Sturdevant I was twenty-two years old. We sailed from Boston to Japan, taking out a cargo such as the little yellow men needed then, but don't need now, for that wasn't long after Commodore Perry sailed in among them and began their civilizing. The Sturdevant was one of the early steamers, having paddle wheels and sails, and her engine was a primitive one. Any well rigged ship in a stiff breeze could outsail her.

We were plowing along through the China sea against a stiff nor'easter, when before the wind came a Chinese junk. Before she reached us she hoisted the skull and bones and fired a shot at us as an order to stop. We hadn't so much as a salute cannon aboard and few small arms. There were ports for four guns on each side of the junk, and her decks swarmed with men. We saw it was all up with us, and our captain surrendered with a condition that all our lives be spared.

As soon as the pirates came aboard they began to look the vessel over and concluded to divide their force, running her as well as their own ship. Without regarding the condition they had made, they forced all the crew except five of us to walk the plank. What they kept us five for was to direct the working of the ship, since they knew nothing about the use of steam. Two of us were the engineer and his assistant. The other three they kept to post and help them in working the ship's sails that were entirely unlike those on the junk.

Fifteen of them stayed on the captured ship, taking aboard two guns and plenty of small arms, while the others sailed away on the junk. We white men were obliged to obey their orders or walk the plank like the others. And that's the crime I have to confess. For weeks, when they were overpowering unarmed vessels, looting and murdering, we were doing our part of the work. What else could we do? We could have refused and given up our lives, and it's been troubling me for more than half a century that I didn't choose the better part.

I'm not going to name all the crimes we committed because we had to. I'm simply going to tell how we finally made our escape. After awhile we agreed that we would pretend that we were contented with our lot, ask for our share of the plunder and do everything else we could to put the yellow devils off their guard. One thing we were afraid of. There was one ship that we tried to capture and failed. We boarded her and were fighting hand to hand with her crew when they saw us white men fighting with the yellow ones. We were about to join our own color when, fired with hatred against us for being part of a Chinese pirate crew, they made a desperate dash and drove us back on to our own ship. After that we knew that if we escaped the pirates and were recognized by any of the men on that ship we would dangle at a yardarm.

The next ship taken had a lot of liquor aboard, and every pirate got drunk. We watched our opportunity, pretending to drink and be drunk like the others, till they were all laid out. When eight of them were either asleep or stupid with liquor below and the rest being in the same condition on deck, we clapped down the hatches on those below. What we did to those on deck I don't mention, except that they didn't trouble us any more.

We hadn't more than fixed them all when looking ahead we saw a ship coming and made out the stars and stripes at her peak, for in those days our flag was often seen on the ocean. Some of us thought that if she overhauled us and we told our story we would be believed. Others didn't think we would. Some day some of us might meet some of the crew of the ship we had boarded. I made up my mind what to do and without saying anything got a lot of tow and oakum together and set fire to it. The wind was high, and in fifteen minutes the whole ship was ablaze. We lowered one of the boats, got into her and sailed for the Yankee ship.

When we reached her we reported that we had been afire for three days and if we hadn't met the Yankee in time we would have been lost. And that's how the ship Julia Sturdevant came to be reported burned at sea with five of the crew saved. It was never made clear what became of the rest of the crew. I managed that story by saying that when the fire finally got ahead of us the others were cut off from the boats. Some were burned below and some were drowned. True enough the pirates below were burned.

I met one of the crew of the ship we had boarded long afterward in Hong Kong. He didn't remember me, but you'd better believe I remembered him and got out of his way as quickly as possible.

A PAIN IN THE BACK

COMES FROM THE KIDNEYS.

When a pain asserts itself in the back you may rest assured that it comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and would be without a pain or an ache.

For backache, lame or weak back, there is no remedy to equal Doan's Kidney Pills.

They take out the stitches, twitches, and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer so much from a weak, lame, aching back.

Miss Iva A. Ferris, Mill Cove, N.B., writes: "I suffered for two years from pains in my back. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged until I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I thought it would not hurt to try them. I had only used two boxes before I noticed a great difference, and after I had taken four boxes I was completely cured. I would not be without them in the house. I can recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

IF YOU want to BUILD UP YOUR BUSINESS, you must USE THE PAPER that goes into the Home.

BACKACHE, LUMBAGO AND RHEUMATIC TROUBLES.

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish to state that I suffered greatly from backache, lumbago and rheumatic troubles. I used "Anuric," the latest discovery of Doctor Pierce for backache and kidney troubles, and I can cheerfully recommend the "Anuric Tablets" to anyone suffering from any of these maladies.

Yours truly,
J. F. GARNER.

NOTE: It is now asserted with confidence that these painful effects due to uric acid in the system are entirely eradicated. A new remedy, called "Anuric," has been discovered by Dr. Pierce, and is the cause of a drainage outward of the uric acid with which it comes in contact within the body. It will ward off backache, headache, and the darting pains and aches of articular or muscular rheumatism—of those diseases which are caused by too much uric acid, such as gout, asthma, sciatica, renal calculus. "Anuric" prolongs life because old people usually suffer from hardening and thickening of the walls of the arteries, due to the excess of uric acid in the blood and tissues.

Dr. Pierce, who is director and chief physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has been testing this wonderful medicine for the relief of over-worked and weakened kidneys. The relief obtained by sufferers has been so satisfactory that he determined to place "Anuric" with the principal druggists in town where people could get this ready-to-use medicine. "Anuric" is not harmful or poisonous, but aids nature in throwing off those poisons within the body which cause so much suffering, pain and misery. Scientists assert this remedy is 37 times more potent than lithia. Send 10 cents for large trial package.

"Anuric" is building up a reputation as good as Dr. Pierce's other well-known medicines which have been proved reliable during nearly fifty years, such as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the ills of women, Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the liver regulator, and Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for red blood.

The Appetite of Youth Quickly Restored

Appetite is useless unless digestion is good. Dr. Hamilton's Pills make tremendous appetite and keep digestion up to the mark as well. The liver, bowels and kidneys are stimulated, the stomach strengthened, and robust health quickly follows. Dr. Hamilton's Pills instill vigor and snap into the system, make folks feel youthful and happy. You'll forget you have a stomach, forget your days of sickness if Dr. Hamilton's Pills are used. Insist on having Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c, per box, no other medicine so good.

DESPERATE FOE FACES RUSSIANS

Latter's Advances on Kovel Front Hard Won—Great German Aid

NOTEBOOK ON DEAD AUSTRIAN OFFICER SPEAKS OF GERMANS HAVING TRANSFERRED A CORPS FROM VERDUN TO KOVEL IN SIX DAYS.

(By Stanley Washburn)

Russian Field Headquarters, June 28.—(Delayed) — The story of the fighting on the Kovel front is the narrative of an historic advance which, at the point of the bayonet, steadily forced back, through barrier after barrier, the stubborn resistance of the Austrians intermingled with occasional German units, until at one point the advance measured forty-eight miles.

After ten days the rapidly-increasing enemy formations compelled the Russians to slow down, and finally brought them to a position where they were obliged to suspend their forward movement and defend themselves against the attacks of superior numbers of the enemy coming from other theatres of operations.

WEST TO EAST IN SIX DAYS.

It is still difficult to ascertain exactly what is the total of the new forces the enemy is receiving, but certainly the 10th Prussian Corps has arrived, it is said, from the Rheims front and the 5th Bavarian Corps also is reported here from the Arras front, while mention is made of troops who have arrived from Laon in numbers as yet unknown.

A notebook found on the body of a dead Austrian officer speaks of the remarkable achievement of the Germans in having transferred a corps from Verdun to Kovel in six days, which indicates the probability that a certain quantity of troops has come from there.

After two days spent on this front I can state without reservation that I believe the Russians are engaged in the fiercest and most courageous fight of the entire war. They are hanging on to their hardly-won positions, often facing troops concentrated on strategic points of the line which outnumber them sometimes by three to one.

I spent Thursday at an advanced position on the Styr, where the Russians earlier had forced a crossing of the river, facing a terrific fire and turning the enemy out of position after position at the point of the bayonet. In hurriedly-dug positions offering the most meagre shelter, the Russians on Thursday morning drove back four consecutive Austrian counter-attacks. Each left the field thickly studded with Austrian dead, besides hundreds of wounded who had to be left.

BIG ODDS AGAINST RUSSIANS.

Along this front the Russians are holding their own against heavy odds, but certainly they are inflicting greater losses than they are receiving.

Friday I spent at corps and divisional headquarters west of the Kovel road. The forward units of this corps represent the maximum point of our advance and the Russians' most vital menace to the enemy, as is obvious from the numbers of Germans who are attacking here in dense masses without so far seriously impairing the Russian resistance.

The situation is excellent now but with the German system of railways behind the lines, it is clear that the issue depends on the extent to which the Germans are able to drain the other fronts and keep sending fresh troops for concentration on this point.

1,000 MILE RUSSIAN FRONT.

In the west it should never be forgotten that the Russians are holding lines nearly 1,000 miles long, and it is always impossible for the Russians to effect concentrations with the same speed as the German.

After spending three days on this front, and motoring hundreds of versts, inspecting positions taken by the Russians, their achievements become increasingly impressive. The first line taken which I inspected represents the latest practice in field works, in many ways comparing favourably with the lines I saw on the French front.

The front line is protected by a five or six series of barbed wire with the heavy front line trenches studded with redoubts, machine gun positions and with underground shelters 20 feet deep, while the reserve positions which extend, in many places, for half a mile to a mile in series after series behind the first line, are studded with communication trenches, shelters and bombproofs.

BURY 4,000 ENEMY DEAD.

It must not be thought that the Austrians offered only feeble resistance, for I inspected one series of trenches where I was informed that the Russians, in a few versts of front, had buried 4,000 Austrian dead on first lines alone. This indicates the nature and tenacity of the enemy resistance.

I was also told that there are far fewer Slavs and Poles found among the Austrians here than in any other big action. It is believed that most of these had been sent to the Italian front on account of their tendency to surrender to the Russians.

CANADIAN LUMBER JACKS INTEREST ENGLISH PEOPLE

An English newspaper brings the following interesting account of the activities of the Canadian Foresters overseas:—

Not far from Bovey Tracey with amazing suddenness, a canvas town has sprung into existence, and the citizens of this little township are lumbermen from the wilds of Canada, men of splendid physique and the sight of whom fills one with admiration. Although these colonials, who belong to a Canadian Overseas Foresters Co., have only been in the district for a few days, with the characteristic free and easy manner of the Colonial, they have already made a good number of friends in the locality, and perhaps the warmest friendships have been formed with the children of the parish, who get on remarkably well with these stalwart men.

The first party arrived on Thursday, of last week and practically the whole of the time since has been spent in clearing a site for the camp, a work which is now nearing its completion.

The visitors are a representative body of lumbermen, being drawn from far and wide from Halifax to Vancouver. The foreman in charge of operations, ranking as sergeants, are men well-known in Canada for this class of work, having anything from twenty-five to thirty years' experience of forest life. The various gangs are now fully occupied each day, and are very often working under difficulties, but as time goes on things will become more ship-shape, and the parties will be able to go ahead with much more freedom.

The camp is under the control of Capt. H. W. Racey, and Lieut. Smythe, acting adjutant both of whom have had considerable experience in work of this nature, the former having for fourteen years controlled a steam mill in Canada at which 6,500 men were engaged.

Being under canvas is nothing new to these foresters, practically the whole of their lives having been spent in this manner, both in summer and winter. Although they only recently arrived in England, they have quickly become acclimatised, although they find the air much damper in this country than in Canada.

GREAT BRITAIN ADDS 600,000 TO MILITARY FORCE

All Males Between 18 and 41 Automatically Become Soldiers

London, June 27.—Great Britain on Saturday became a nation of militarism.

All but a negligible quantity of male Britishers between the ages of 18 and 41 on Saturday automatically became soldiers for the duration of the war under the military compulsion act. They are the army reserve and will become trained units as fast as the military authorities can put them through the necessary steps.

It is estimated that upwards of 600,000 are thus added to the military forces. Between 350,000 and 400,000 are youths under 19. The remainder is divided between single and married men who have held back mainly for family or business reasons.

Beginning on Saturday every man walking the streets or the highways of Great Britain, excluding Ireland, is subject to challenge by a police constable and must produce his certificate of military exemption forthwith or face the consequences.

FEW ARE FREE.

But few are free under the compulsion act. Total exemption is openly granted only to clergymen, exchanged prisoners of war, and the medically unfit. From Saturday onwards for 30 days, hundreds of tribunals throughout the country will consider the last applications for exemption. It has been previously announced that absolute freedom from military service cannot be granted to those pleading "serious hardship." Hence the tradesman must leave his shop, the professional man his office, the manufacturer his plant, and the husband his home, despite business or domestic hardship. The conscientious objector, if his objections are proved genuine to the satisfaction of the tribunal, must serve in a non-combatant capacity. Even the government employee must prove that his services are indispensable to the nation.

STATIONS ANIMATED.

British railway stations, especially those of the larger cities, took on a new aspect on Saturday. More women and children crowded the platforms than ever before. It was like a Sunday school picnic, except that tears and good-byes took the place of laughter and joy. The first drafts of the conscript army started towards the training camps. In the big London railway stations, husbands and fathers inevitably loaded with more baggage than the army law allows, remained on the platforms until the trains were ready to go bidding bon-bye to their wives and children. Heartrending scenes were enacted. Trains steamed out and thousands of persons stepped into strange paths in which they will continue to walk until peace brings Great Britain back to normal balance.

During the past month, millions of pieces of furniture have been packed in thousands of British homes and put into storage. The government lightened the load of a married conscript in this respect. The local authorities are empowered by parliament to store the household effects free, pay a reasonable charge for the cartage and insurance.

There are more empty houses for rent in England, Scotland and Wales, than at any time in history. The married soldier's family, in most cases, has not attempted to keep the home fires burning. Wives and children have gone back to the "old folks" or into lodgings. They will make out on the government allowance that goes to every soldier's wife and children. In exceptional cases the local authorities are empowered by the government to offer funds—the amount to be decided by the barest needs.

Every day for weeks the railway stations and the homes will go through what started on Saturday, unless peace put an end to it.

ALL PEOPLE ARE VERY MUCH ALIKE

It is queer how a man who sees how little unanimity there is among his own people, how little singleness of purpose, how many parties, cliques and societies, says the San Francisco Bulletin, should be able to credit a foreign nation—as, for instance Japan—with the very qualities lacking in his own nation, and indeed in all the people that he ever met. Yet this is a mistake which almost all of us insist on making.

We know how good natured, how much wrapped up in self and family, how little touched by great currents, our lives are, and the lives of people we know best. We never think of our nation as a white peril. If we have a passion for organization it bothers us to see how far it is from being a peril to anything but itself, how it drifts and tosses, how its whole aspect quivers and changes under the winds of events. What we don't seem to understand is that the people with whom we are familiar are not a peculiar people, or different in any fundamental way from many others in other lands. We are a bucket of water out of the pond but we don't realize our kinship with the rest of the pond.

Here we are: Bill Jones, Mrs. Jones, Hattie Jones, Cousin Henry, Uncle Joshua, Samuel Brown, Mrs. Samuel Brown, old man Smith, young Jimmy McWhiffletree, Sarah's oldest boy, Susie Gallup's little baby, Woodrow Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt, the postmaster, the man next door, the fellow who was around peddling aluminum wade, the chap in the street car who tried to get us into a conversation about baseball—the United States is made up of just such people, repeated over and over again, and the rest of the world is only superficially different from the United States.

What does Cousin Henry want the most? Well, he wants to get married, and in order to get married he wants a better job with a little more pay. He would like to be able to pay the first instalment on a house and lot. He likes to go to dances, to go fishing and to camp out. He wants to be decent and kindly so far as he can be without seeming effeminate. If he meets with good luck he will be a useful, modest, moderate, everyday citizen.

But this is not the only country that can produce boys like Cousin Henry. Cousin Henry's talents and virtues or their equivalent, may be found in some Oriental breast, under some yellow skin, five or six thousand miles away. They not only may be found there, but certainly will be found there. The laws of probability forbid any other conclusion. Now we would not be frightened of a nation of Cousin Henrys. That would be ridiculous. And we would not be frightened at Nevada or Arizona, although we know that there are a few very unpleasant people in those States.

We don't accuse Oregon or Washington or even Canada of having evil designs against us, and as a rule we do not become suspicious of another race or nation unless it talks a different language. We understand Canada's version of Cousin Henry; it is so much like our own that we could not bear to shoot it. Germany's version is a little different. Japan's stranger still. We suspect Japan's Cousin Henrys of a tenacious and ferocious design to hurt us. We think of the Japanese Cousin Henry as going through a whole lifetime giving only incidental attention to his family, his home, his amusements, his friends and his religion and nourishing himself almost entirely on the hope of being one of a force which is to sink the American navy or subdue California.

What fools we are! Japan is no more unanimous than California. Now one faction is on top, now another, and while one Japanese is worrying over the land question another is hunting new remedies for cancer, another inventing new machinery for making cotton, a third writing a poem, a fourth painting a picture, a fifth is playing with a two-year-old son.

By Purifying The Blood You Get Rid Of Pain

Here is the Sworn Statement of a Lady Who Was Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Poison causes pains and aches, tired, languid feeling and derangements of the vital organs of the body. By ridding the human system of poisonous impurities Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure rheumatism, headache, backache, and pains through the body and limbs.

As an illustration, we would refer you to the sworn statement of Mrs. Bergland. It is just such experiences as this that has made so many thousands of people enthusiastic about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This why they are to be found in the great majority of homes.

Mrs. O. Bergland, Dunkirk, Sask., writes: "I can hardly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to all who are suffering from weak kidneys. I suffered from headache and backache, had heart fluttering and my self that it was with difficulty that I could get any rest. I had rheumatism and always had a heavy feeling in the region of my kidneys. I was nervous and often dizzy. Reading about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills led me to use them, and with the most highly satisfactory results, and I can recommend them to everyone who wants to be cured of kidney troubles."

Mr. W. E. Johnson, Commissioner to take oaths writes: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Bergland and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Put Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to the test when suffering from torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and you will soon appreciate their value. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' KIMONO.

By Anabel Worthington.

Here's a truly individual style of kimono with a deep yoke front and back, outlined with silk. The novel collar faced with silk continues its line on the right side to form a revers; diagonally it extends over to the left giving almost the surplice closing to the body section. Below the bust on the left side covered buttons decoratively mark a straight closing to the hem. The sleeves are finished with silk to harmonize with the collar. For something very elaborate, figured silk with plain silk to trim will give an adorable kimono.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. To make like the illustration in size 36 will require 5 1-8 yards of 36-inch material and 1 yard of 36-inch silk to trim.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 20 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Nero The Woven Hose That Can't Kink

GOODYEAR MADE IN CANADA Smooth or Corrugated

Reliable Stitched Together Not Just Stuck

NERO comes in any length up to 500 feet RELIABLE in 50-foot lengths

Beware of hose of doubtful brand and quality. The market is overrun with inferior kinds. Usage and weather soon disintegrate them. That means leaks, kinks, lost pressure and wasted money.

We've selected this Goodyear Garden Hose after close comparison because it wipes out all excuse for hose trouble. One reason is this: Goodyear Nero Hose is made so the plies can't separate. The cover and the lining both are extra tough rubber, so Goodyear outwears the average. It's a "many season hose." Yet the prices are low—due to quantity output. EVERY MINUTE IN AIR SEEMS A DAY DARING BRITISH RAIDERS TESTIFY

LONDON, June 15.—Night flying and its eerie sensations while scouting for Zeppelins is the subject of an interesting article contributed to the Daily Chronicle by "An Airman."

It was a telephone message that warned us of the approach of Zeppelins, and incidentally called us away from a rubber of bridge to a more exciting game. Five minutes later I was at the aerodrome with my pilot, and our machine was being wheeled out of the shed.

Mechanics hurry into and out of the darkness, laden with bombs, machine gun ammunition and other accessories to a Zeppelin chase. We wrap ourselves in our leather coats, put on face masks as a protection against the biting cold, and, taking our maps and electric torches, we stride over to the aeroplane.

A dim group gathers round while the pilot tests the engines and I examine the bomb rack and Lewis gun. Everything satisfactory.

We are ready at last. "Contact!" calls the pilot, and a second later the propeller is racing round. The pilot waves his arm, the two chocks are pulled from under the wheels, and we tear across the aerodrome.

Now we have "flying speed" and can rise with safety. With a strange feeling that nothing is real I watch the ground recede in the half-light and grow more and more shadowy, until it merges into a blackness only relieved by the flares that have been lit for our guidance.

Much Depends on Engine.

A hundred feet up. We know that the pitch darkness immediately below us hides a wood. Pray Heaven the engine is all that it should be, for if it peters out at this stage we shall be too low to glide into the open and so avoid crashing on the treetops.

We begin climbing in earnest. Though we are still below 500 feet, the earth is invisible and seems miles away. I have the fancy that I am being hurled through space on the wings of a nightmare. Everything is black, and I cannot see my hand if I hold it before my face, though I can feel the rush of wind as we force our way through it at eighty miles an hour. I run my hand along the side of the fuselage for the satisfaction of touching something solid.

It is not too much to say that nobody can pass through his first experience of night flying and escape all symptoms of "cold feet." I tell myself that if the engine fails we shall be unable to find a landing ground in the darkness and can scarcely avoid a bad crash. I realize the difficulty we shall have in landing even when the flares have guided us back to our aerodrome. I think of a friend who, after looking for Zeppelins on just such a night, collided with a tree as he came down and was fatally injured.

But these sombre thoughts, born of the surrounding darkness, only last a few seconds. I remember I am up to look for raiding airships, not to give way to nerves. I switch on my electric torch, and examine the altimeter, the compass, the machine gun and the drums of ammunition.

Three things are oddly comforting and help to counteract the sense of unreality—the pale half moon that has just come out from behind the bank of clouds, the searchlights, and the loud hum of the engine. A freakish twist of memory makes the engine's rhythmic roar suggest to my subconsciousness some lines from a G. K. Chesterton ballad, and I suddenly find myself murmuring:

Mr. Mandragon, the millionnaire, I am happy to say, is dead.
He enjoyed a quiet funeral in a crematorium shed;
And he lies there fluffy and soft and grey and certainly quite refined,
When he might have been rotting to flowers and fruit with Adam and all mankind.

2,500 Feet in Air.

The altimeter now registers 2,500 feet. We are right over a populous part of the town. The twinkling of the myriad street lamps and shop lights—or rather their reflection on the pavements—makes it look like a monstrous Chinese garden. The moving flashes, we suppose, must come from trams and 'buses. Away to the right we can see a bend of the soft-shimmering river.

At 6,000 feet an outburst of frightfulness by the "Archies" (anti-aircraft guns) warns us that a Zeppelin may be somewhere near. Three dull explosions from far below confirm the supposition and tell us that German bombs are destroying British homes. I see red and long for a chance to avenge the outrage.

I note with joy that we are 8,000 feet up and near the favourite altitude of the night raiders. Another loud thud below is preceded by a bright flash on our own level, and we race upward and onward in the direction thus shown.

But a wandering searchlight snatches away our opportunity; we are caught in its beams and half blinded by the sudden glare. The pilot loses control while banking, and we fall into a side slip. I receive a painful slap in the face from the icy cold air as we rush downward diagonally, and I bite my tongue from shock. In two seconds the machine has righted itself, and I thank whatever gods there be that it is of the "automatically stable" type which has evoked such caustic criticism.

Begin Climb Again.

When the aeroplane has found itself we begin to climb again. By the time we reach the altitude we left in such a hurry the anti-aircraft guns are silent. We cruise around for about ten minutes, and then, finding that the Zeppelins have left our part of the air, we turn for home.

The compass points our direction, and we begin to descend. At 4,000 feet my breath is taken away as an ungainly and sinister shape rushes past about thirty yards away. We have nearly collided with another aeroplane.

When we get lower the horrid doubts begin to reassert themselves. Where on earth is the line of flares that marks our aerodrome? If the orderly officer has forgotten to keep them alight shall we be able to attract attention, and, if not, how long will our petrol last?

As we near the 1,000-foot level I fire off a Very's light in the hope of being seen. It crackles and winds its way earthward in a red stream, but there is no answering flash. At 300 feet we are still in the dark—and so is our landing ground.

There it is at last, the thin red line of flares that represents safety; the flares grow bigger as we go lower. Now the engine is shut off, and we are gliding down, our pathway being in the shape of an elongated "S." I sit tight and hope we shall not meet with our old friend the wood just before touching earth.

A sharp bump, another bump, a short spurt along the ground and we pull up with a jerk. The undercarriage is smashed, but otherwise we are safe and sound. Leaving the machine to the tender mercies of the mechanics, we climb out very soberly and walk across to the sheds, where the orderly officer informs us cheerfully that all the night flyers have now come home to roost.

Over hot coffee and cigarettes we exchange yarns with the others who have been air scouting. And so to bed, more tired out by half an hour's night flying than by an average day's work.

Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and General Stores.

Proper Thing Now Is To Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions, should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges during the heated days. There's no need for them anyway since the virtues of mercolized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you have been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercolized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of cosmetics and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautifully white, satiny and youthful. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Another affording warm weather treatment—best tending to combat wrinkles and flabbiness—is a skin tightener, made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Its use (as a face bath) leaves no trace.

JAPS IN ALBERTA CORPS.

Form Half Platoon in Mounad Rifles —Reviewed At Ottawa To-day.

Ottawa, June 27.—An Oriental ally appeared in the ranks of the 13th Alberta Mounted Rifles, which were reviewed on Parliament Hill by the Duke of Connaught. A platoon of Japs made up part of one company. They were enlisted in the Crow's Nest Pass mining district. Side by side with them was a company of Mormons. The Japs are much smaller in stature than the rest of the battalion but are particularly quick in their movements. The battalion is commanded by Lt.-Col. Kemmus.

The 101st Battalion of Winnipeg, under Col. Maclean, is travelling along with the 13th, and both were reviewed. The exceptional height of the officers attracted attention.

In the past week, regiments passing through Ottawa have been peculiarly cosmopolitan, embracing Doukhobors, Japs, Mormons and Mennonites.

German Military Camp Called "A Living Death" By Frenchmen

In the Paris Temps of April 24 appears the following letter from some young Parisians, describing their experiences in a German military prison:—

"It will be a good thing," the letter reads, "if people in France get to know what we have lived through during the last nine months, because they will then receive a fair idea of the privations, humiliation and hardships which are visited upon poor war captives who have for one reason or another, been sentenced to prison here.

"On March 8, 1915, we were sentenced to incarceration in a fortress for having made an attempt to escape. Our term was originally set at eleven months, but later on we received a reduction of two months. We have been kept all the time at ——, where we have been treated with much greater severity than has been used against the regular inmates, ordinary convicts. We can state truthfully that during the entire period of our incarceration we have been at the absolute mercy of our jailers, who were incited to even greater brutality by their commanding officers.

"We were not allowed to write a letter more than once every two months, and even then it was dependent on the commandant's own good will whether and when the missive would be despatched to its destination. No complaints on our part were tolerated. Many times we have been impotent witnesses of cruelties almost unbelievable in a people which pretend to be civilized.

"One of the signers of this letter was once struck several times with a sabre for having dared to protest against the insufficiency of our food.

"A Russian serving a ten years sentence, on one occasion asked permission for taking a walk, as allowed by the regulations, instead of going to work, as he had been ordered to do. For his audacity he was beaten unmercifully with wet towels by four soldiers, who belabored him so fiercely that the poor man was unable to move for a whole week after.

"Among us was a French civilian who had been sentenced to thirteen years. This man, whose mental faculties had become somewhat deranged, persisted one day in singing the 'Marseillaise' over and over again. To punish him for this grievous offence he was held under a faucet with running hot water by some non-commissioned officers with whom he was in disfavour. It took six weeks three of them in the hospital, before the victim was able to be about again.

"Our isolation from the outer world was complete. Three-quarters of an hour a day was all the time we had for recreation, and we spent it walking back and forth between two high walls. Absolute silence was enjoined on us, under pain of three to thirteen days of extra hard confinement in our cells. At the infliction of such punishment the culprits were shackled hands and feet, the cell was kept in perfect darkness, and the daily food ration was limited to 300 grams of black bread. The ordinary rations were, for that matter, not very much better; in the morning a quart of some chicory decoction, at dinner time a kind of vegetable soup and at night a few more spoonfuls of the same.

"Packages addressed to us were opened in our presence but their contents were not given to us until our discharge from prison. Insufficient nourishment, lack of fresh air and mental suffering, too, made us so weak that the least effort almost exhausted us. If any one asked for medical attendance, the jeering reply was:—

"You are here to suffer, not to be petted".

This pathetic letter was signed by six French non-commissioned officers and soldiers.

THREE ARAB ARMIES OPERATE

London, June 27.—Accounts of the uprising against the Turks in Arabia show that the operations which resulted in the capture of the principal seaports and other cities by the rebels apparently were carefully conceived and systematically carried out.

It appears from news received in Cairo, says Reuter's correspondent, that the Grand Sherif of Mecca raised three armies, the commands of which he gave to his three eldest sons. The first of these, under Sherif Forisae is besieging Medina, the city containing the tomb of Mohammed; the second, under Sherif Abdulla, occupied Taif, 65 miles south east of Mecca, making prisoners of the garrison, while the third captured Jiddah, the chief seaport of Arabia, imprisoning the defenders. While besieging Jiddah the Arabian forces warned the garrison not to destroy its arms and ammunition and consequently a battery of field guns, numerous rifles and quick-firers and a great quantity of ammunition were captured.

Censured Enver Pasha.

Apparently, says the despatch, the Grand Sherif and his followers decided to suppress all traces of the Turks in their country, cutting the telegraph lines, tearing up the road bed of the Hijaz railway, and destroyed the stations for nearly 100 miles to the north in order to prevent the Turks from sending reinforcements. It is related this when Enver Pasha visited Hijaz five months ago the Grand Sherif told him he was an ignorant youth who had dragged Turkey to her destruction.

It is harmful to silk stockings to iron them.

Madge—"Am I the first girl you ever loved?" Ted—"No, my dear; but I hope that you will be the last."—Judge.

British Bombardment Continues

MORE GAINS FOR THE ITALIAN TROOPS

FURTHER SUCCESSES BY THE ITALIAN TROOPS REPORTED

General Cadorna's Men Have Captured Austrian Positions Between Posina and Postico Villy--Bulgaria Has Closed Her Frontier Against Roumania and Developments Are Expected---Berlin Again Refers to Heavy Bombardment By British.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ROME, June 28.—Italian troops have captured Austrian positions between Posina and Astico Villy, in the continuation of theif Trentino offensive, it was officially announced to-day.

The capture of Monte Gaimonde and Cairojo was announced.

Pressing forward on the Asagio plateau, the Italians have reached the slopes of Monte Rastainterrotto and Monte Moagiagh, and in the extreme north have begun to approach Galmara Valley.

For the first time in many days, the War Office reported active artillery fighting on the Isonzo front, announcing the capture of 353 prisoners and two machine guns.

PARIS (French Official Communique), June 29.—Violent fighting occurred last night on the east bank of the Meuse, northwest of Verdun, but the situation was unchanged, the War Office announced to-day.

The Germans made a vigorous counter-attack northwest of Hill 321, attempting to retake positions captured by the French.

The French repulsed them here with grenades, and with screen fire broke up enemy attacks between Fleury and east of the Vaux-Capitre woods. The heaviest fighting went on around the Thiaumont wood.

West of the Meuse artillery duels occurred last night in the regions of Avocourt and Chattancourt. There was grenade fighting around Hill 304 and on Dead Man's Hill.

South of Lassigny the Germans made several night attacks against small posts, but were everywhere repulsed.

In the Champagne, French fire dispersed a strong German reconnaissance attempting to reach the French lines near St. Souplet.

LONDON, June 28.—Motion to quash the treason indictment against Sir Roger Casement on the ground that it was faulty, was over-ruled this afternoon by Lord Justice Readin and Associate Justices, after hearing lengthy arguments by both sides.

BULGARIA CLOSES HER FRONTIER AGAINST ROUMANIA

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 28.—A heavily consored Bucharest despatch, telegraphed via Athens, reported that Bulgaria had closed her frontier against Roumania. Bulgarian troops were reported to be concentrating along the Roumanian frontier.

The Evening News received a Bucharest despatch reporting that the Roumanian Cabinet at a special session took special steps as a result of Bulgaria's movements.

Momentous declaration expected from Roumania any time.

Berlin Believes An Onslaught Is Coming

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 28.—Berlin despatches to-day were silent on the latest Balkan developments, but laid heavy emphasis on the continued bombardment of German lines opposite the British front.

The cannonade, Berlin believes, is a systematic attempt to wreck German defensive works in preparation for a great infantry onslaught.

Correspondents in Switzerland reported to-day that the successes of the Russian and Italian offensives are causing the greatest consternation in Vienna. The Austrians are clamouring for the abandonment of the Verdun offensive by the Germans and the sending of more troops to the Austrian front.

LONDON, June 28.—The Italian steamer Clara has been sunk.

THE T. A. S. HOLD THEIR ANNUAL PICNIC JULY 1st

GOT NO MONEY FROM GERMANY STATES CASEMENT

In a Formal Statement to the Jury Accused Denied That the Irish Rebellion Was Inspired in Germany

LONDON, June 28.—When the Casement case began this morning the Court ordered the defence to proceed with its evidence.

Frances P. Doyle, Philadelphia Attorney, solicitor for Casement, announced before the opening of Court that no witnesses would be called for the defence, but the arguments of counsel would be supplemented by a statement from the prisoner. He added that no witnesses were available in England, and the Government would not permit Casement's material witnesses being brought from Germany.

Taking the stand in his own defence, Sir Roger Casement this afternoon denied that the Irish rebellion was in any way inspired by Germany.

Casement made a formal statement to the jury. He denied that he had received any money from Germany.

"The charge that the Irish rebellion was inspired in Germany is untrue," he said. "It was neither made nor directed by Germans."

He spoke earnestly but with a slight show of nervousness.

Casement denied he asked Irish prisoners in German prison camps to fight with the Turks. His denial that he had ever received German money was most emphatic.

"Those who know me know that I never sold myself to any man or any Government," he declared. "I left Germany poorer than I entered."

Stores Will Close Early

Dry Goods Stores Announce Early Closing For Two Months

During the months of July and August the drygoods stores will close each day except Saturday at 5:30 p.m., and will close each Thursday at 12:30 noon. This has been the practice of downtown drygoods merchants for some years and as on previous occasions the buying public is asked to co-operate. Do your shopping as early as possible on Thursday morning so that the store staffs may be able to get away on time and enjoy the afternoon holiday.

The same holds good on all other days. Half an hour off a long summer's day means much to the store clerk.

GUNNER CHANDLER 4th BATTERY C. F. A. KILLED AT FRONT

Signaller Albert V. Cutt Wounded---More Peterboro' Names on the Casualty List--News From Barrieffeld Camp---93rd Battalion Orders--To-day's General Military News

To-day's official casualty lists contain the names of two Peterborough ..men, who have been hit in the recent fighting.

Corp. Jas. E. Chandler, of the 4th Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, has been killed in action. His name appears in to-day's list. Corporal Chandler enlisted here with the 24th Field Battery's quota for the First Contingent, and went overseas as a member of the 4th Battery. Before enlisting he was employed on the Trent Canal and resided on Dublin street.

Signaller A. V. Cutt, reported wounded, enlisted here with the 39th Battalion early in 1915, and went overseas with the 39th, being afterwards transferred to a Canadian Scottish Battalion at the front. Signaller Cutt lived on Western avenue, but the family have since removed to Quebec, where the father, who is a machinist, is employed.

Corporal Frank C. Roberts, writing from the front on June 14th, mentions a pleasing visit from several members of the Mounted Rifles late in May. Among them were Privates Eldred and Theobald. The former is in the hospital as is Private Walter Flowers. Corporal Roberts has been at the front for over nine months, but expects leave of absence early in July.

Pte. J. Young of the Princess Pats who has been in hospital for over a year, has finally been discharged from the convalescent home, Kingston and is at the home of his brother, Weller street. Pte. Young who enlisted in the West was one of the original Princess Pats and was wounded and gassed.

Sergt. T. Breen of the 170th Battalion of Toronto, and his wife, were visiting their sister-in-law, Mrs. A. McBride, of 625 Aylmer street, over the week end. Sergt. McBride and Sergt. Breen were both in the South African war together.

Lieutenant A. E. Brittain company sergeant Major in the original Princess Pats who left Toronto shortly after the outbreak of war has returned to undertake educational work among recruits. The returned officer has spent 11 months in the trenches. Lieut Brittain lived at 1054 Queen Street east, Toronto. He is the sole survivor of the ten company sergeant-majors of the famous regiment. He was wounded at Ypres, May 1915 and received his promotion on the field. Lieut. Brittain was at one time drill instructor for the 57th regiment Peterborough rangers.

"We will win as soon as we have the guns and ammunition," said the returned soldier. "We are catching the Germans now in ammunition."

Mrs. R. J. Kidd, 33 Benson Avenue is in receipt of a letter from her son Signaller Percy Clifton Kidd, 5th Battalion, 2nd Brigade, 1st Canadian Division. Clifton was admitted to No. 3 Div. Amb. Rest Camp on April 9th, suffering from shell shock and a broken bone in the foot, after spending nine weeks in different hospitals in France. He was transferred on June 15th to No. 4 General Hospital, Denmark Hill, London, England. His letter of to-dry reads in part:

Dear Mother,—I am getting along nicely, hope to be about soon. My neck and head still bother me a good deal, but I do not get dizzy as easily. I see by the papers that our boys are getting it pretty hot just now.

Give my love and best regard to all,
Your loving son,
CLIFTON.

Don't Miss These

The Examiner has received from a Peterborough young lady now in England a series of articles on war time scenes in the old country, the first of which "The Scarlet Cross" appears in to-day's issue. The articles which will be published over the nom de plume of "A Canadian Overseas" will appear in the Examiner from day to day.

Drowning Fatality At Burleigh Falls

PTE. E. SMITH,
Whose Daughter Lilian was drowned at Burleigh Falls last night. Pte. Smith, who enlisted here with the 39th, is now at the front.

Lilian Francis Smith, of This City, Lost Her Life When Boat Was Carried Over the Dam at Burleigh Falls—Two Others Had Narrow Escapes.

WERE OUT FISHING

Another drowning fatality was recorded last evening when Lilian Francis Smith of this city lost her life when a boat containing Mrs. Darcy and Violet Smith was carried over the dam at Burleigh Falls. The other two occupants of the boat had a narrow escape. A fisherman who was close at hand noticed Violet struggling in the water and succeeded in pulling her out by the hair of the head. Mrs. Darcy was saved after a strenuous effort on the part of two men, whose attention was attracted to the scene by the cries of the drowning women. The accident occurred yesterday afternoon a few minutes after four o'clock. Mrs. Darcy and the two Smith sisters, went out in a boat with the object of doing some fishing. They were apparently unaware that the stop logs had been removed allowing a much larger volume of water to flow over the dam than is usually the case. The boat was caught by the current and swept over the dam, capsizing in the swirling waters below. The three occupants were thrown out and carried for some little distance before two of them could be rescued.

Body Not Recovered.

Up until late to-day a searching party had failed to locate the body of Lilian Smith. It was impossible to tell which way the body went. Deceased was fourteen years of age, and is a daughter of Private Edward Samuel Smith of the 4th Machine Gun Brigade, 2nd Canadian Division, and was formerly a member of the 39th Battalion. Mrs. Smith and seven children reside at 79 Smith street. Mrs. Smith went to Burleigh Falls last evening upon receipt of the tragic information and returned to-day. It is about three weeks since the family returned from England, where they went following the departure of Private Smith. On Tuesday last two of the girls, including the deceased, went to Burleigh Falls, where they secured employment.

Mrs. Haynes of this city, is a grandmother of the victim.

Mexicans Will Put to Death American Soldiers If Attempt to Rescue Them By Force Is Made

THE SITUATION TO-DAY

WASHINTON, U.S.A., June 28. — By some international critics here it is stated to-day that if Carranza does not back down and order giving up of American trooper prisoners within a few hours President Wilson will go before Congress to-morrow with a demand for authority to rescue them by force.

A despatch from El Paso reports Mexican General Tevino as declaring if the United States tries to rescue by force the prisoners will likely be executed.

President Wilson will not agree to Mexico's demand that Mexicans in U. S. hands be restored to Mexico in exchange for Americans.

KELLY WILL ADDRESS JURY

WINNIPEG, Man., June 28. —It is now stated that Controller Thomas Kelly himself will address the jury following the Crown address, which will end this afternoon. It is expected the case will go to the jury to-day.

PRESS COMMENT ON APPOINTMENT

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 28. — The Daily News says: As a fitness of the Duke of Devonshire's appointment, it is a case for the nominee to justify his choice. The Duke has to his credit of political career, which if not marked by any particular distinction, has, at any rate, been free from any breath of reproach."

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "The Cavendish type is not one of exuberant brilliance, but is unmatched in staying power and balance of judgment and discretion."

LIVE STOCK MARKET

SIR SAM "IN WRONG."

If Sir Sam Hughes were to visit Peterborough to-day, after the "exhibit" of nepotism he filed in the city yesterday, he wouldn't be met my many brass bands—he would, instead, need a strong body guard. If the Examiner were to voice all the hot indignation felt and expressed, expressed especially by members of his own political party, over the "gross favouritism," the "nauseating nepotism," implied in appointing a "Grit discard" to the position of "superintendent" of "Camp Borden"—by the way, a "new office created specially for the occasion," its pages would break into flame. There is no need for the Examiner to deal with this subject. Sir Sam's party friends, heretofore staunch defenders and admirers, will say enough, if they have the courage to say to his face what they are saying on the streets to-day; and the remarks of "candid friends" cannot be considered as the voice of party prejudice.

WE MUST DO OUR BEST.

Government journals are making much of the inefficiency of our United States neighbours in equipping their troops, for active service against Mexico, and contrasting their slowness of mobilization with the speed made by Canada in getting large forces in the field. No one will not admit that Canada did fairly well in the initial work of mobilizations. We Canadians do many things, except talk about our achievements better than our neighbours. But the fact that we have done better in mobilization than the United States seem to be doing, does not break the force of the contention that we might have done better; might have prevented the virtual embezzlement and rake-offs that have not only impeded the good work but made a big hole in our finances, and worst of all set a bad example. It is to be admitted that the government have done better in the matter of mobilization—equipping the soldiers—than it has done in raising armies. The success of recruiting in Canada does not reflect so much credit upon government management as upon the spontaneous patriotism of the young men of the country. Good as the government's action may be regarded in helping provide fighting forces for the Empire, it would have been better if graft and spoil-getting had not been allowed quite so free a hand. Recruiting, splendid as it has been, would have been far more satisfactory if the government had shown a greater interest in it. The call from every journal almost, no matter what the party colour; the call of patriotic citizens, of military men, is for the adoption of system in recruiting, for registration of the eligible young manhood of the country. Unless the government shall adopt some means to practically identify itself with the recruiting interest, we shall not make the desired progress in completing our half-million quota. It is the experience of all concerned that the last hundred to complete the strength of a battalion is harder to get than the other ten hundred; and we shall find it harder to raise the lacking 150,000 of recruits to make our contribution of men total 500,000. Here comes in the necessity of the government systematizing and encouraging recruiting in some effective way. Private patriotic enterprise will not antagonize, but cooperate with a practical increase of government interest in recruiting. Canadians and the government must not only do well, as both have done in helping on the war, but both must do our best. The people are doing their best. Will the government wake up? If the Minister of Militia put into recruiting the enthusiasm he seems to throw into providing for "my friend Allison," and some of his undeserving relatives, he would be serving the country and the Empire better. If he would even tone down his bluff and bounce and not antagonize, and overlook, capable military men in the interests of favouritism, the military interests of the country would be more effectively served.

LEADERSHIP AND RESPONSIBILITY.

The pessimist, like the poor, we shall always have with us. There are many people who see only the darkest side of the war as well as other things. The war is looking after itself very well indeed. Its management is in the hands of strong men all round the allied high commands. As to other things there are some who despair of things in Canada; they see high treason in the least criticism of the government, which is doing its best to carry the country triumphantly through the crisis. This criticism, in large measure deserved, is as nothing compared to similar domestic conditions that affect and have affected other countries. The Toronto Telegram points out that the strong leadership of Abraham Lincoln carried the United States through a far worse home conditions than, putting the worst light on them, are in existence in Canada. Referring to the situation in the United States in 1862-3, the Telegram says:

It was on a divided country such as this that Lincoln had to enforce his Enrolment Act that provided for the draft. The country was afire with Democratic oratory. Incendiary utterances leaped from the Democratic press. But the troops at the front needed reinforcements, and Lincoln pressed fearlessly on. The Democratic justices of the Supreme Court declared his Enrolment Act unconstitutional, but he did not falter. News of Meade's victory at Gettysburg coming simultaneously with the opening draft in New York city held back the riots there for a few days. But they burst with fury on Monday, July 13th, and raged for the three following days. Starting at an enrolment office at Third avenue and Forty-sixth street, they swept over the city, carrying murder and arson in their train. Negroes were clubbed to death, stores were sacked and burned, hospitals and other structures were destroyed. State militia and regular troops from the army of the Potomac restored order, but not before $2,000,000 in property had been destroyed, while 13 rioters were killed and 18 wounded in one engounter with the troops.

The Telegram remarks in addition that it was in the face of difficulties like these that efficient leadership in the United States carried the war to a successful conclusion and says that "any troubles, political, religious or racial that might threaten Canada is either now or in the future are trivia by comparison." It concludes its reasoning thus:

Our timorous leaders may tremble for the political future of their parties, but there is no suggestion of disloyalty to the Crown or that the war should not be carried to a victorious conclusion coming from any quarter. A few firebrands in Quebec may be trying to create political capital by stirring Quebec to a conviction that the French-Canadian should dominate the public school system of Ontario. Spineless leaders may wail that a peep behind war contract scenes might a tale unfold to the lasting advantage of the enemy. But, on the whole, Canada is coming through a world crisis, practically leaderless, but without any complications to cause serious apprehension.

Strong leadership is what carried the United States through a worse crisis, than the little surface ripples that disturb the political millpond in Canada. But these ripples, without strong leadership in Canada, may grow into tidal waves. Have we that strong leadership in Canada? Sir Robert Borden as a man is clean and sincere; he is as strong in oratory as he is weak in action. As a leader, has he, or does he, exhibit the necessary qualities or strength and decision that are needed from a leader at this or at any time? Does he lead or is he led? Isn't it an admitted fact that his whip hand is partially paralyzed? Does he not let expediency too much guide his action or inaction? Has he dealt with the treasonable menace that Nationalism represents and has developed under his leadership, with the firm hand that should rule? Does he hold his subordinates in the party and the cabinet to their place and work as strictly and unswervingly as strong leadership should do? Is he true to his trust in respect of either his party or public interests in letting the one department of all, the militia department swing leader and party and cabinet at will?

Is he true to his party, not to speak of higher interests, when he allows a subordinate to fly in the face of the party, in the face of consistency, by promoting to a government position of big emolument, if not of responsibility, a relative who, in the interests of the party was tried and found wanting and declared unworthy of trust; and overlooking faithful members of the party equally capable, to say the least, or, at least, "without a past?" If Sir Robert were as strong as he should be would he consent to subordinate action that in his heart he condemns, and that the members of his party, his supporters who look to him for example and leadership, condemn as a travesty upon common decency and honesty, and as ingratitude and injustice to themselves?

After all, this is a small matter compared with the misfortune of a leadership that permits such things, which are only a type of other things easily possible of development.

FOUNDATIONLESS ATTACKS UPON SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines in the Ontario Government, has been distinguishing himself of late by making a virulent and unfair attack on Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He has charged the Liberal leader with having sought to compel the Dominion Parliament to dictate to the Legislature of Ontario how it should conduct the affairs of Ontario, and that the Liberals "fully knowing what they were doing, connived and planned to make the Ontario school question an issue in Dominion politics so as to solidify the Province of Quebec, and to do that in the midst of this awful war for no other purpose than party advantage." These statements are deliberately misleading. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not the man to seek to violate provincial rights; if he were he would not have taken the stand on the Manitoba School question which he did. He has taken no contradictory attitude on the bilingual school question. In the House of Commons, on May 10 last, discussing this very question of bilingual school regulations, he said:

I rise, sir, not for the purpose of giving advice or admonition to the Province of Ontario, in behalf of its Majesty's subjects of French origin in that province, who complain that, by reason of a statute passed by the province, they have been deprived of rights in the matter of education, which they have enjoyed, themselves and their forefathers before them, ever since Canada became a possession of the British Crown.

Where is there any evidence of dictation in the foregoing? There is simply a plea to the Province of Ontario to deal with a grievance, real or allesed, on the part of the French-Canadians of the province, in a conciliatory manner, and as a French-Canadian he could not have taken any different attitude. He further said:

I want every child in the Province of Ontario to receive the benefit of an English education. Wherever he may go on this continent, I want him to be able to speak the language of the great majority of the people on this continent. I want it, I say, not only because it is the law of the province, but because of merely utilitarian considerations. No man on this continent is equipped for the battle of life unless he has an English education. I want every child to have an English education.

Sir Wilfrid has no sympathy with men of the Bourassa type, from whom he has received nothing but insult and opposition, nor has he any desire to prevent French-Canadian children obtaining a proper knowledge of the English language. Furthermore, he has always stoutly condemned the course of the Quebec Nationalists in seeking to prevent recruiting, and has himself addressed many meetings of his compatriots, in the course of which he has urged them with all the vehemence and fervor of which he is capable to enlist for the war. Here is a stiff further extract from his speech in the Lapointe motion:

Sir, I am not prepared to say that my fellow-countrymen of French origin have no rights in Ontario; but I am prepared to say this, and I want my words to be heard throughout the length and breadth of the land: Whether my fellow-countrymen have rights or no rights in Ontario, whether those rights are granted or denied, these considerations are no bar to the duty which the French-Canadians owe to themselves and to the honour of their race to come forward in their fullest numbers and take part in the great struggle that is going on to-day in the land of their ancestors for the cause of freedom, and of the civilization of mankind."

It may suit bitter partisans of the type of Hon. G. H. Ferguson and of the Toronto News to seek, as the Conservative party in Canada has ever done in the past, to appeal to race prejudice wherever it is thought possible to accomplish party ends thereby, but it is dastardly and unpatriotic work. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has always refused to resort to such tactics, and his voice has ever rung out in favour of Canadian unity and of British connection. The man who sent no less than three Canadian contingents to South Africa, thus setting an important precedent, who gave the Mother Country a preference in the markets of Canada in the face of the protests of the Conservative party, and who established Imperial penny postage, ought to be safe from such attacks as he is being subjected to. What is more, during the present war his attitude throughout has been most patriotic. True, Quebec should have responded better to the call of duty than it has done, but it is no fault of his that it has not done so, but rather of the men who took the Nationalist viper to their bosoms and gave it warmth and strength.—Brantford Expositor.

The Kitchener Memorial Service In Old St. Paul's

A moving impression of the great service in St. Paul's for the dead soldier, Lord Kitchener, is given by Mr. James Douglas in the London Star:—

An age was there as well as a world, with divine music interpreting its awe, its reverence, its grief, and its unwavering faith. Never has music touched hearts more subtly or more profoundly.

The service seemed to be like a great Miltonic sonnet, ebbing and flowing from majesty to majesty, from sublimity to sublimity. It was by turns august and homely, proud and compassionate, lordly and contrite. It rose to the height of hope and sank to the very deeps of anguish. It touched every beautiful and tender chord in the human breast. It left us shaken and almost broken with its mystical poetry and sorrow.

There were many great men round the King and the two Queens, but they were all merged in the greatness of death. The sense of brotherhood and comradeship melted us all into one marvellous sodality of patriotism. We were one people under the dome.

Then a great hush, out of which stole the sweetness of that wondrous hymn, "Abide with me." It adumbrated our inmost thoughts of the soldier's last home in the desolate solitude of the Orkneys:—

"Abide with me: fast falls the eventide:
The darkness deepens: Lord with me abide."

From that grave and serene mood the service swept perfectly from phase to phase of beauty. Everything seemed to be charged with an appropriate message.

"Out of the deep have I called unto Thee, O Lord . . . O let Thine ears consider well the voice of my complaint. If Thou, Lord, wilt be extreme to mark what is done amiss, O Lord, who may abide it? My soul fleeth unto the Lord: before the morning watch, I say, before the morning watch O Israel, trust in the Lord, for with the Lord there is mercy. And He shall redeem Israel."

After the lesson, I. Corinthians xv., 20, read with resonant simplicity by Dean Ingle came the heart-breaking Dead March in "Saul" played by the band of the Royal Engineers.

It opened with a terrible volley of drum-taps that beat on every heart. Then it broke in rafales and gusts of brazen sound that seemed to be the echo of the never-silent guns coming across the sea. It rang in our ears like the very voice of battle and it hurt us, wounded us, hurt us, and wounded us so sorely that we could hardly bear the victorious cry of faith in the close. Wave after wave of sublime statement surged through the grey spaces of the Cathedral, and humbled us all with a knowledge of our mortal frailty.

There was a gracious fitness in the hymn which led us up to the close. "For all the Saints who from their labours rest," for in it we found this verse:—

"And when the strife is fierce, the warfare long
Steals on the ear the distant triumph-song,
And hearts are brave again, and arms are strong.
Alleluia!

The triumph-song may be distant, but it seemed to be nearer as the hymn died away and as we stood up after the benediction, pronounced by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and listened to the silver grief of "The Last Post": the slow passionate cry of the trumpets seemed to fall from heaven. Again and again, between dramatic pause, the trumpets repeated their long cry, and rent us with their exquisite sorrow.

I think we could have borne no more. It was not a congregation that was shedding its tears; it was an Empire.

Insight Into Great Work The Red Cross Workers Are Doing

What the Comforts They Supply Really Mean to the Men Who Have Gone to the Front to Fight Our Battles—A Call to Continue at Full Speed Right to the End.

(Adelaide Plumtree in the Saturday Night.)

"Are socks Red Cross goods?" asked a recent visitor to the Dominion Headquarters of the Red Cross in Canada. "It all depends on who wears them," was the answer.

And this is true; it is the nature of the recipient and not the nature of the article which determines whether a pair of socks is "Red Cross" or "Soldiers' Comforts," or just dull domestic "socks"—or even "sox". So it is with persons and places and property in time of war. Are they ministering to the need of sick or wounded of the army or navy? If so they may assume the sign of the Red Cross, and look for immunity from attack or capture at the hand of every civilized nation. Doctors, chaplains, nurses, stretcher bearers, ambulance drivers, in fact all the personnel of the Army Medical Corps devoted to the care of the sick and the wounded have the first right to assume the sacred badge, and right well they have earned it in the discharge of their arduous and often dangerous duties on the field and in the hospitals. But behind the Army Medical Corps, ready to augment its supplies in emergency or to add those "extras" which in a government department might be criticised as "luxuries," but which transform a hospital ward into a home, stands the voluntary Society of the Red Cross, sharing with the Army Medical Corps the right to use the Red Cross, inasmuch as it shares also the duty of providing for the needs of the sick and wounded men.

And how varied are those needs! In the war-zone are thousands of men in every stage of sickness, needing skilled attendance, often in peril of death, yet having continually to be moved farther and farther back from the battle zone so that the more lately wounded may take their place in the endless stream. To the ordinary problems of a great civil hospital are added this ever-present necessity of prompt evacuation of the wounded, with all the attendant difficulties of transportation; the possible arrival at any moment of new convoys of patients; the necessity of coping with such problems as laundry work under war conditions, which entail scarcity of labor and supplies; the need for major operations not at any specified times, but whenever the enemy's guns or mines may create the necessity; the chance that the fortune of war may allow of the destruction of hospital stores, or the delay of essential reinforcements of staff or supplies. Such are some of the difficulties of the Army Medical Corps' work within the war zone, and it is obvious that the Red Cross Society's supplies—a second string to the bow of the Army Medical Corps—have an immense value here. In this zone the Red Cross stands for extra motor ambulances or an additional car on a hospital train, or a canteen at a siding where exhausted patients receive reviving food or drink, or a supply of blankets or bed linen when the ordnance stores have been used up, or resterlized dressings when the overworked nurses have no time for preparation between one operation and the next; or for some easily prepared food or delicacy not included in the ordinary hospital fare, or even for the anaesthetic which spares to a war-worn hero the torture of the knife or lancet.

When the patient arrives at a hospital where he is to be nursed to convalescence, the Red Cross Society's help assumes other forms. As the wounded Canadian lands in England, he is handed a blue post card bearing a Red Cross, addressed to the Canadian Red Cross Society's Information Department in London. As soon as he arrives at the hospital to which he is assigned, he gets a nurse to post this card carrying the information that he is in such and such an hospital. By return of post, he receives from the Information Department a "welcome" parcel, containing perhaps some socks, and cigarettes, or candies—just to show that Canada has not forgotten him—and a letter asking if he needs anything which the Red Cross can supply. Next comes the visitor, sent also by the Red Cross (Canadian) who is prepared to write letters home for him, and perhaps to talk to him about Toronto or Winnipeg or Vancouver, and to show him once more that Canada is thinking of him individually; while games, or magazines, or a gramaphone testify to the Society's work for the hospital at large.

And then our patient is convalescent and once more he needs change, and once more the Red Cross Society's help assumes a new form. He is now well enough to get up and a wheeled chair provided by the Red Cross receives him and carries him out into the sunshine where a warm Red Cross quilt, perhaps embroidered with texts or mottoes, is wrapped around his knees, for wounded men are chilly. A little later and he is able to walk into the Red Cross recreation room, and reads the illustrated papers or the newspaper from his home town in Canada—supplied through the Red Cross Society. Soon he tires of the hospital and its grounds, and he longs to get out into the world once more, but he is too weak to walk. What can be done for him? Once more the Red Cross comes to the rescue.

A motor car appears, driven by a skilful uniformed "chauffeuse," one of a "fleet" of cars, owned, driven, cleaned and cared for by women who are thus serving the Red Cross as truly as the brassarded nurse or the bandage rolling worker.

This splendid organisation for the care of our wounded Canadians is the work of Lady Drummond, who presides over the somewhat inadequately named "Information Department" of the Canadian Red Cross in London. We are not surprised that an official of the Australian War Contingent Association said to a Canadian lady that "the visiting and information system of the Canadian Red Cross was more perfectly organized than anything of which he knew."

Nor is the organisation merely on paper. Most emphatically it is an organisation that "works." A lady in Toronto recently received a letter from her nephew, an officer in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, in which he says that immediately on reaching England he received a letter from Lady Drummond asking whether there was anything that he needed which could be supplied to him through the Canadian Red Cross Society, and adding that the Society would feel honored if able to help him in any way.

And so we return to the point from which we started, having discovered that both a pair of socks and a motor car may be "Red Cross goods" if they are needed in the care of the sick or wounded; for it is the end which not only justifies but consecrates the means in the service of the Red Cross.

It is to secure such service as this for Canadians overseas that the people of Canada have loosened their purse-strings and poured a golden stream into the treasury of the Red Cross. And it is in return for such service that a wounded Canadian wrote recently from England to an official of the Red Cross in Canada: "Till I got your letter I did not know that anybody in the world cared whether I lived or died. God bless the Red Cross."

"BULL OF BULLS" AGAIN A SUBJECT

Khartoum, June 27.—The brilliant little campaign in Darfur, which ended with the defeat by the British troops of Sultan Ali Dinar on May 22, will bring under the British domain about 100,000 square miles of territory inhabited by a population estimated at at between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000. Descendants of the Sultan Mohammed have ruled in the country for approximately four hundred years.

Until 1874 Darfur was entirely independent, but then it was conquered by the notorious slave dealer, Zobeir Pasha, who carried on a savagely cruel rule of terror over the natives under the nominal suzerainty of Egypt for ten years, until he was ousted by the Mahdi. At that time Slatin Pasha, the Austrian-Egyptian, was the official representative of the Egyptian government.

When the Anglo-British forces later subdued the Mahdi and brought the Sultan back into Egyptian possession, Sultan Ali Dinar, who had been confined for several years in one of the Mahdi's lothsome jails, was placed on the throne, and he governed his people with all the savagery of an uncivilized Eastern potentate, at the same time maintaining friendly relations with the Anglo-Egyptian authorities at Cairo.

The "Bull of Bulls," which is one of the titles of the Sultan of Darfur, apparently thought that the time had come when the world war broke out to display his strength, and he gathered a considerable army of tribesmen on the frontier of his territory with the intention, it was understood, of advancing on Egypt, which he heard was weak defended and at his mercy.

This assemblage of warriors soon came to the notice of the Anglo-Egyptian staff, and a mobile column was immediately organised to meet any advance. The British officer in command eventually came to the conclusion when he discovered how well armed the native forces were, that it would be advisable to strike the first blow. The British column thereupon took the offensive, with the result that the natives were put to flight after an engagement in which they lost thousands in killed and wounded. A fighting aeroplane took part in the engagement and afterwards scattered the fugitives fleeing with their Sultan to the hills.

Considerable discussion is proceeding here as to the future government of Darfur, in which subject the French also are interested, as the territory adjoins their Soudanese possessions.

The prevalent idea is that a British resident will be appointed and that a member of the former ruling family may be placed on the throne as nominal ruler.

Most of the inhabitants of Darfur are of mixed Arab and negro race, but there are numerous pure Arabs and pure negroes and a liberal infusion of tribesmen from other parts of Africa. Many of the people are quite peaceful camel and cattle owners, and there is considerable commercial intercourse between them and the immediately adjacent countries. The general education of the inhabitants is on a very low grade, and consists mainly in a knowledge of the Koran, which is confined to the males.

Fight For Erin, Not Kaiser Casement's Line of Defence

English Knight Placed On Trial For His Life—Defence Finds Fault With Indictment

LONDON, June 27.—Sir Roger Casement, who was attested while trying to smuggle arms and ammunition into Ireland for the rebels, was placed on trial for his life in the High Court of Justice yesterday, charged with high treason. The trial of his alleged associate, the soldier, Bailey, will take place later.

A huge crowd gathered outside the court seeking admittance. Only ticket holders, however, were permitted to enter. Alterations had been made to accommodate the large number of persons whose official connection with the case made their presence necessary. In addition to counsel and witnesses and newspaper correspondents, a special panel of 150 talesmen has been summoned. In the centre of the room was a big array of counsel, their gowns and wigs giving a picturesue touch to the scene.

Bowed to His Judges.

Casement presented a far different appearance from that which characterized him when he was arraigned in Bow Street Court for his preliminary hearing. At that time he wore a wrinkled suit of tweeds, his shoes were unlaced and his beard and hair were uncombed and ragged. To-day, he was faultlessly attired in a black cut-away coat, and wore a fresh white collar and black necktie. His hair and beard had been trimmed and were carefully combed. He was calm and composed and smiled as he nodded to his friends among the spectators.

Presiding at the trial, clad in bright scarlet robes and powdered wigs, are Baron Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, and Justices Avory and Horridge. Sir Roger bowed to the Justices and the Chief Justice returned the salutation with equal formality. The prisoner stood leaning on the iron railing, with folded arms, while the clerk read the long indictment.

Exception to Indictment.

The indictment followed in legal points that returned against Col. Arthur Lynch, who fought against the British in the Boer War. When asked if he was guilty or not guilty, Sir Roger bowed and murmured something which was inaudible. His chief counsel, Alexander Sullivan of Dublin, arose quickly and argued that the indictment set forth was "no offence known to the law," and that none of the acts specified was alleged to have taken place in any territory over which the King has any jurisdiction. After consultation the court ruled that any exceptions to the indictment in a case of such importance would be taken after the hearing without prejudice to the prisoner.

Jury Selected.

Jurors from the panel were called forward. The prisoner's counsel objected to the first, who wore on his coat sleeve the khaki band of men attested for the army and waiting to be called up. Several peremptory challenges were made by both sides. One man eliminated by the Crown was named John Scanlan. Another talesman with a khaki band was excused because he had been called to the army for July 8. After eleven jurors had been seated in the box there was great difficulty in finding the twelfth. The defence challenged "for cause" more than a dozen in succession. At 11.10 o'clock the jury was completed. Each juror took the oath separately "to true deliverance make between our sovereign lord the King and the prisoner at the Bar."

The jury is composed of middle-aged men, apparently of the small merchant and clerk class. Samuel Saunders, being a Jew, took the oat with his hat on, but had to repeat it because he held the testament in his left hand instead of the right. The jury was sworn three-quarters of an hour after the court sat.

Scene in Court.

The ventilation and acoustics of the room are defective. The judge's bench runs along one side with the high iron railed docks and the jurors' box flanking it on the left and right. The lawyers sit at tables in the well, back of which rise half a dozen rows of benches which today were filled with barristers in white wigs and black gowns, and with a large number of newspaper reporters. Above is a small gallery filled with spectators. Over the dock, in a small balcony, were half a dozen women, including the wife of the Chief Justice.

Attorney-General's Address.

Attorney-General Sir Frederick Smith made the opening address for the Government. He dwelt on the gravity of high treason and said the jury would have to decide whether there were any extenuating circumstances or whether the offence was an aggravated one "against the Sovereign he formerly served and the country against which he struck." Reviewing the public career of Sir Roger, the Attorney-General said he was "an able, cultivated man, not, as others had been, a lifelong rebel against England, and that for what she stands." It would not be necessary to refer to Sir Roger's pension from this country.

Thank For Knighthood.

The Attorney-General paid a tribute to the public services of Sir Roger, and read a letter which he wrote in 1911 to Foreign Secretary Grey thanking him for being knighted. The letter, said the Attorney-General, was that of a mature man, written almost in the terms of a courtier. What had happened to corrupt the mind of Sir Roger between that time and 1914, when he became a friend of Germany and an enemy of England in her hour of need, the Attorney-General could not say. Sir Roger's last demand for a pension was made in October of 1914.

While the Attorney-General was reviewing Sir Roger's career, the prisoner sat with his head on his hand. A dark green curtain hanging over the door behind the dock made an effective background. After reciting Sir Roger's efforts to organise an Irish brigade among Irish prisoners in Germany, Sir Frederick said:

Task For Defence.

"I pause deliberately to say that if there is any explanation of Sir Roger Casement's original journey to Germany which can be justified or reconciled with his professed allegiance, I hope his counsel will present it."

Sir Frederick turned from the story of Sir Roger's activities in Germany to the landing of the expedition in Ireland, saying: "We must now pass to that unhappy country which has been the scene of so many cruel and cynical conspiracies, but never of one more cruel and cynical than this." The Attorney-General concluded his presentation of the case with these words. "I hope I have outlined the facts without heat and without feeling. Neither in my place would be proper. The prisoner has played a desperate game. Now he is called upon to pay the hazard."

Evidence Begins.

Two Government officials testified to Sir Roger's record in the consular service and his receipt of a pension of £421 on retirement.

Private John Cronin, of the Munster Fusiliers, described Sir Roger's attempts to make enlistments from Irish prisoners in Germany. Sergt. Alexander Sullivan, cross-examining the witness for Sir Roger, partly indicated the line of defence by eliciting replies to the effect that Sir Roger had told prisoners they were to fight for Ireland and would be taken to Ireland if Germany won a sea battle. The witness said he had seen Sir Roger in Cork in 1913 at a meeting for organizing the Irish volunteers. Another Irish soldier, Daniel O'Brien, gave similar testimony.

Oh, My!—They were discussing the recent and further rise in the price of whisky, and "Jamie" bemoaned the fact that whisky was getting far too dear to buy. "I'll no' be surprised, Tam," he added, "if we sune hae tae dae without it!" "Ah, weel, Jamie," said Tam, "I canna say I'm awfu' fond o' whusky. O'er mair than six tumblers o't gies me a sair head!"—G.F.C.

IN THE FLOWER GARDEN

Stake tall growing plants like hollyhocks and delphiniums before windstorms level them.

Sweet peas require plenty of water at the roots and the foliage should be sprayed several times a week.

Rubber bands not too tight, placed over carnation buds before they open will prevent splitting.

Blackbirds and starlings devour a large number of slugs. Toads also help to keep slugs down and so do moles.

If the hoe is idle the garden will suffer.

Box edgings may be trimmed now. Fill up the spaces with new plants.

Perennial phlox make good pot plants for greenhouse and conservatory—pot moderate size plants in 9 or 10 inch pots in good rich earth, mixed with a little sand and well decayed manure. Place the pots in a sheltered place in the border or plunge them, removing to the house when they show bloom.

Flowering begonias with Grevilla robusta, edged with lobelia, make attractive beds.

Ivy leaved geraniums, edged with fuchsia Meteor closely pegged down, also make unusual beds.

Salpiglossis mixed with geraniums gives a relief from the many beds of solid geraniums.

Lawn mowers are not benefitted by leaving them out exposed to the weather. They are made to cut smooth even surfaces of grass and are not intended for cutting sticks, stones or hillocks, or for filling up holes. Manufacturers are frequently blamed for the operator's abuse of the machine.

Grape vines should be sprayed with Bordeaux-arsenate of lead mixture as soon as the fruit sets. Give a second application about ten days later and a third application about two weeks later. This prevents rot and wormy grapes.

A paper bag tied over each bunch of grapes when the fruit is well formed, and left until the grapes are ripe, will give perfect bunches. Birds and insects are kept from the fruit by the bags.

When the June drop is over, thin out the fruit on heavily laden peach trees.

What Does Your Food Cost? You could easily spend two dollars for a meal and not get as much real, body-building nutriment as you get in two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, the food that contains all the muscle-making material in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk or cream will make a complete, perfect meal at a cost of not over five cents. A food for youngsters and grown-ups. Eat it for breakfast with milk or cream; eat it for luncheon with fresh berries or other fruits; a perfect meal for the Spring days.

Pte. Patrick Duggan Describes How He Received His Wound

Interesting Letter From Peterboro' Boy Who Went Overseas With the Royal Montreal Battalion, First Contingent and Saw Much Hard Fighting.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Mr. Chas. Duggan, Aylmer street, has received the following letter from Pte. Patrick Duggan, a former Peterborough boy, who went overseas with the 14th Battalion (Royal Mounted Regiment) and was wounded some time ago after going through all the hard fighting of last year unhurt:

Dear Charley,—I received your ever welcome letter and I was pleased to hear you are quite well. As for myself I am well and in good health. My wound is O.K. It will be healed up in about another week's time. My old boss, Capt. E. A. Whitehead, was killed a couple of weeks ago. I don't suppose there are fifty of the original battalion left. There was a little over a hundred left when I got hit. The three Canadian divisions are at Ypres. We went up there towards the end of March. I was hit on the last day of our first trip in the front line. We were in brigade reserve; previous to that at the Swan Chateau. Our first trip in the trenches at Ypres this year was at a place called the Bluff. It lays on the right of Ypres; that is to say the city, and between Hooge and St. Eloi, with Hill 60 facing half right. The trenches were 40 yards apart. Most of the fighting there is done with rifle grenades, the range being too close for artillery, so trench mortars take their place when the first line is to be bombarded. I was staying at headquarters during our first trip—this was situated at a place called the Dump, about 50 yards behind the front line. Everything went along O. K. up till the morning of the 18th of April, when the Huns started to shell our headquarters with A1 high explosives from the direction of Hooge. They kept this up for about three-quarters of an hour, so after staying under cover for another fifteen minutes we came to the conclusion that they had finished. We then ventured out to see what damage was done. They only made one direct hit and that was in the officers' mess. We hadn't been there five minutes, and I was just mentioning to another fellow something about the officers' mess, certainly looking a "mess," when I heard another fellow whistling through the air. I immediately turned around to make for the sap, that being the nearest place to take cover, but it was already crowded. I happened to be in rather an open space at the time, so there was nothing else to do but drop flat on the ground, which was very uneven, therefore difficult. It was while in the act of doing this I was struck in the back by a piece of the shell. What did it feel like? Well it was just like getting a kick from a horse. With the exception of that I felt nothing else, and took it for granted that I was hit by a piece of hard earth. I had been hit by a hard piece of mud three or four times before, which travels at a great speed, due to the force of the explosion. I got to my feet and an officer pulled me into the sap just as another shell came whistling over. As soon as the officer got me into the sap he asked me where I was hit. I told him I though it was only a piece of mud hit me. However, he insisted upon me showing him my back. I did so, and was very much surprised when he told me a piece of metal had penetrated my back. He dressed me and told me to rest for a while till the shelling had stopped, so I made myself comfortable, and lit a cigarette. While waiting for the shelling to stop I found out too others had been hit by the same shell. Pte. Snow got a piece in the leg and and Pte. Laine a piece in the arm. As soon as the shelling stopped, all three of us walked down to the dressing station, and the doctor redressed by wounds. He told me mine was the most serious case of the three, and that I had better lay down on a stretcher. There was some half dozen or so of wounded comrades in there, so I got down on a stretcher and listened to the conversation that was going on amongst them, the chief subject being 'Blighty,' a term used by the British soldier for England. They were telling each other their chances of getting over there, and what kind of a time they were going to have over there, etc. While waiting for night to approach. This conversation had been going on for an hour or so when the Huns started to shell us again. They opened up fierce this time and put shells all over the place. At one time I thought they would get the dressing station, they were coming so close. Although they were shelling for just on two hours I didn't have a very pleasant time all the same; each time a shell burst near, it lifted me about three inches from the stretcher, so was glad when they quit. Things got pretty quiet after that, and at eight o'clock we were taken to the 2nd Field Ambulance; after being inoculated we were put in a motor ambulance and taken to a clearing station. We slept there over night and were removed next day to the 23rd General Hospital, Etaples. One half of this hospital is Canadian and the other half is occupied by a unit from America. I was put in one of the American wards. I arrived there about 6 p.m. on April 9th, my birthday, and the second one I have spent in France. I was operated upon and had the metal extracted on the 12th. My temperature was about 104 or 105. I left the 23rd General Hospital on April 22nd for England, from Etaples to Boulogne, and then across to Dover in the afternoon. Arrived at Sheffield 12 p.m. midnight, the same day. I had the stitches taken out of my back the next day. By the way, the metal penetrated the small of the back, about four or five inches deep, missing the spine by an inch. On May 23rd I left my bed for the first time. My back was very stiff and I was pretty weak on my legs. I have improved splendidly since. This is a very good hospital and the air here is very bracing. The city of Sheffield itself is very smoky. The hospital is about three miles from the city. Well, I think I have told you all there is to tell, so I will now conclude. Hoping to hear from you again soon.

I remain,

Patrick J. Duggan.

CAPT. BURNHAM AND THE PIGEON CREEK BRIDGE

Barriefield Camp, Kingston, June 27th, 1916

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—As the Pigeon Creek bridge is once more a subject of discussion and correspondence, I do not know that I can do better than say a word in reply through the press.

In 1912 this whole scheme was gone into most thoroughly. A very large deputation of the elected representatives of the counties and townships interested went to Ottawa, and we had the privilege of going into the whole matter most thoroughly with the Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. F. Cochrane, and Sir Sam. Hughes. The Government maps, engineering and otherwise, were inspected, and the Government stated its position.

The Government at that date had power to deal with the swing of the bridge, which is its own property, but it had no power to grant a subsidy. This, however, was to be provided for under the Highways Bill, which was being brought in. Unfortunately this bill was thrown out by the Senate. Hence until we get this put through the Senate, which we hope to do some day, the Federal Government has no power to aid in the development of the country's roadways.

When this matter was up for consideration before, Mr. Ingram, Reeve of Harvey; Mr. Coben, Reeve of Galway, and Mr. Dudman, of Galway, joined me in company with a few others in an earnest effort to open up communication with the north country. It will be remembered that I urged strongly the building of a bridge at Crowe's to join North and South Harvey, and provide another through route. Harvey is greatly handicapped by being cut in two throughout its whole breadth by Pigeon Lake. But we got no support in the localities most interested, and had to decide to wait until the people of the county of Peterborough waked up to the fact that a forward policy for highways and through routes, fish hatcheries, etc., would make of our north country what many expected to find by going elsewhere and developing other parts of Canada. There is too much paltry politics and too little grasp of our opportunities in this part of the county, at any rate, strange to say, it was impossible to get the city to take an interest in those matters. Of late years the Provincial Government has been called upon to do next to nothing for Peterborough (West Riding), although recently, I understand, it is improving in that regard. It must be remembered also that many people think the Cowan's bridge route a better one from all points of view than the Pigeon Lake bridge. There are influences at work against diverting traffic from its present lines of travel. The situation then with regard to this matter is this. So far as Ottawa goes, it can do nothing but look after the swing until that great measure, the Highways Bill, is put through the Senate. It is unquestionably the duty of the Provincial Government to take a more vital interest in these matters. Simply keeping a seat warm in any parliament is of no use to anybody but those who have interests of their own to serve. Deputations end in smoke, etc., unless men with a grasp of big questions rise up and do their duty. So far as I am concerned, I will do all I am able to do to promote a forward and comprehensive policy of development for the riding I represent at present. But we must try and cut, namely, painting old maid policies of doing nothing but waiting for something to turn up for personal advantage. As I write this I am under the influence of inoculation against typhoid, but I hope I have made myself clear.

Yours, etc.,

J. H. Burnham.

PRIZE DISTRIBUTION AT THE LAKEFIELD PREPARATORY SCHOOL

Among Those Present Were His Lordship Bishop Roper of Ottawa, Dr. Cameron, of Peterboro' and Others

LAKEFIELD PERSONALS

LAKEFIELD, June 28.—The annual closing and prize distribution of the Lakefield Preparatory School was held on Tuesday last at half past seven in the evening. A number of guests were present, though the state of the roads and the inclemency of the weather prevented a great many from a distance who otherwise would have been there. Among those present were His Lordship Bishop Roper and Mrs. Roper of Ottawa, Mr. Curry, Port Hope, Dr. Cameron, Peterborough, and Miss Sweny, Toronto.

The Rev. H. Brillen and Mrs. Brillen left on Wednesday last to spend the summer in Montreal.

Mrs. A. S. Butchard and family of Toronto, passed through the village on Thursday last on their way to Stony Lake to spend the summer at Viamede.

Master David Cumberland of Peterborough, is the guest of Master Kenneth Mackenzie at "The Grove."

Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Rogue and daughter of Lindsay, are guests of Mr and Mrs. E. H. Alford on Regent street.

Sergt.-Major Webster of the 136th Battalion, Barriefield, is spending a few days leave at his home in the village.

Mr. R. C. Strickland of Burleigh, spent a few days last week in the village.

Mrs. Curry of Port Hope, spent a few days last week in the village.

Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Lingwood of East Toronto, arrived on Wednesday to spend the summer in Lakefield and Stony Lake.

Mrs. McAdams and children of Montreal, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Fortier.

Miss Sweny of Toronto, was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie for a few days last week.

Mr. Earl Kidd of Belleville spent a few days last week in the village visiting his brother, Mr. A. J. Kidd.

Capt. Sherman Mahood of the 93rd Battalion, Barriefield, spent the week end at his home in the village.

The Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie left on a motor boat trip to Orillia on Thursday last.

Master Kenneth Mackenzie of the Royal Naval school, Halifax, arrived on Wednesday to spend the summer at Lochend, Stony Lake.

Capt. C. S. Carter of the 136th Battalion, Barriefield, is spending a few days' leave at his home in the village.

Mrs. G. R. Browning and Miss Margaret, of Peterborough, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Sawyer.

Canon Davidson of Peterborough, preached in St. John Baptist church on Sunday morning last.

Capt. T. B. Marling of the 93rd Battalion, who has been spending a few days' leave at his home here, returned to Barriefield on Monday.

Mrs. Cox and Master John are spending the summer in "The Grove Cottage."

Mr. Thompson Braden has purchased a new Ford car.

Mrs. M. E. Sanderson and Miss Clara of McLeod, Sask., are guests of Mr. Howard Sanderson in Smith.

Mrs. F. J. Jameson of Peterborough, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Sawyer on Clements street.

3 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeaux, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

PORT HOPE'S BIG DAY

Port Hope will observe the 49th anniversary of Dominion Day by a monster celebration on July 1st. A feature of the attraction will be the presentation of the colours to the 136th Battalion by Col. Hughes of Toronto. The afternoon programme will consist of horse races, baseball tournament, acts by four of the greatest lady acrobats on the continent, wrestling matches and all kinds of athletic sports. In the evening there will be a band concert, acrobatic stunts and a regular Vaudeville entertainment. Two bands numbering seventy-five pieces will furnish music during the day. Special, after evening performance, leaving at 10.30, for Peterborough.

CANADIANS HOLDING NEW FRONT NOW

Cable to the Militia Department Says All Ranks Have Been Busy in the New Area Recently Taken Over---Canucks Have Been Relieved After Glorious Stand at Ypres.

LONDON, June 27.—It is reported the Canadians have been taken out of the Ypres salient.

A cable to the Militia Department at Ottawa from the Canadian representative in the field to-day said: "During the past few days quieter conditions prevailed on our new front. All ranks have been busy settling down in the new area recently taken over."

It is quite to be expected that the Canadians, having again had their turn at saving the "bloody angle" of Ypres, the "road to Calais, the gateway to England," have been relieved and taken out for a rest. The salient which they have held so gloriously remains gloriously held by British troops.

Not Abandoned.

OTTAWA, June 27.—The Ypres salient has not been abandoned, and it is not going to be.

This has been made quite clear in the official communication from the War Office to Ottawa, and its subsequent promulgation here.

No word has been received at Ottawa that the Canadians have been withdrawn from their position, but it is quite probable as a temporary arrangement. Divisions take turns at different posts, and the Canadians having undergone very severe fighting, entailing heavy losses, they may be given a rest, or assigned to other portions of the line, particularly during the reorganization and the drafting of reinforcements. The salient will be held in any event, but the particular troops that will do it is a matter of arrangement by the British general staff. It is said here that it may vary from month to month. So far as Ottawa knows, however, our troops are there, or in the immediate vicinity.

Peterborough Nurse Describes Zepp Raid Over Salonika And Its Final Destruction

Miss Annie Doig, in a Letter Home Tells of the Serbian Troops and of the Mingled Races at the Allied Military Base in Greece.

Miss Anna Doig, nursing sister with the British Expeditionary force at Salonica, Greece, writes the following interesting letter:

No. 4 Canadian General Hospital, Salonica, Greece; 11-5-16

A few days ago I received your letters and was pleased to note you were all well. As for myself I am very fit and everything is fine. There has been some slight illness among the sisters but nothing very serious. Our assistant matron was operated on a few days ago for appendicitis but is doing well; our most serious case so far.

At present we are not very busy. For some time now we have expected to be transferred to the other side of Salonica and into huts, but as yet we remain here, though I think it is quite likely something definite will be done within the next two weeks. The huts are about completed and as the flies and mosquitos are getting rather bad now it will be necessary to do so.

There has been considerable activity around these parts recently. On the morning of the 5th a Zeppelin paid us an early visit and was brought to earth. About 2 a.m. it was sighted over the town, flying toward the harbor. Our powerful searchlights were quickly directed upon it and turn where it would and succeeded in holding it in their glare. A very few shells were fired for soon a well aimed shot hit the "Zepp". It then disappeared heading south.

In the meantime we had been wakened and proceeded to our dugouts, for the flying shrapnel is very dangerous, and at such times our camp is likely to come in for a certain sprinkling of it. The sky was brilliantly lighted by the searchlights and here and there incendiary shells were bursting. These shells look very pretty in the night sky, and are used for lighting purposes, but should they hit the "Zepp" would quickly set it on fire. It is the first time we have seen them used here and it proved a grand sight.

After things quieted down we went back to bed but had scarcely got to sleep when we heard bombs exploding. Shortly afterwards there was a loud explosion and immediately a great blaze appeared in the distance. We knew then the "Zepp' had been actually brought down.

CREW CAPTURED.

A party was sent out to inspect it and the crew were captured in the marsh the following morning, four officers and eight men. Two were found beneath the wreckage, making a total of fourteen. The captain of the Zeppelin, they say, wept bitterly. However he will have to 'content himself as best he can until the end of the war. The crew found it impossible to gain their frontier and after landing set the "Zepp" on fire, thinking to entirely destroy it. They succeeded fairly well. However two machine guns were found intact. I believe six engines were in fair condition. Some gruesome souvenirs were brought back, a shrivelled-up hand in a glove and others.

The "Zepp' is a debris of frame work, a heap of aluminum.

A sad fatality happened the morning the "Zepp" was brought down. Our Adjutant, Captain Yellowlees was drowned in the Vardar River. It is about twelve miles from our camp. Captain Yellowlees and Capt Wilson set out on horseback to view the wreck. The Vardar is narrow and has a swift current Captain Yellowlees attempted to ford the river not being able to swim and being a poor rider he was soon in the water. He came up only once. Capt. Wilson tried his best to save him but his efforts were fruitless. Search parties were sent out to try to find the body but so far they have not been successful.

Dr. Frederick is with No. 1 Canadian Stationary Hospital here in Salonica. He has been over to our camp a few times and is looking well. How are all my old acquaintances Remember me to them.

A great number just come down the line this morning. They will likely camp near Salonica. They looked very thin and fatigued but remarkably cheerful. They sang songs as they marched by, carrying their flag in the lead. They also had a remnant of a band which pealed forth every little while. When you consider what they have endured they looked very well indeed. They are anxious to get into action, and when they finally get an opportunity to face the Germans again. I think the retreating will be in the other direction, for they will fight to a finish then with the support of the French and British why shouldn't we win after all?

There is a great collection of uniforms in Salonica, British, French Serbians, Greeks, and the sailors from the fleet. The native costume of the Greeks with their little donkeys are very funny. With their donkeys and oxen they have "two speeds" walking and standing still.

The remainder of the letter is personal.

PTE. LLOYD MATHER HIT THREE TIMES

Otonabee Boy Tells of Counter Attack in Third Battle of Ypres —Germans Spotted Them as They Came Over Brow of a Hill.

TERRIFIC SHELL FIRE

PTE. LLOYD MATHER

Pte. Lloyd Mather, an Otonabee boy who was wounded in the third battle of Ypres has written to his sister giving some particulars of the manner in which he was wounded. Pte. Mather who is a son of Mr. W. T. Mather, Mather's Corners writes in part as follows:—

LONDON, June 11.—As this is the first day I have been able to use my right arm I will endeavour to drop you a few lines. I sent you a card as soon as I arrived in the hospital in France and there is no doubt you will be anxious to hear more about my misfortune. I suppose you read in the papers about the big scrap at Ypres and the cutting up the Canadians got. Well I happened to be one of the guys in that charge and it was not until the third wound that I fell. It was a daylight charge and just as we were rushing over the brow of a hill the Germans spotted us and believe me what they didn't send over wasn't worth sending. First a bullet caught me in the right shoulder but my equipment saved me that time. Then the order came to dig ourselves in and I got busy and just finished a hole into a coal box (that is a large shell) dropped close by me and the concussion drove me headlong into the hole and knocked the wind out of me. When I came to the shells were dropping thick all around me, and it was a lucky thing for me. I was close. If I had been further away I would have been torn to pieces with shrapnel. Well I looked adound for a safe place and crawled about fifty yards behind an old brick wall but was only there a few minutes when a shell caught me in the back. My chum was with me by this time and he put my first aid bandage around me but the shelling was so fierce I dare not go to the dressing station, which was about three quarters of a mile away so I had to lay there about four hours. About noon things were somewhat quiter and I took a chance and crawled about half a mile towards the dressing station, only to find the place crowded with wounded. My it was a terrible slaughter but old Frits suffered just as much if not more than we did.

I was taken to No. 25 General Hospital and was operated on and the doctor told me himself I was lucky to be alive as it was serious. I was only there four days as all cases that would take over six or seven weeks to cure were shipped to England. Of course, I was pleased to hear that as I wanted to get away from the noise of the guns.

There are forty in my ward here and you would be surprised to see how happy some of them are

Charges Must Be Prepaid

Local citizens are reminded that the Stoney Lake Navigation Company require prepayment of all charges on shipments transferred to them at Lakefield. This is an important point and should be kept in mind in sending stuff to Stoney Lake points.

McGILL CONSERVATORIUM MUSIC EXAMINATIONS

In the recent examinations conducted here Dr. Perrin of McGill, University, Peterborough students made an excellent showing. No less than ten were successful, a tribute to the painstaking tuition and ability of Mr. Geo. Kenyon, Organist and Choirmaster of Knox Church.

Aldermen's Notes To Engineer's Department Go Unheeded

Some of the Aldermen complain that the City Engineer's department pays not as much attention to their memoranda as does the German Chancellor to the Wilson notes. And that's not saying much for the receptivity of Mr. Person's department according to the general estimation of the success of the Wilson communications.

Ald. Edgar complained last night that the City Engineer had not taken the immediate steps that had been promised for draining Stewart Street north of Sherbrooke street. This was not an isolated case, he continued. No progress had been made with the plans for the C.P.R. bridge, although they should have been completed by this time. Nor was there any prospect of receiving them in the near future. Ald. Edgar said his patience was exhausted and there should be some explanation for the delay instead of continued disappointments.

Ald. Saunders asserted that nothing had been done on Westcott street near the Aylmer street corner. The proper grading of this section of the street had been promised one year ago.

Mayor Duffus mentioned several places on Rubidge street between Simcoe and Charlotte streets and intimated that similar conditions existed in different parts of the city. Mayor Duffus suggested that all complaints should be telephoned into the City Engineer's office.

Ald. Edgar—It's no use. I'm tired of telling the Engineer's Department. I don't want to find fault unreasonably with any department. I think in these cases reasonable time should be allowed for the work to be done, but when no motion is taken of requests repeatedly given it was time the Council acted in some way that would stir up the Department.

Ald. Dobbin proposed that four Aldermen might wait upon the Engineer and point out the importance of fulfilling these promises.

The Council defuted Mayor Duffus to interview Mr. Parsons and to arrange some method by which unnecessary delays will not arise in future.

Rev. Dean McColl Celebrated Silver Jubilee in Priesthood

Gathering of Clergy and Laity at the Church of the Immaculate Conception This Morning—Addresses and Two Presentations—Bishop O'Brien Added to Tributes.

15 YEARS SPENT IN PETERBOROUGH

Rev. Dean McColl, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, celebrated this morning the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination as a priest of the Catholic Church. Born in Wooler, Dean McColl first served as curate at Lindsay, was appointed parish priest at Ennismore, was rector of St. Paul's Cathedral, and finally was placed in charge of the new parish of the Immaculate Conception. Fifteen of Dean McColl's priestly years have been passed in this city, characterized by unswerving and undivided attention and devotion to the duties of his successive parishes and a watchful and jealous eye for the spiritual welfare of the people placed under his pastoral charge.

At 9 o'clock this morning Dean McColl sang high mass, with Rev. Dean Kelly of Trout Creek as deacon, and Rev. Father Phelan of the Cathedral as sub-deacon. Among the clergy present were Monsignor Murray of Cobourg, Monsignor Casey of Lindsay, and Rev. Fathers Kelly of Kingston, Peter McGuire of Ennismore, Bretherton of Hastings, Michael McGuire of Douro, Scanlon of Grafton, F. J. O'Sullivan of Port Hope, J. J. O'Brien of Peterborough, Galvin of Downeyville, McFadden of Wooler, Meagher of Lakefield, McCarthy of Norwood, McAuley of Peterborough, McGinnity of Parry Sound, McHugh and Scott of Peterborough.

Monsignor Casey of Lindsay preached the jubilee sermon, surveying the duties of the priesthood. The parish priest teaches souls to know God, to serve God, that they may be united with Him eternally. The speaker congratulated the jubilarian upon his anniversary and expressed the hope that he might be preserved for many years of continued service, and that when death came he might be received as a faithful servant of God.

TWO PRESENTATIONS.

At the conclusion of the mass the clergy gathered at the foot of the altar and on their behalf Mons. Murray read an address and Mons. Casey presented Dean McColl with a cheque donated by the priests of the diocese.

Following this tribute a number of the laymen proceeded to the sanctuary, where Mr. Jas. Drain read the following address, and Mr. Daniel Holland presented Dean McColl with a purse of gold. The address was as follows:

The Very Reverend Dean McColl.

The Catholic Laymen of Peterborough desire to avail themselves of the present happy occasion to express to Your Reverence the sentiments of gratitude and filial devotion which your many years of self-sacrificing labour in their midst have engendered. This has been the scene of your labours, and, in the service of God, we have been the objects of your solicitude. We have witnessed the unremitting zeal with which you have borne the burden of the day and the heat, we have seen the lofty purpose that has animated you from day to day and from year to year. We trust that our labour has not been expended upon barren soil. We assure you that at least it has been appreciated and has on all sides enkindled for you sentiments of the deepest gratitude and affection.

On this the twenty-fifth anniversary of your ordination we recall with pleasure the many and varied works which bear the imprint of your priestly exertions. Looking back upon the years of your sacredotal career we behold a beautiful vista of Christian accomplishments, to the adornment of which there is wanting not one of the Catholic virtues, not one of the priestly perfections. The young have been taught, the sick cared for, the erring helped, and the faithful encouraged, till, passing down the eventful years, we come to the splendid task in which we now find you engaged, the rearing of a new parish dedicated to the Immaculate Mother of God, and we trust that the Sanctuary Lamp which you have lit before this Altar will continue through future generations its steady glow of adoration before the Divine Presence. Truly the quarter century since your ordination has been crowded not only with good works, but with good results, and we feel ourselves privileged and particularly blessed to share in the fruits of your ardent priesthood. To carry on the torch of Faith has ever been the task of our devoted clergy, your predecessors have borne it aloft on every sea and shed its light in the wilderness of every continent, and not less worthy and not less difficult is the work of the clergy of our generation who keep the light tended and burning in its pristine splendor. And well has this trust been reposed in your reverence, whose stout heart and keen intellect are so pre-eminent among the many noble attributes with which you have been endowed.

The Catholic Laymen of Peterborough therefore, Reverend Father, add their voice to the many congratulations that are being showered upon you to-day and wish you many happy and successful years in the fulfilment of your priestly duties. We trust that you will accept this purse of gold in earnest of the esteem and affection in which you are held by those who have been the beneficiaries of your golden years.

Peterborough, June 28, 1916.

Deeply Appreciated.

Dean McColl was noticeably affected by the testimonials of the clergy and laity and in broken measures thanked them for their gifts, their kindly expressions and their attendance at the jubilee mass. Twenty-five years was a long period to look back over, but he hoped he would be spared for many years to come.

Bishop O'Brien conveyed his congratulations to Rev. Dean McColl stating that he could bear testimony of the excellence of his life. He had been zealous and enthusiastic for the cause of good. In his life and labour he had been the embodiment of what St. Paul spoke of as a man of God. Bishop O'Brien referred to the intimate relations of Dean McColl in the life of Peterborough and to his activities in the erection of new buildings and additions to others. His Lordship expressed the hope that God would spare Dean McColl for many years to come and would bless him and his work.

Presentation To Miss A. Lazure

Miss Amelia Lazure of 554 Romaine street who left this afternoon with her sister Mrs. (Dr.) W. A. Pinto for Sioux City, Iowa., where she will reside in future was the guest of honour at a farewell party held at the home of Miss L. Gosselin last night. During the evening Miss Lazure was presented with a handsome club bag and the following address:—

Dear Friend Amelia,—Having learned of your intentions of leaving the city we who have so long associated with you, desire that this occasion should not pass without our giving some expression to the feelings we entertain towards you and the high esteem in which we hold you. That your presence will be greatly missed that the absence of your amiable disposition your kind words and your pleasant company will be felt by all is a fact that our words only too feebly express. During the time we have spent with you, your many estimable qualities have endeared you to us and we sincerely hope that you will always look back with pleasure upon the days we have spent with you. Now as you are about to leave our midst and that you may have something to remind you of former days we ask you to accept this club bag as a token of our friendship and a tangible proof of the esteem in which we hold you.

Baby Lions With Big Show

Baby lions romp in the wild animal department of the La Tena's Show, which will exhibit in Peterborough Wednesday, July 12. These wild young creatures, it is promised, prove one of the most fascinating exhibits of this great travelling zoo.

Born on June 3rd while the big amusement institution was showing in Welland, Ont., a more appropriate day could not have been chosen for the birth of the lions. They have been named King George and Victoria. As a rule lions do not breed well in captivity. Three cubs are having their first show experience, and seem to enjoy it. They are all handsome specimens of the King of the Forest. They display little or no savageness or treachery, with sturdy, tawney little bodies, thick heavy paws, straight tails and remarkably well-shaped heads. There was one that the mother refused to nurse, so the animal keeper substituted an Irish Setter dog for a few days to care for the little outcast. The baby's strength was in no way impaired and now the mother seems to care more for that one than the others. Lion cubs are the most playful of any wild animal. They are among the first of any wild animal born in captivity to show their hatred of mankind. These cunning little fellows are just 30 days old when they reach Peterborough on July 12. The mother's love and keen devotion is remarkable to see.

Between 6,000 and 7,000 boys are employed at Woolwich Arsenal. Many straight from school earn 20s. to 25s. and some from sixteen to eighteen years of age as much as £3 a week.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By John W. S. McCullough, M.D., D.P.H., Chief Officer of the Provincial Board of Health

The Board comprises a chairman and six other members, of whom the Chief Officer is executive officer and who in the absence of the other members of the Board carries on with his assistants the work of the Board. There is a Chief Inspector, and the Province is divided into seven districts, to each of which there is assigned a District Officer especially trained to give advice and assistance to the Medical Officers of Health in the various municipalities in the Province. As Ontario comprises some 400,000 square miles it will be seen that each officer has a large territory to cover. He cannot be every place at once, but every call on his services that seems necessary is cheerfully responded to at the earliest possible date. In addition to the measure of publicity through the press the Board maintains a public health and moving picture exhibit which is pretty well-known throughout the country since it has been shown one or more times in nearly every town of importance throughout the Province. The demand for the exhibit is very great, and it is impossible to cover the entire territory every season. However, requests for the use of the exhibit are responded to in turn.

PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH ORGANIZATION.

In addition to the exhibit as a method of public health education the Board issues pamphlets upon various subjects, for example: upon all the different communicable diseases, sewage disposal in country homes and schools, the care of the baby, mosquitoes and flies, etc., etc. The writer will be glad to send copies free upon application.

MEASLES.

This is perhaps the most contagious of all the so-called diseases of childhood. It comes on like a common cold with watering eyes and running nose, and four days after the onset of these symptoms there is usually a profuse dark red rash, beginning usually on the face and extending all over the body. The most contagious period is probably just before and during the continuance of the rash. The quarantine period is three weeks, and a person from a family where the disease exists should not return to school for sixteen days after the last exposure.

The Medical Officer of Health may allow persons from the quarantined house not attending school or engaged in the manufacture of food or clothing to leave their homes for business providing they carry out his directions.

Measles is looked upon by the majority of people as a simple children's disease carrying little danger, and for this reason these cases are treated in the home, and no doctor is called in. Many cases too are very mild, and many recover promptly. Some people seem to look upon quarantine for a disease like measles, scarlet fever, or diphtheria as a disgrace or an inconvenience, and hide the facts of its existence in their homes instead of, as they are required by law to do, at once notifying the Medical Officer of Health, and send their children back to school before they are well. In this way they do an injustice to their neighbour's children, and often as the result of what is criminal negligence spread disease broadcast. Not only this, but in frequent instances they do their own children a lifelong injury by exposing them to the danger of bronchitis or pneumonia, ear and eye troubles, from which they may never recover.

But is the disease a simple one? By no means. More deaths occur from measles as a rule than from diphtheria and scarlet fever combined.

Physicians who know what they are talking about tell us that measles lays the foundation of many cases of pulmonary tuberculosis, which is known and dreaded by most people.

FLIES.

The spring brings back our old friend—or rather enemy—the house fly. The house fly breeds in manure, especially fresh manure, and takes about eleven days to attain full growth. Each fly lays ???? eggs, so if this insect is given fair play she thrives immensely. There is no use in any civilized, or heathen, or any community for the fly. All should unite and make eternal war against her. All sorts of diseases are carried by the fly, why not? She travels directly from filth of all kinds to one's food. How could she help but carry disease? Have you ever seen the "Movie" illustrating the growth and habits of this enterprising insect? If not, you should look up the Ontario Health Exhibit in the Dominion Building of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and learn at first hand the natural history of the house fly. Then you'll go home and put screens on your windows and doors and make the good man build a manure box at the back of the lot. No manure no flies.

THE SCARLET CROSS

At midnight I was waiting for a train in a little English town, all life was asleep. From the station I could see the houses of the village, all in darkness with the moon on the thatched roofs. In all the village there was no sound, no movement; the day's work was done and each little house was resting peacefully after the small commonplaces of living had been achieved.

It was difficult to realise that those people were at war, that in those little thatched houses there were men and women who were daily making their sacrifices, each day paying the toll in suffering and in courage. Yet the little village at midnight, with the moon watching over it, seemed to be mysteriously protected and set apart; peace alone seemed supreme there.

Suddenly a train thundered into the station—a train of open truck filled with coal—coming from out of the darkness and going into the mysterious world beyond. This train with its coal which gleamed a crystaline blue and black under the dim lights overhead seemed to link this mysterious village in the valley with the great outside world. Other trains came and went, like mysterious creatures, lighting the way with a yellow gleam from the fire-box and truning the smoke into a column of gold. Sometimes the station-master would come out and talk to the driver, standing beside the footboard swinging his red lantern, then the train would pass on, and silence fall again. Certainly the little village with the thatched roofs was taking part in the affairs of the world. Finally the last goods' train came and passed by, and the stationmaster went into his little office and closed his door.

I looked out over the village again, the darkness of the night had deepened, the moon was sinking and its slanting rays produced long shadows which only intensified the mystery, the peace and the security which marked that small village and seemed to set it apart from the war. While dreaming over this peaceful scene, another train had come quietly in on the other side of the station. It moved slowly past with a white plume of smoke reaching back over the coaches. It went smoothly, this train and silently. There was no sound but the even turning of the wheels. It was like a train from some other world. No one took heed of its passing; there were no signals and no lights.

But it carried a precious cargo. Its carriages were painted white and on each carriage there was a great Red Cross. The real meaning of these scarlet crosses seemed to impress one as they never had before. I thought of the men lying in those dim compartments of their home-coming and their friends. The great red crosses seemed emblems of all that is brave and courageous in our men. I watched the white train until the last carriage disappeared into the darkness.

In due time my train arrived and I came again to London. At that hour it seemed a city unknown. In the big station, where hundreds of people hurry, each eagerly bent on his own quest, I found only the men at the gates and the porters waiting outside. The windows of the booking office were closed; the newstands had their shutters drawn and the grey trucks in an orderly row against the wall, cast long shadows on the floor. Here, as in the little village of the thatched roofs, the work of the day was over.

However, despite the emptiness of the great station the work of war was not done, for in one of the big sheds, the wounded train had come in, after its long slow journey from the coast. In the two forward coaches the big centre doors were open and a narrow gangway led to the platform. A long file of gray ambulances were waiting on one side and stretchers covered with dark blankets were in a row on the platform.

There were few people taking part in the task of moving the great train load of wounded men. Only some orderlies in blue uniforms and dark puttees, and some nurses with deep bands of red on their grey coats. The orderlies carried the stretchers down the narrow gangways and walking very slowly and lifted them into the ambulances. Then the gangway was moved to the next compartment and a new ambulance came into position by the gates.

There was no talking; there were no orders; there was no sound but the quiet humming of the motors and the turning of the wheels on the roadway.

This moving of men who had paid the price of war was simple and purposeful, but there was tenderness and pity in it too. Each one of those burdens covered over with its blanket was infinitely pitiful and helpless. They looked very unlike men—those shapeless covered things with the blue pale light of the station falling over them.

And so, one by one the ambulances were filled and the white doors of the ambulance cars were closed. Last of all the gangways were carried away and the last ambulance rolled slowly out under the black roof. The empty ambulance train remained and the scarlet cross was very clear and crimson.

I went out into the dark street where my taxi was waiting and I passed through the dark silent streets and past the tall dark houses of London. It was very still. There was the same silence and the same tranquility as there was at the little thatched village in the valley.

The secret of this war, that in the little village and in London there was no doubt, no misgiving and the red crosses, the colour of blood, were the symbol of England's faith and courage.

Questions Economy Of Street Sweeper

Members of the Council Are Not So Certain That the City is Not Going to Lose Rather Than Save

Members of the Council hedging slightly from the idea that prevailed a short time ago that the Dustless Sweeping Company's scheme is a real economy. The economy feature is not conspicuous like, for instance, a certain khaki uniform of recent preening. In fact several of the Aldermen are not quite certain that they can find a saving of money by this scheme ever after diligent examination. Ald. Weir observes that the city is paying $130 a week for this service whereas he was told, on good authority so he says, that the work previously cost the city only $134.

Mayor Duffus remarked that Street Commissioner Evans had reported that the city would pay the company more than previously.

Ald. Stratton recalled the high sounding prospectus presented to the Council that the work would cost $12 a day and the company desired only a small profit to provide for interest and overhead expenses. He felt that since the matter of economy was under question it might be gone into more fully.

The city may terminate the contract at any time.

Ald. Weir stated that the sweeper had run two hours one day and had then laid up for repairs. And the cost as he figure it was $27.40 a day.

That was as far as the Council went with the discussion for the present.
